EDITOR'S NOTE

WAITING FOR A CALL

We struggled with the headline for the cover of this issue. Initially, we were considering THE SAD SAGA OF DAVID CLYDE, but that seemed too strong for the Clyde story. So we went with our second option.

After all, he reached the major leagues just weeks after his high school season ended in 1973 and won his major league debut. None of that is sad. His five-year major league career didn't turn out the way Clyde wanted it to, nor did it turn out the way the Texas Rangers were hoping it would when they made him the No. 1 overall pick in the 1973 MLB Draft. But Clyde – as mishandled as he was from the outset – did pitch in the big leagues. Which is more than most can say.

What is sad is the fact that Clyde, who just turned 70, remains 37 days shy of qualifying for a full MLB pension. Thirty-seven days! It would mean the world to Clyde to earn that service time with a major league team as a bullpen coach, pitching guru, whatever. Who wouldn't want to hear from a lefthander who once was the most popular player in Texas Rangers history, and who lived (and learned) through an extremely difficult start to his big-league career.

So far he's still waiting for opportunity to knock.

Here's hoping Clyde finds those 37 days somewhere and he receives a full MLB pension. It seems like an easy fix, but he needs a chance.

Just 37 days . . .

After more than a year of no reported sales of a 1909-11 T206 Honus Wagner, two are hitting the market in the first half of 2025.

First, Mile High Auctions offered a card it first sold in August 2023 for $1.9 million. The Authentic (Restored) Wagner headlined MHCC's April 2025 catalog auction, and while the final sale price came more than a week after the deadline of this issue of Beckett Collector, the card already had topped $825,000 in bids.

In March, Ken Goldin announced a T206 Wagner PSA 1 would be offered in a sale that begins May 21. That card has been called "the Connecticut Wagner" because the card came from a complete T206 set sold at a Connecticut card show. That same card sold for $282,000 in 2010 by REA.

SATCHEL PAIGE FINAL MLB CONTRACT

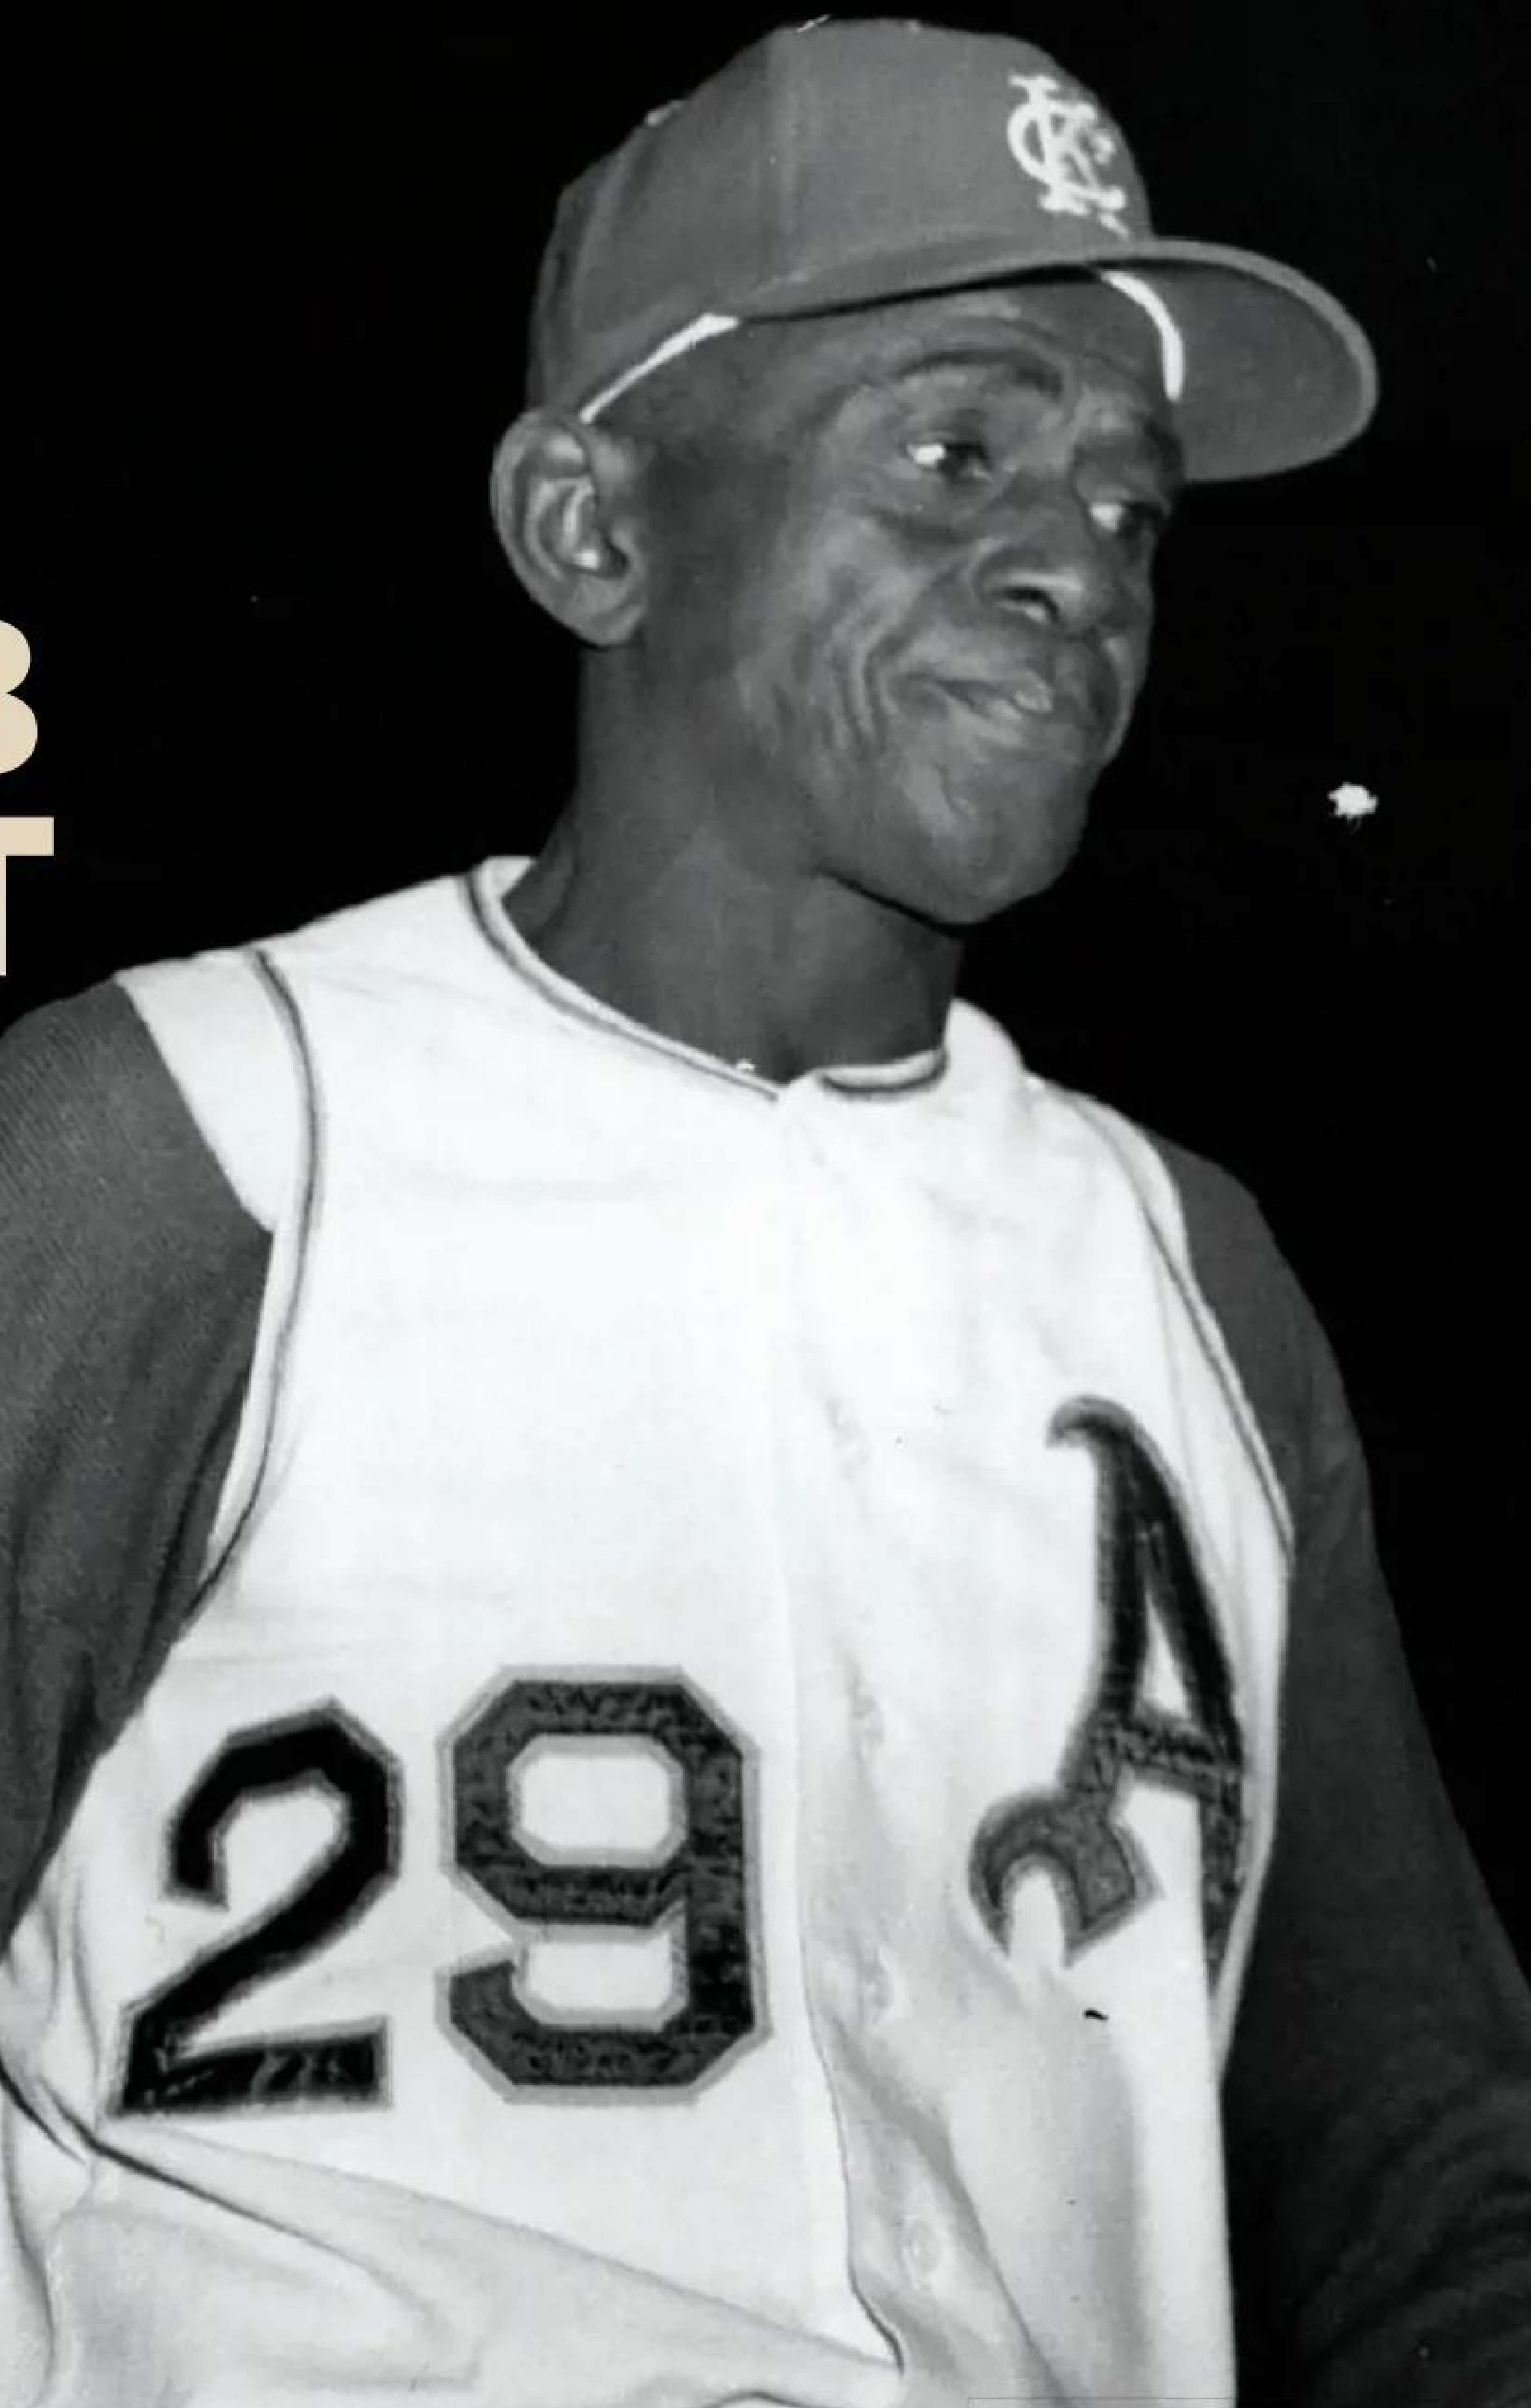
(SCP AUCTIONS)

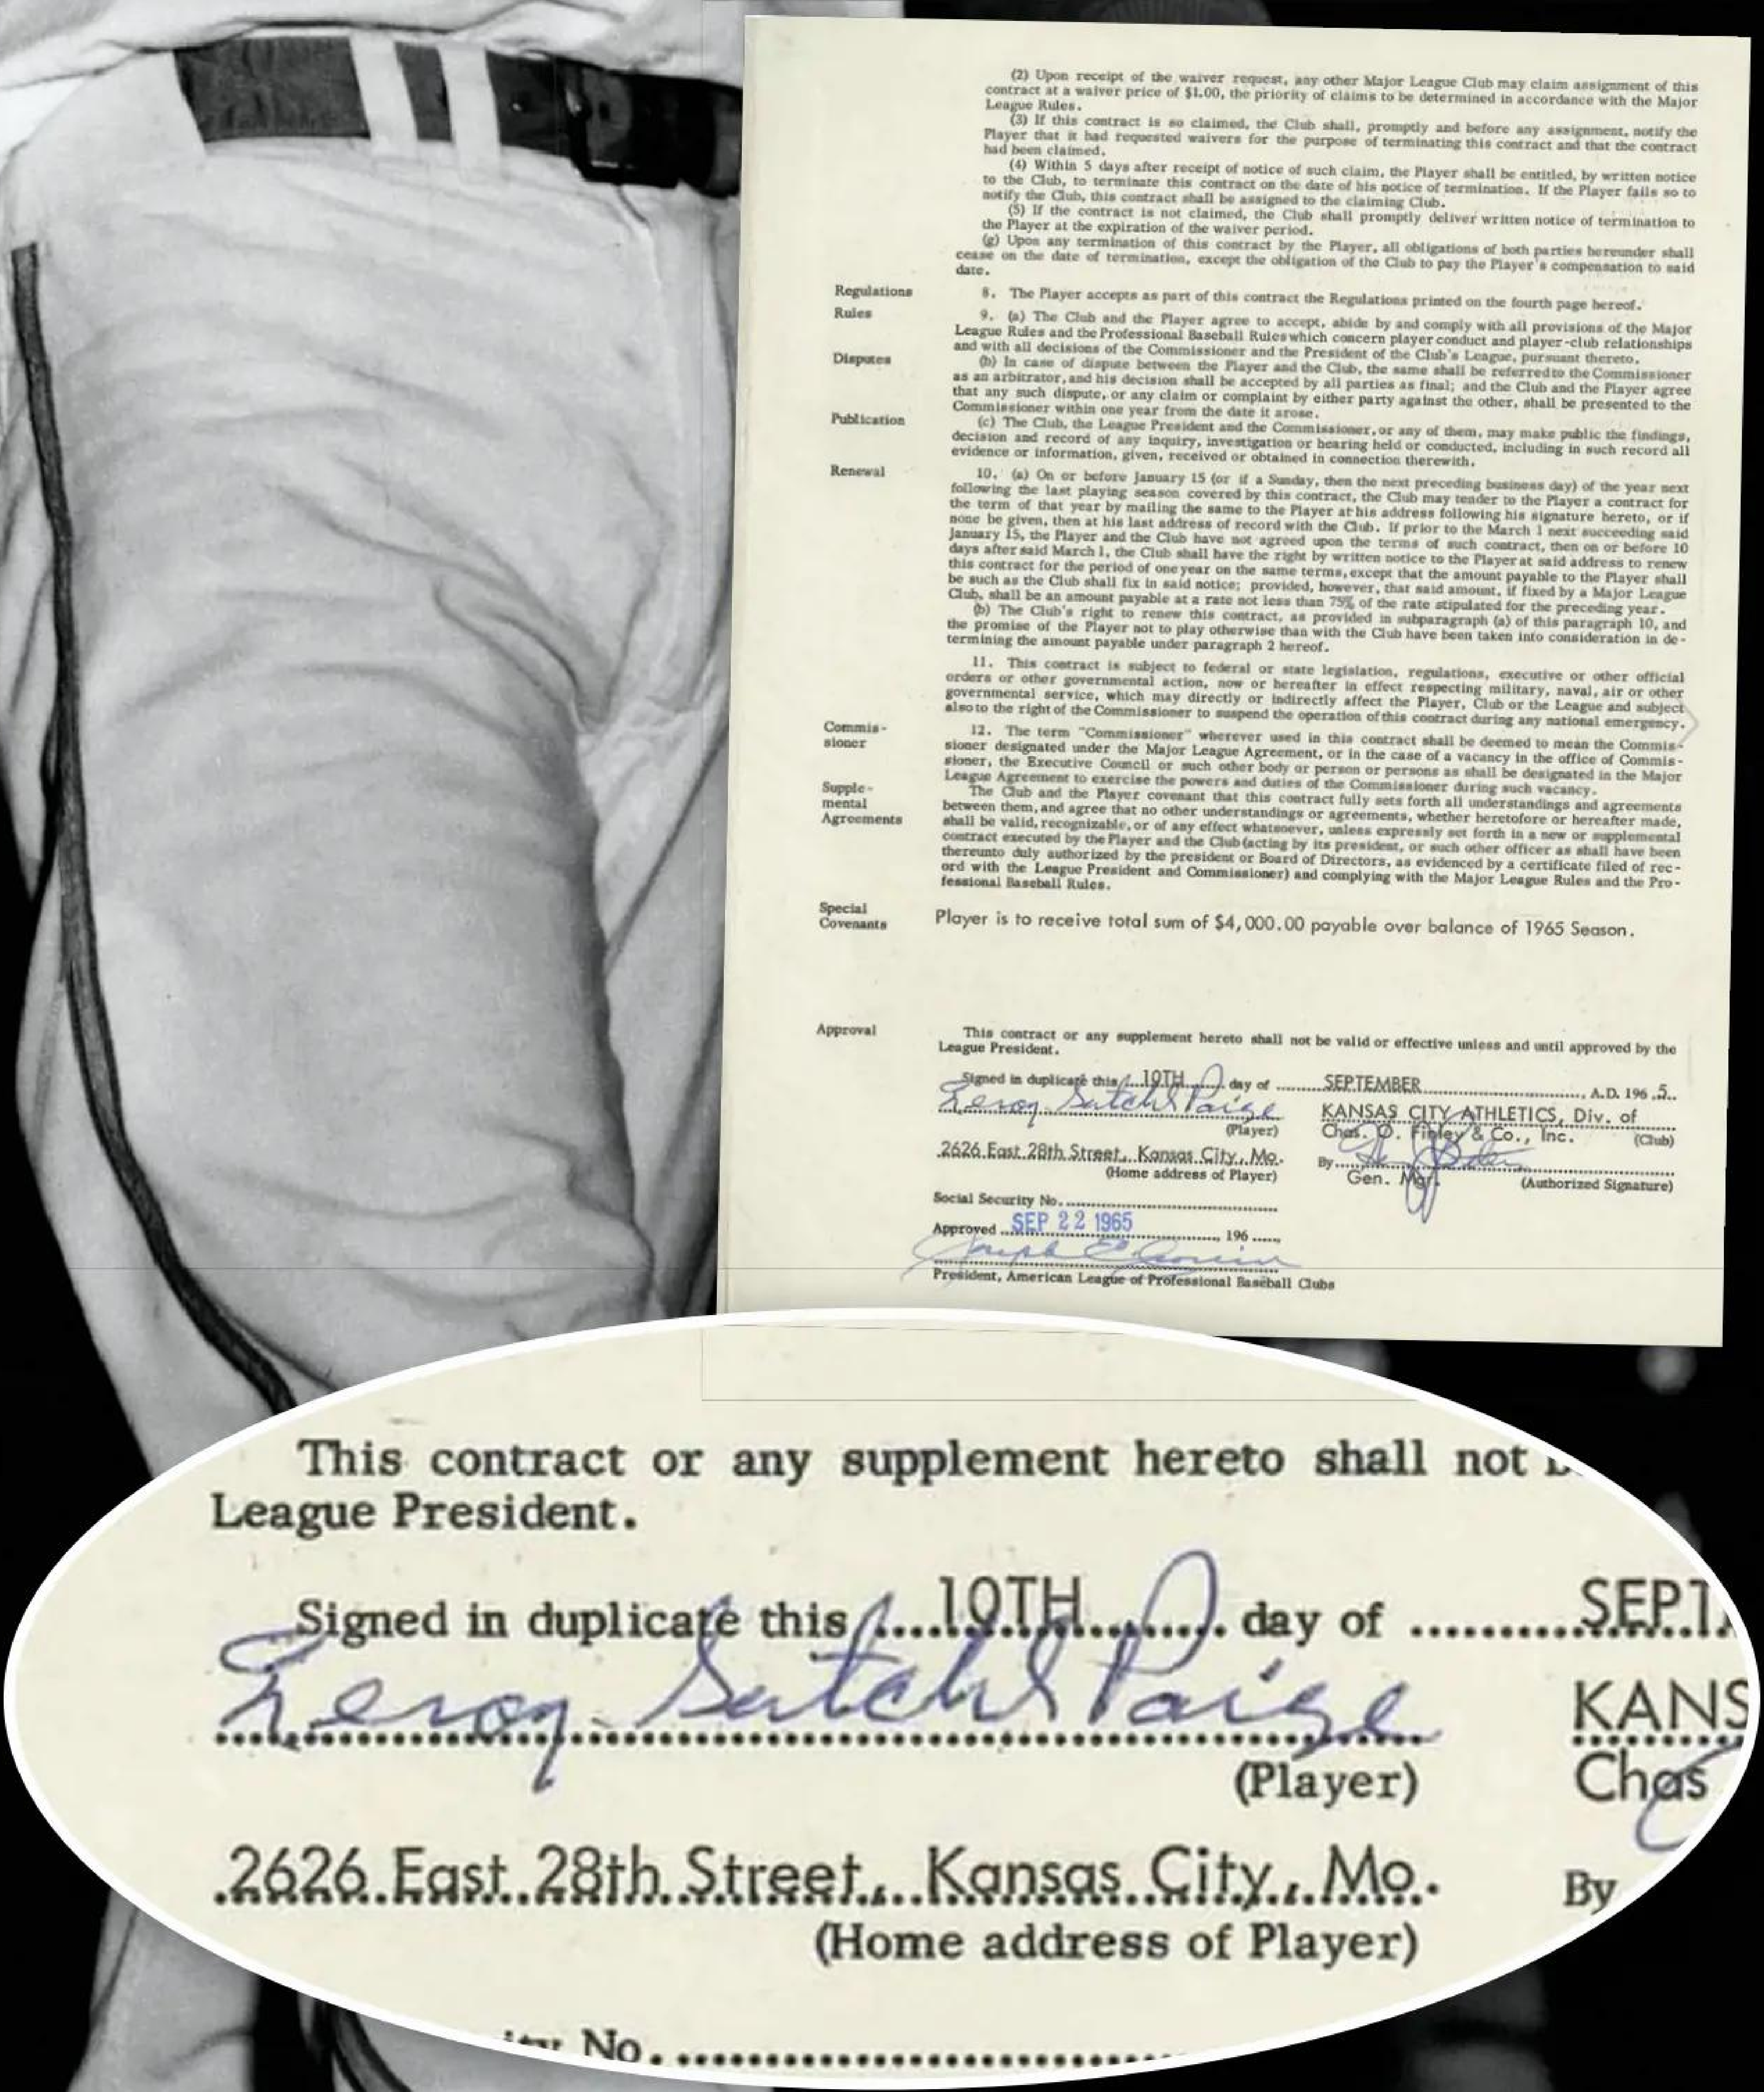


This is a unique piece, to be sure. The final MLB contract of Satchel Paige, signed clearly in blue ink by the Hall of Famer and calling for a salary of $4,000 to be paid by the Kansas City Athletics over the course of the 1965 season.

Paige, 59 that season, became the oldest player to appear in a major league game and remains so.

"This is the only Satchel Paige player contract we have ever handled," wrote SCP. "In fact, research indicates that it's his only official MLB player contract known to exist. (In 2015, it auctioned for $48,000.) There is no record of any Paige signed player contract surviving from that period. All that has surfaced are those from the Negro Leagues, Puerto Rican Winter Ball or barnstorming."

The contract sold for $66,000 in April 2025 and came with Letter of Authenticity from PSA/DNA.



(2) Upon receipt of the waiver request, any other Major League Club may claim assignment of this contract at a waiver price of $1.00, the priority of claims to be determined in accordance with the Major League Rules.

(3) If this contract is so claimed, the Club shall, promptly and before any assignment, notify the Player that it had requested waivers for the purpose of terminating this contract and that the contract had been claimed.

(4) Within 5 days after receipt of notice of such claim, the Player shall be entitled, by written notice to the Club, to terminate this contract on the date of his notice of termination. If the Player fails so to notify the Club, this contract shall be assigned to the claiming Club.

(5) If the contract is not claimed, the Club shall promptly deliver written notice of termination to the Player at the expiration of the waiver period.

(g) Upon any termination of this contract by the Player, all obligations of both parties hereunder shall cease on the date of termination, except the obligation of the Club to pay the Player's compensation to said date.

Regulations

8. The Player accepts as part of this contract the Regulations printed on the fourth page hereof.

Rules

9. (a) The Club and the Player agree to accept, abide by and comply with all provisions of the Major League Rules and the Professional Baseball Rules which concern player conduct and player-club relationships and with all decisions of the Commissioner and the President of the Club's League, pursuant thereto.

Disputes

(b) In case of dispute between the Player and the Club, the same shall be referred to the Commissioner as an arbitrator, and his decision shall be accepted by all parties as final; and the Club and the Player agree that any such dispute, or any claim or complaint by either party against the other, shall be presented to the Commissioner within one year from the date it arose.

Publication

(c) The Club, the League President and the Commissioner, or any of them, may make public the findings, decision and record of any inquiry, investigation or hearing held or conducted, including in such record all evidence or information, given, received or obtained in connection therewith.

Renewal

10. (a) On or before January 15 (or if a Sunday, then the next preceding business day) of the year next following the last playing season covered by this contract, the Club may tender to the Player a contract for the term of that year by mailing the same to the Player at his address following his signature hereto, or if none be given, then at his last address of record with the Club. If prior to the March 1 next succeeding said January 15, the Player and the Club have not agreed upon the terms of such contract, then on or before 10 days after said March 1, the Club shall have the right by written notice to the Player at said address to renew this contract for the period of one year on the same terms, except that the amount payable to the Player shall be such as the Club shall fix in said notice; provided, however, that said amount, if fixed by a Major League Club, shall be an amount payable at a rate not less than 75% of the rate stipulated for the preceding year.

(b) The Club's right to renew this contract, as provided in subparagraph (a) of this paragraph 10, and the promise of the Player not to play otherwise than with the Club have been taken into consideration in determining the amount payable under paragraph 2 hereof.

11. This contract is subject to federal or state legislation, regulations, executive or other official orders or other governmental action, now or hereafter in effect respecting military, naval, air or other governmental service, which may directly or indirectly affect the Player, Club or the League and subject also to the right of the Commissioner to suspend the operation of this contract during any national emergency.

Commissioner

12. The term "Commissioner" wherever used in this contract shall be deemed to mean the Commissioner designated under the Major League Agreement, or in the case of a vacancy in the office of Commissioner, the Executive Council or such other body or person or persons as shall be designated in the Major League Agreement to exercise the powers and duties of the Commissioner during such vacancy.

Supplemental Agreements

The Club and the Player covenant that this contract fully sets forth all understandings and agreements between them, and agree that no other understandings or agreements, whether heretofore or hereafter made, shall be valid, recognizable, or of any effect whatsoever, unless expressly set forth in a new or supplemental contract executed by the Player and the Club (acting by its president, or such other officer as shall have been thereunto duly authorized by the president or Board of Directors, as evidenced by a certificate filed of record with the League President and Commissioner) and complying with the Major League Rules and the Professional Baseball Rules.

Special Covenants

Player is to receive total sum of $4,000.00 payable over balance of 1965 Season.

Approval

This contract or any supplement hereto shall not be valid or effective unless and until approved by the League President.

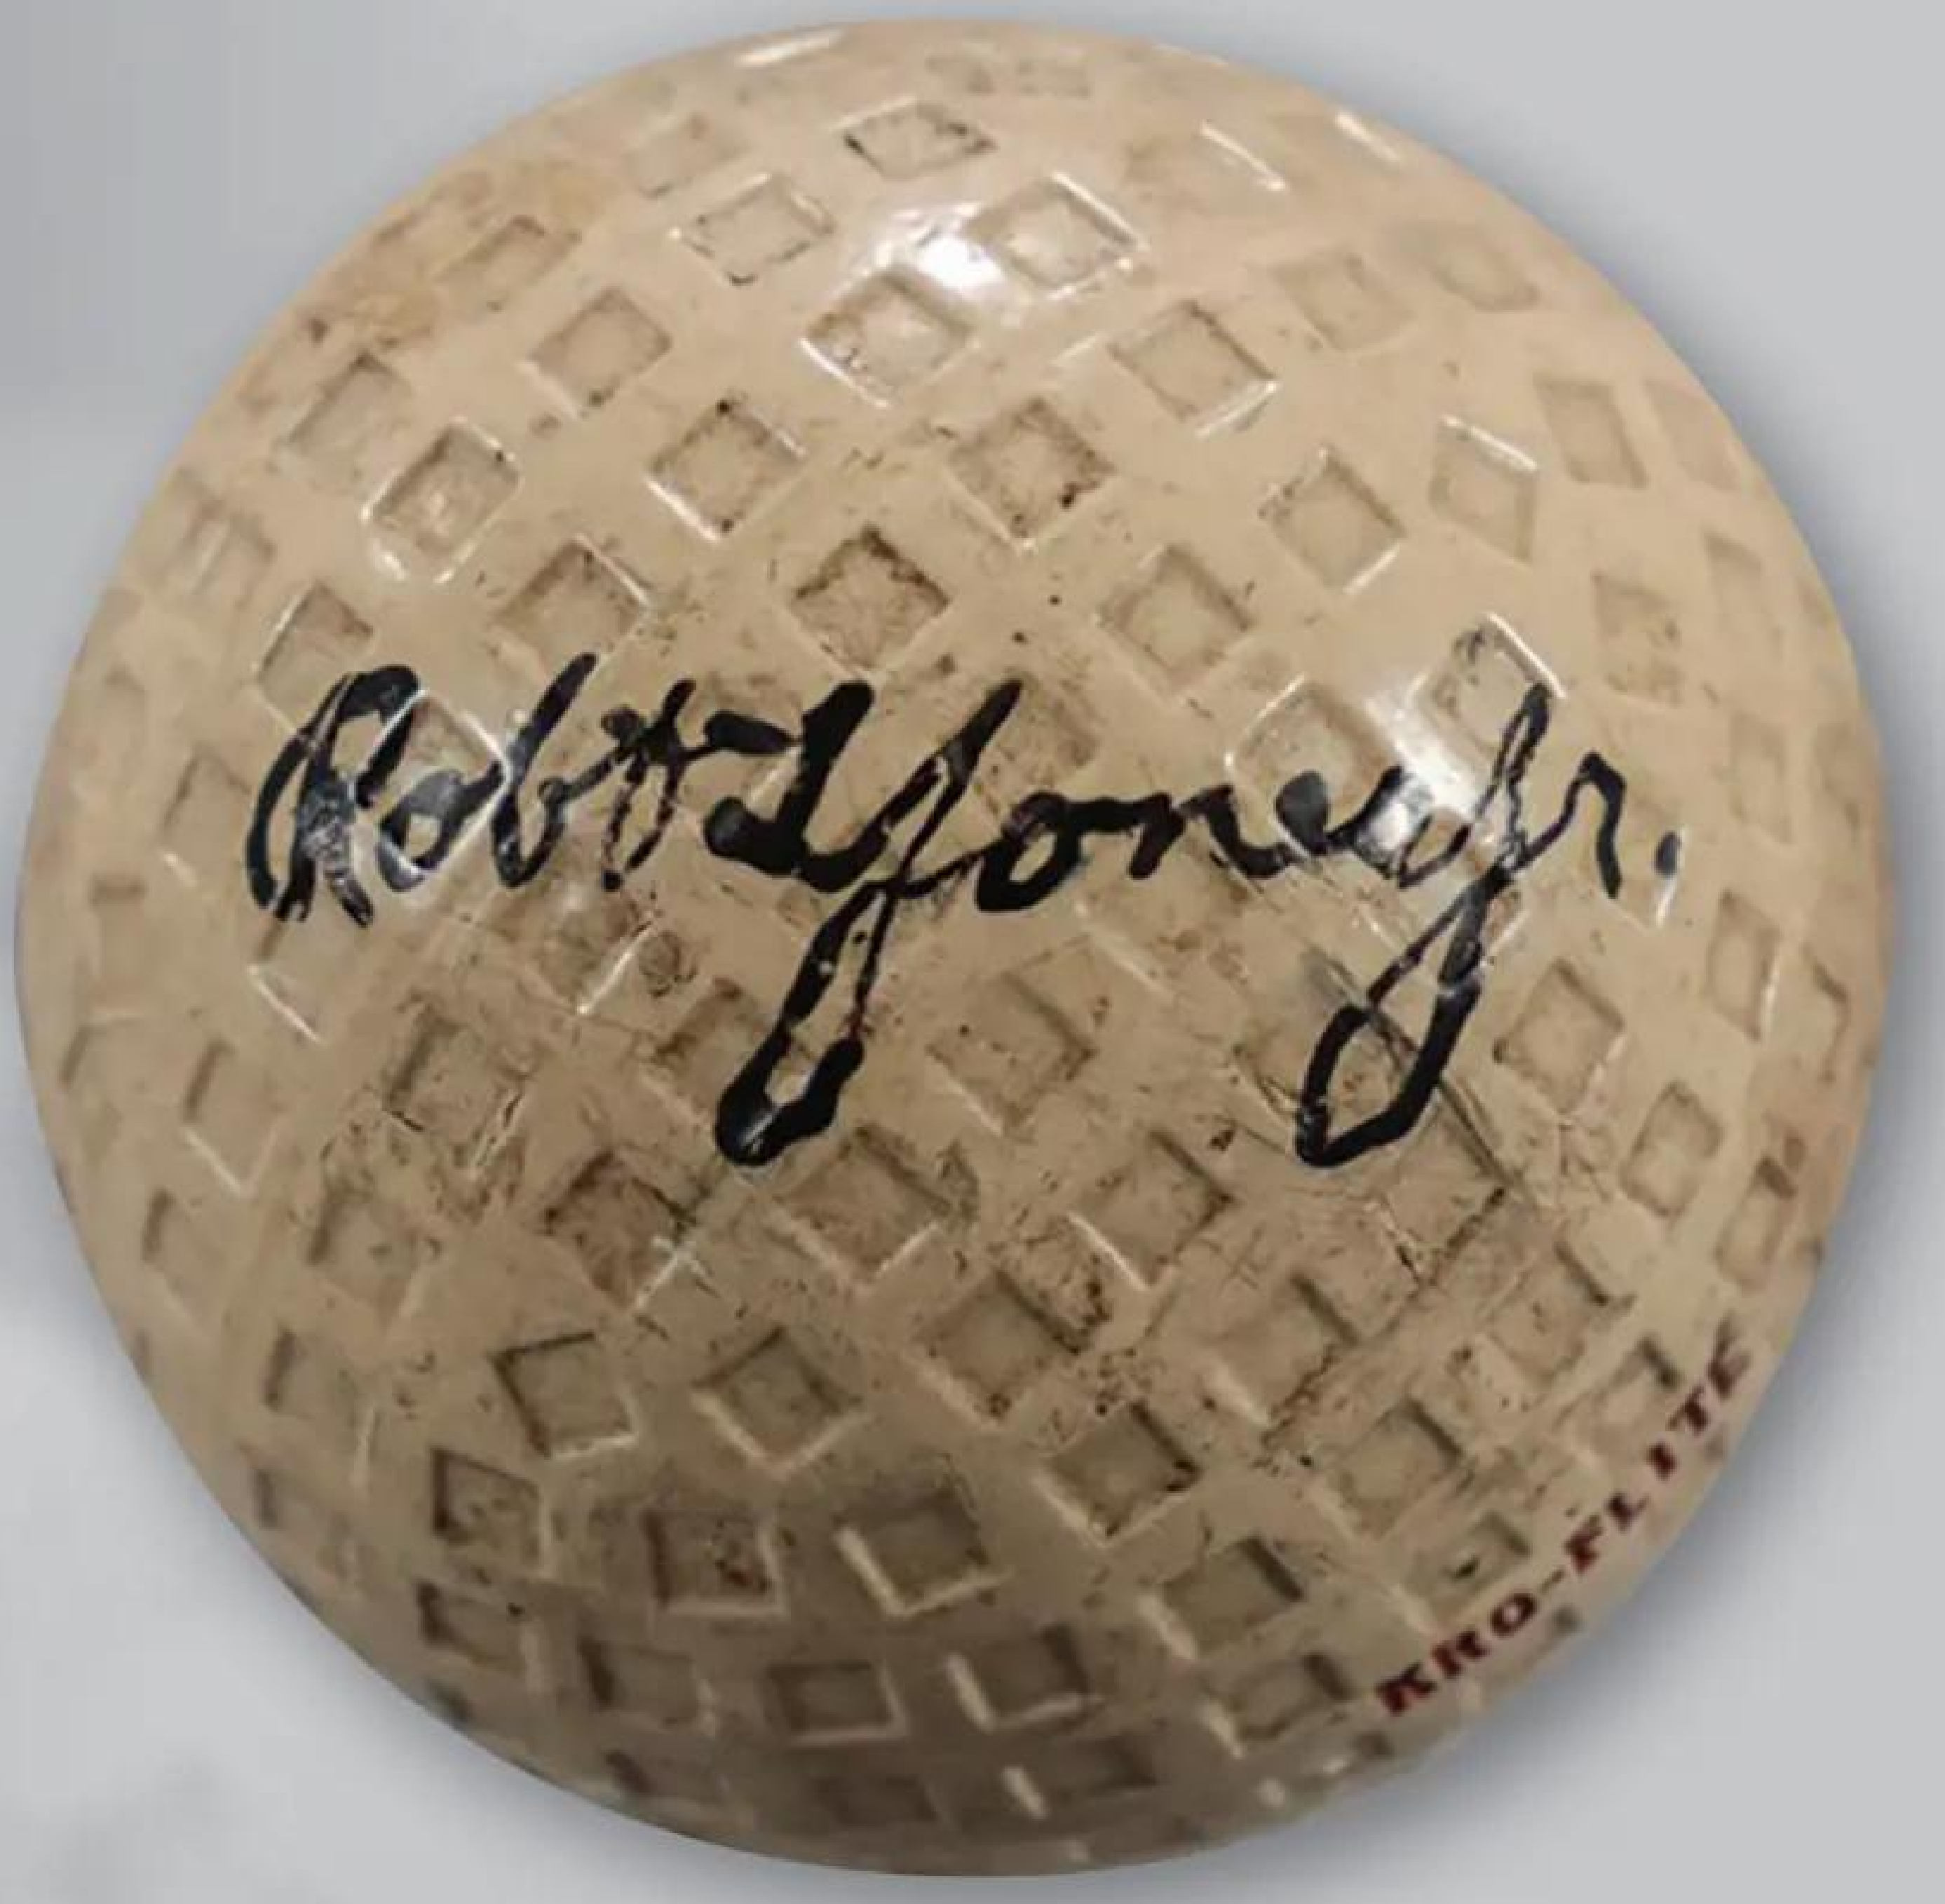
“Finest” Bobby Jones Autographed Golf Ball

$124,962 (GOLDEN AGE AUCTIONS)



Signing a golf ball can’t be easy, not with the relatively small surface to sign. Yet Bobby Jones had no problem signing this one.

The ball sold for an eye-popping $124,962 in Golden Age’s 2025 Masters Auction.

As written by Golden Age in the auction description: “Over the years we have identified exactly 3 Bobby Jones autographed golf balls that exhibit very little to no fading. And with no disrespect to those other 2 examples (one sold for $55,875 in our April 2011 Auction), the Bobby Jones ball in this lot is unquestionably the finest autographed Bobby Jones golf ball in existence.”

1909-11 T206 Hindu Red Ty Cobb (Red Portrait) PSA 4

$317,200 (HERITAGE)

This Hindu back blazer has a PSA pop report of just six – with none higher.

The card sold for $317,200 in Heritage Auctions' March 2025 Catalog Auction.

As noted by Heritage: "Though the red background portrait is the most plentiful of the four Cobb variants within the set, it is the extraordinarily scarce red "Hindu" advertising back that elevates the presented specimen into the most rarified of collecting air."

Heritage had sold a PSA 4 copy of the Cobb Red Hindu back for $126,000 in 2019.

The Peck & Snyder trade card was encapsulated as Authentic. There were two sizes of this traded card produced, and this is the larger version. Just seven of the larger cards have been graded by PSA, each receiving the Authentic designation.

The Peck & Snyder card is considered one of the very first baseball cards produced, its historical significance confirmed in the final sale price.

RUN TO WIN

The ultimate Super Bowl collectible sold for $72,000 in a recent SCP Auction, the third time Ray Nitschke's Super Bowl II ring has been sold in the past 12 years – each time it was sold by SCP.

Nitschke's large size 14.5 ring (weighing 48 grams) is in outstanding condition and originally came directly from the Nitschke estate. It had previously sold for $91,150 in 2013 and $121,323 in 2020. The Packers hammered the Oakland Raiders 33-14 in the game, and Nitschke led the Packers defense with nine tackles.

The 1889 Old Judge N172 set features several different cards of Hall of Fame catcher Buck Ewing. There's a batting pose, a throwing pose, a sliding pose and one of Buck standing next to the team mascot.

But it's this "walking" pose that attracts the most attention as it's considered by advanced collectors as one of the rarer poses of all the Ewing cards in the series. Like so many others from this set, the image has lightened but still carries a PSA 4 VG-EX designation.

The card sold for $3,960 in a March 2025 REA auction.

Clyde meets with the media after his major league debut June 27, 1973.

THE METEORIC RISE AND FALL OF DAVID CLYDE

Texas schoolboy legend David Clyde may have saved baseball in Arlington. But the cost was devastating.

Perhaps in an alternate reality, the summer of 2025 would mark the 50th anniversary of the major league debut of Hall of Fame pitcher David Clyde.

In this parallel universe, one that values long-term gain over short-sighted greed, Clyde did not swap his senior prom rental tux for a Texas Rangers uniform. Instead, he spent a couple of seasons in the minors before going on to become the most celebrated southpaw since Sandy Koufax.

Regrettably, Clyde's real timeline was more cautionary tale than fairy tale — no happy ending in Cooperstown, only a bittersweet beginning in Arlington, Texas.

The 50th anniversary of Clyde's actual debut happened two summers ago on June 27, 2023. A half-century earlier, the 18-year-old schoolboy sensation from Houston made his first appearance at Arlington Stadium just 22 days after becoming the No. 1 overall pick in the 1973 draft.

The Rangers marked the anniversary by honoring Clyde before a game at Globe Life Field against the Detroit Tigers. Once the region's most famous Clyde since Bonnie's sinister sidekick, to borrow a line from Dallas-Fort Worth writer Richie Whitt, the man of the hour was now a 68-year-old grandfather recovering from his fifth shoulder surgery and unable to throw out the ceremonial first pitch.

Younger fans attending that game who weren't steeped in Rangers history must have wondered what all the fuss was about for a pitcher who earned only seven big-league wins in five seasons with the organization.

Tom Grieve, more steeped in Rangers history than anyone on Earth, tried to explain the significance of Clyde's 1973 debut and the far-reaching impact it had on a floundering franchise with a disinterested fan base. "You couldn't argue with someone that said that's the greatest moment in Ranger history," Grieve told CBS Texas in June 2023.

Grieve's statement, much like Clyde's career, proved to be short-lived. Four months after that interview, the Rangers beat the Arizona Diamondbacks in five games to capture the club's first World Series championship.

Another comment from Grieve, who was Clyde's teammate and later the general manager and longtime broadcaster for the Rangers, still holds up. Asked in 2023 what he thought about the team's decision to rush Clyde straight to the majors, he told the Dallas Observer: "It was the dumbest thing you could ever do to a high school pitcher. In my opinion, it ruined his career."

‘FAR ABOVE ROGER CLEMENS’

David Eugene Clyde was born April 22, 1955, in Kansas City, Kansas, the oldest of parents Gene and Amy’s four boys. Gene was an executive at Southwestern Bell and the family moved around to New Jersey and St. Louis before settling in the Houston area ahead of David’s freshman year at Westchester High School. Gene, a former semipro pitcher, was David’s mentor on the mound.

As a sophomore, Clyde pitched a perfect game against the defending state champions. As a junior in 1972, the lanky lefty went 17-1 with three no-hitters and four one-hitters, posting a 0.16 ERA and fanning 248 batters in 121 innings. Had he been eligible, he might have been the No. 1 draft pick that year.

“There are certain gifts that God gives all of us,” Clyde said in a 2023 interview with SABR.org. “He blesses us all with certain unique abilities, and then it’s up to us to polish those skills. You have to train hard and work at it. I stood out from Day One with the ability to throw hard.”

Clyde rocketed from prospect to prodigy during a senior season that still ranks among the greatest by a prep pitcher in American history. He finished 18-0 with a 0.18 ERA, a mind-boggling 328 strikeouts and just 18 walks in 148 innings. He tossed another perfect game that season, which included this five-game stretch: no-hitter, no-hitter, one-hitter, one-hitter, no-hitter.

Even in Texas, the state that produced Nolan Ryan, Roger Clemens and Clayton Kershaw, Clyde’s career stands out. He pitched 10 no-hitters, set more than a dozen national records and still ranks second all-time in both strikeouts (842) and shutouts (29), according to MaxPreps.com.

“David Clyde was so far above Roger Clemens when he was 18 years old that you can’t even — it’s like comparing apples and oranges,” Grieve told ESPN’s Outside the Lines in 2003.

Meanwhile, about 250 miles north of Clyde’s home, the Rangers lost 100 games in their first season in Arlington in 1972 after owner Bob Short relocated his failing Washington Senators expansion team. The Rangers held the top pick in the draft on June 5, 1973, and selected Clyde over future Hall of Famers Robin Yount (third overall pick),

Clyde’s parents, father Gene and mother Amy, were in attendance for their son’s big-league debut June 27, 1973. It’s interesting that dad is in a jacket as temperatures in old Arlington Stadium could reach triple figures at that time of year.

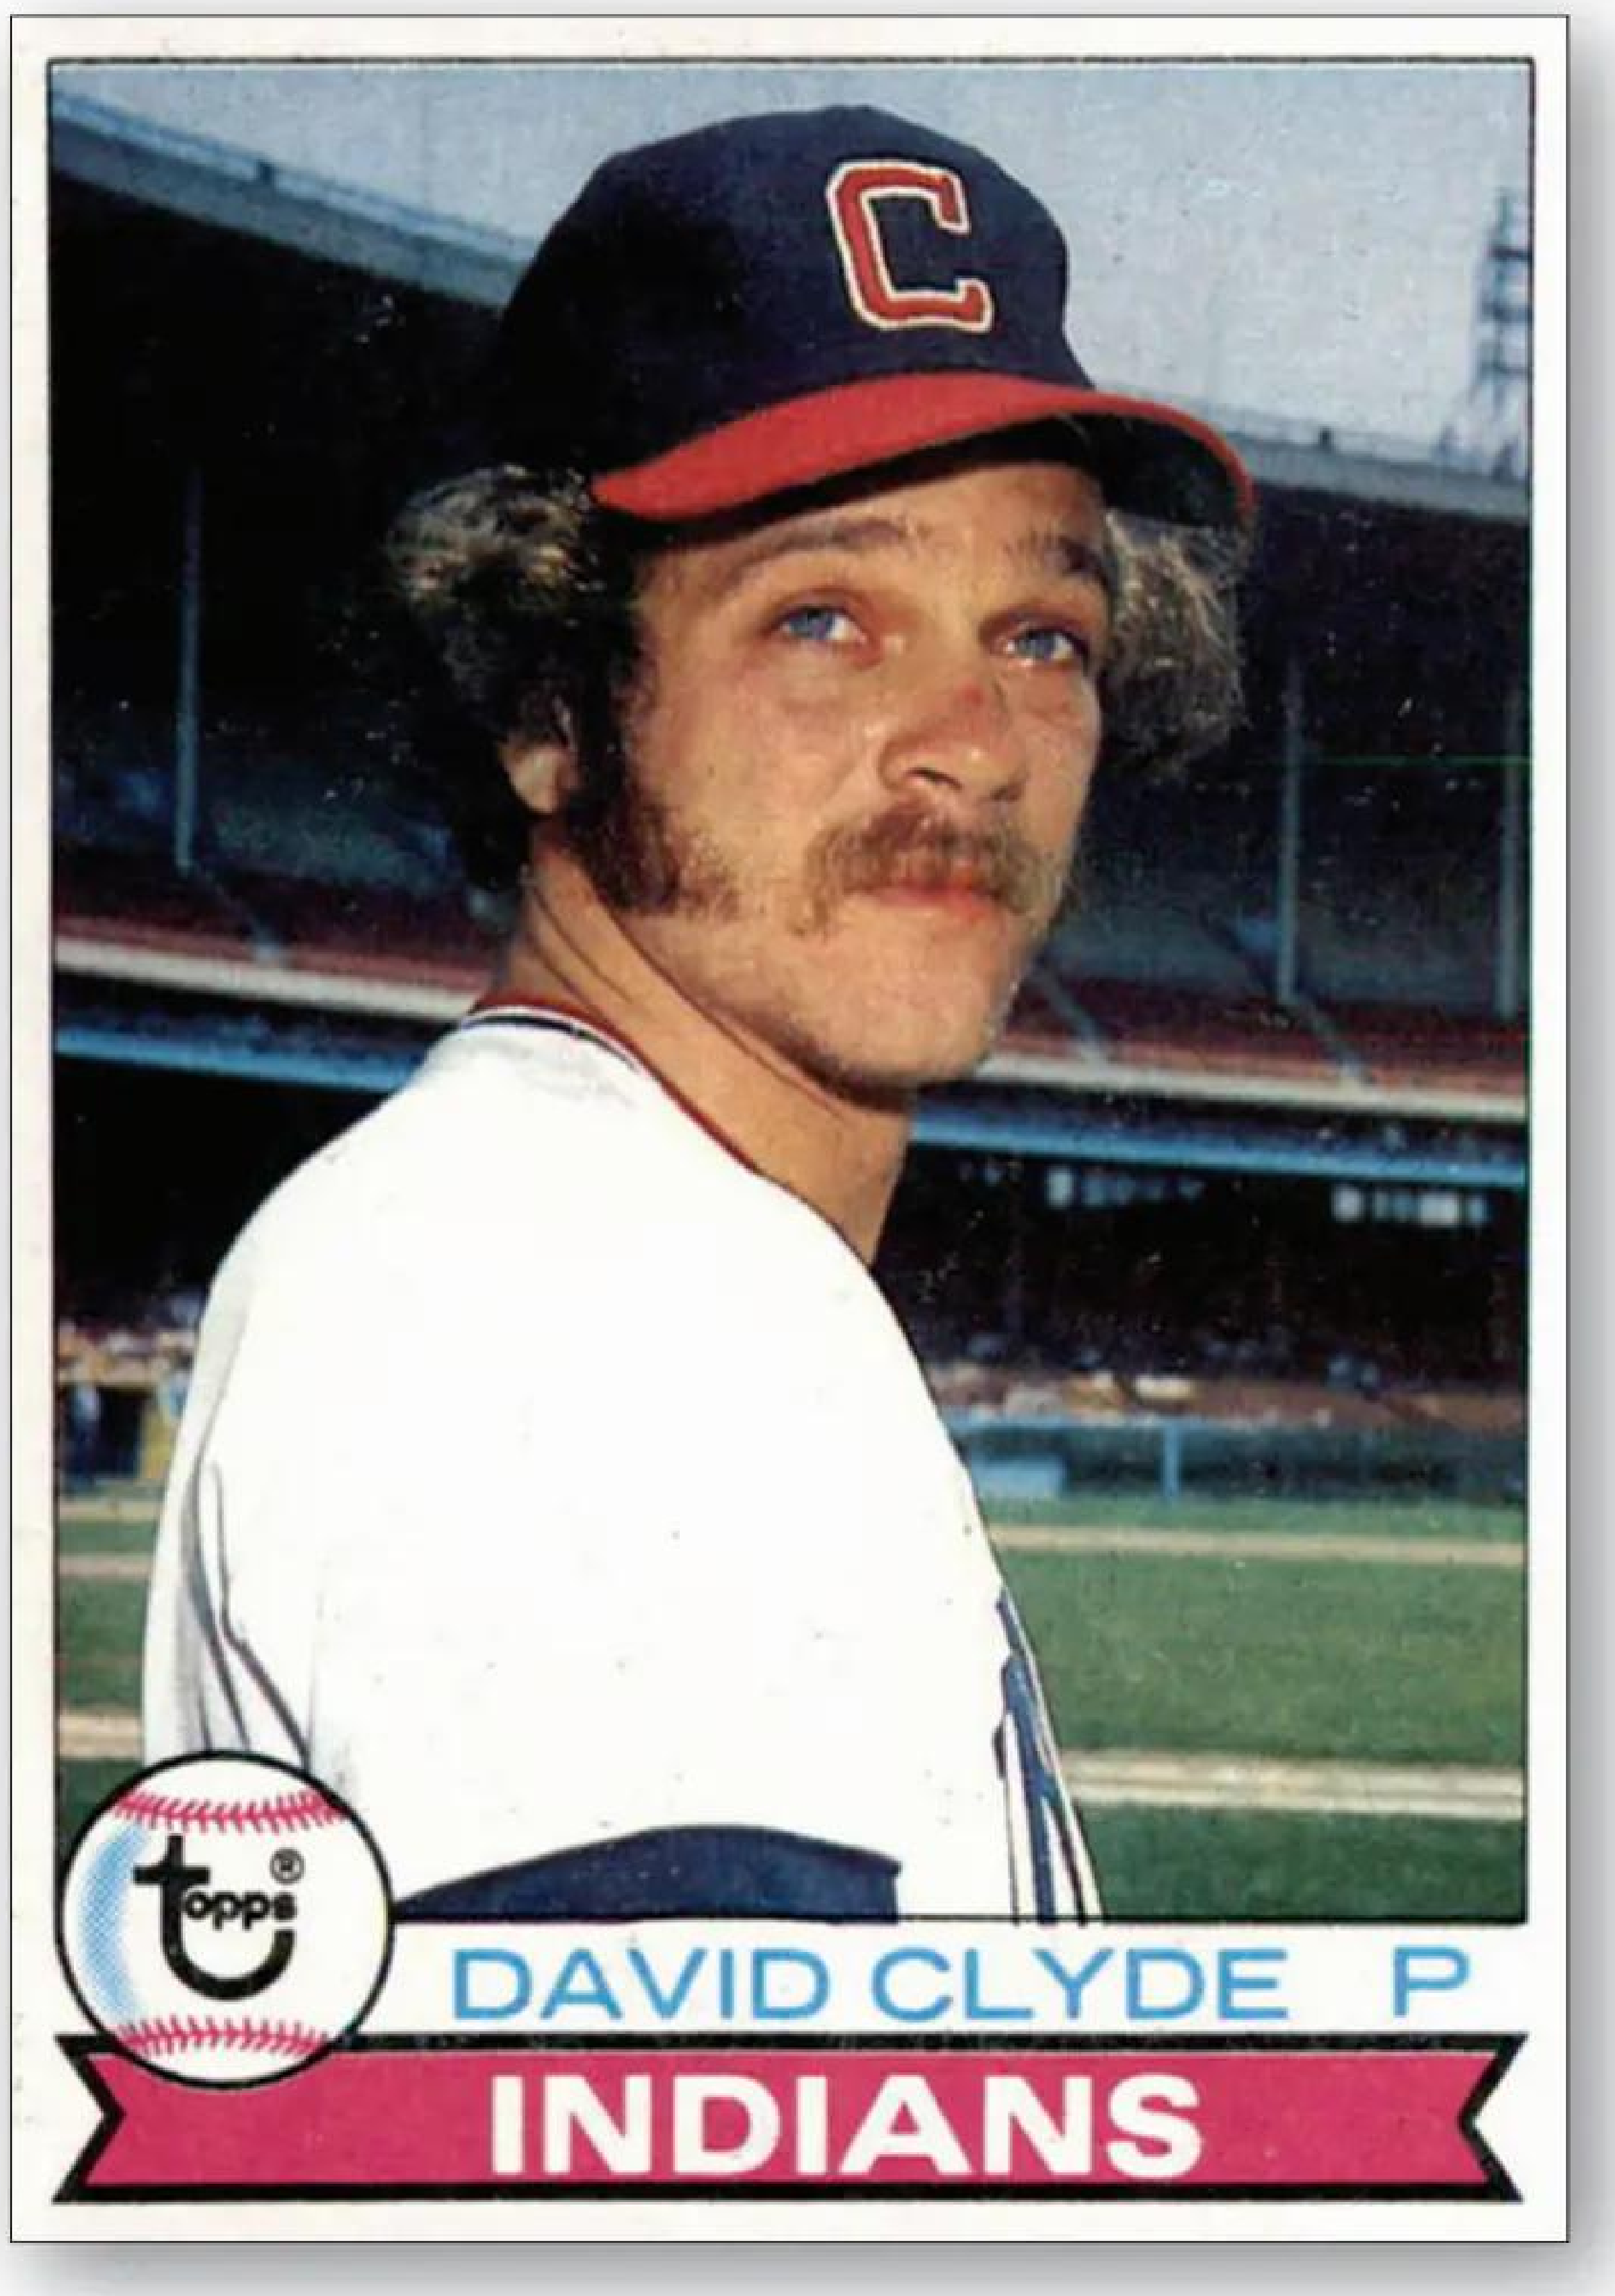
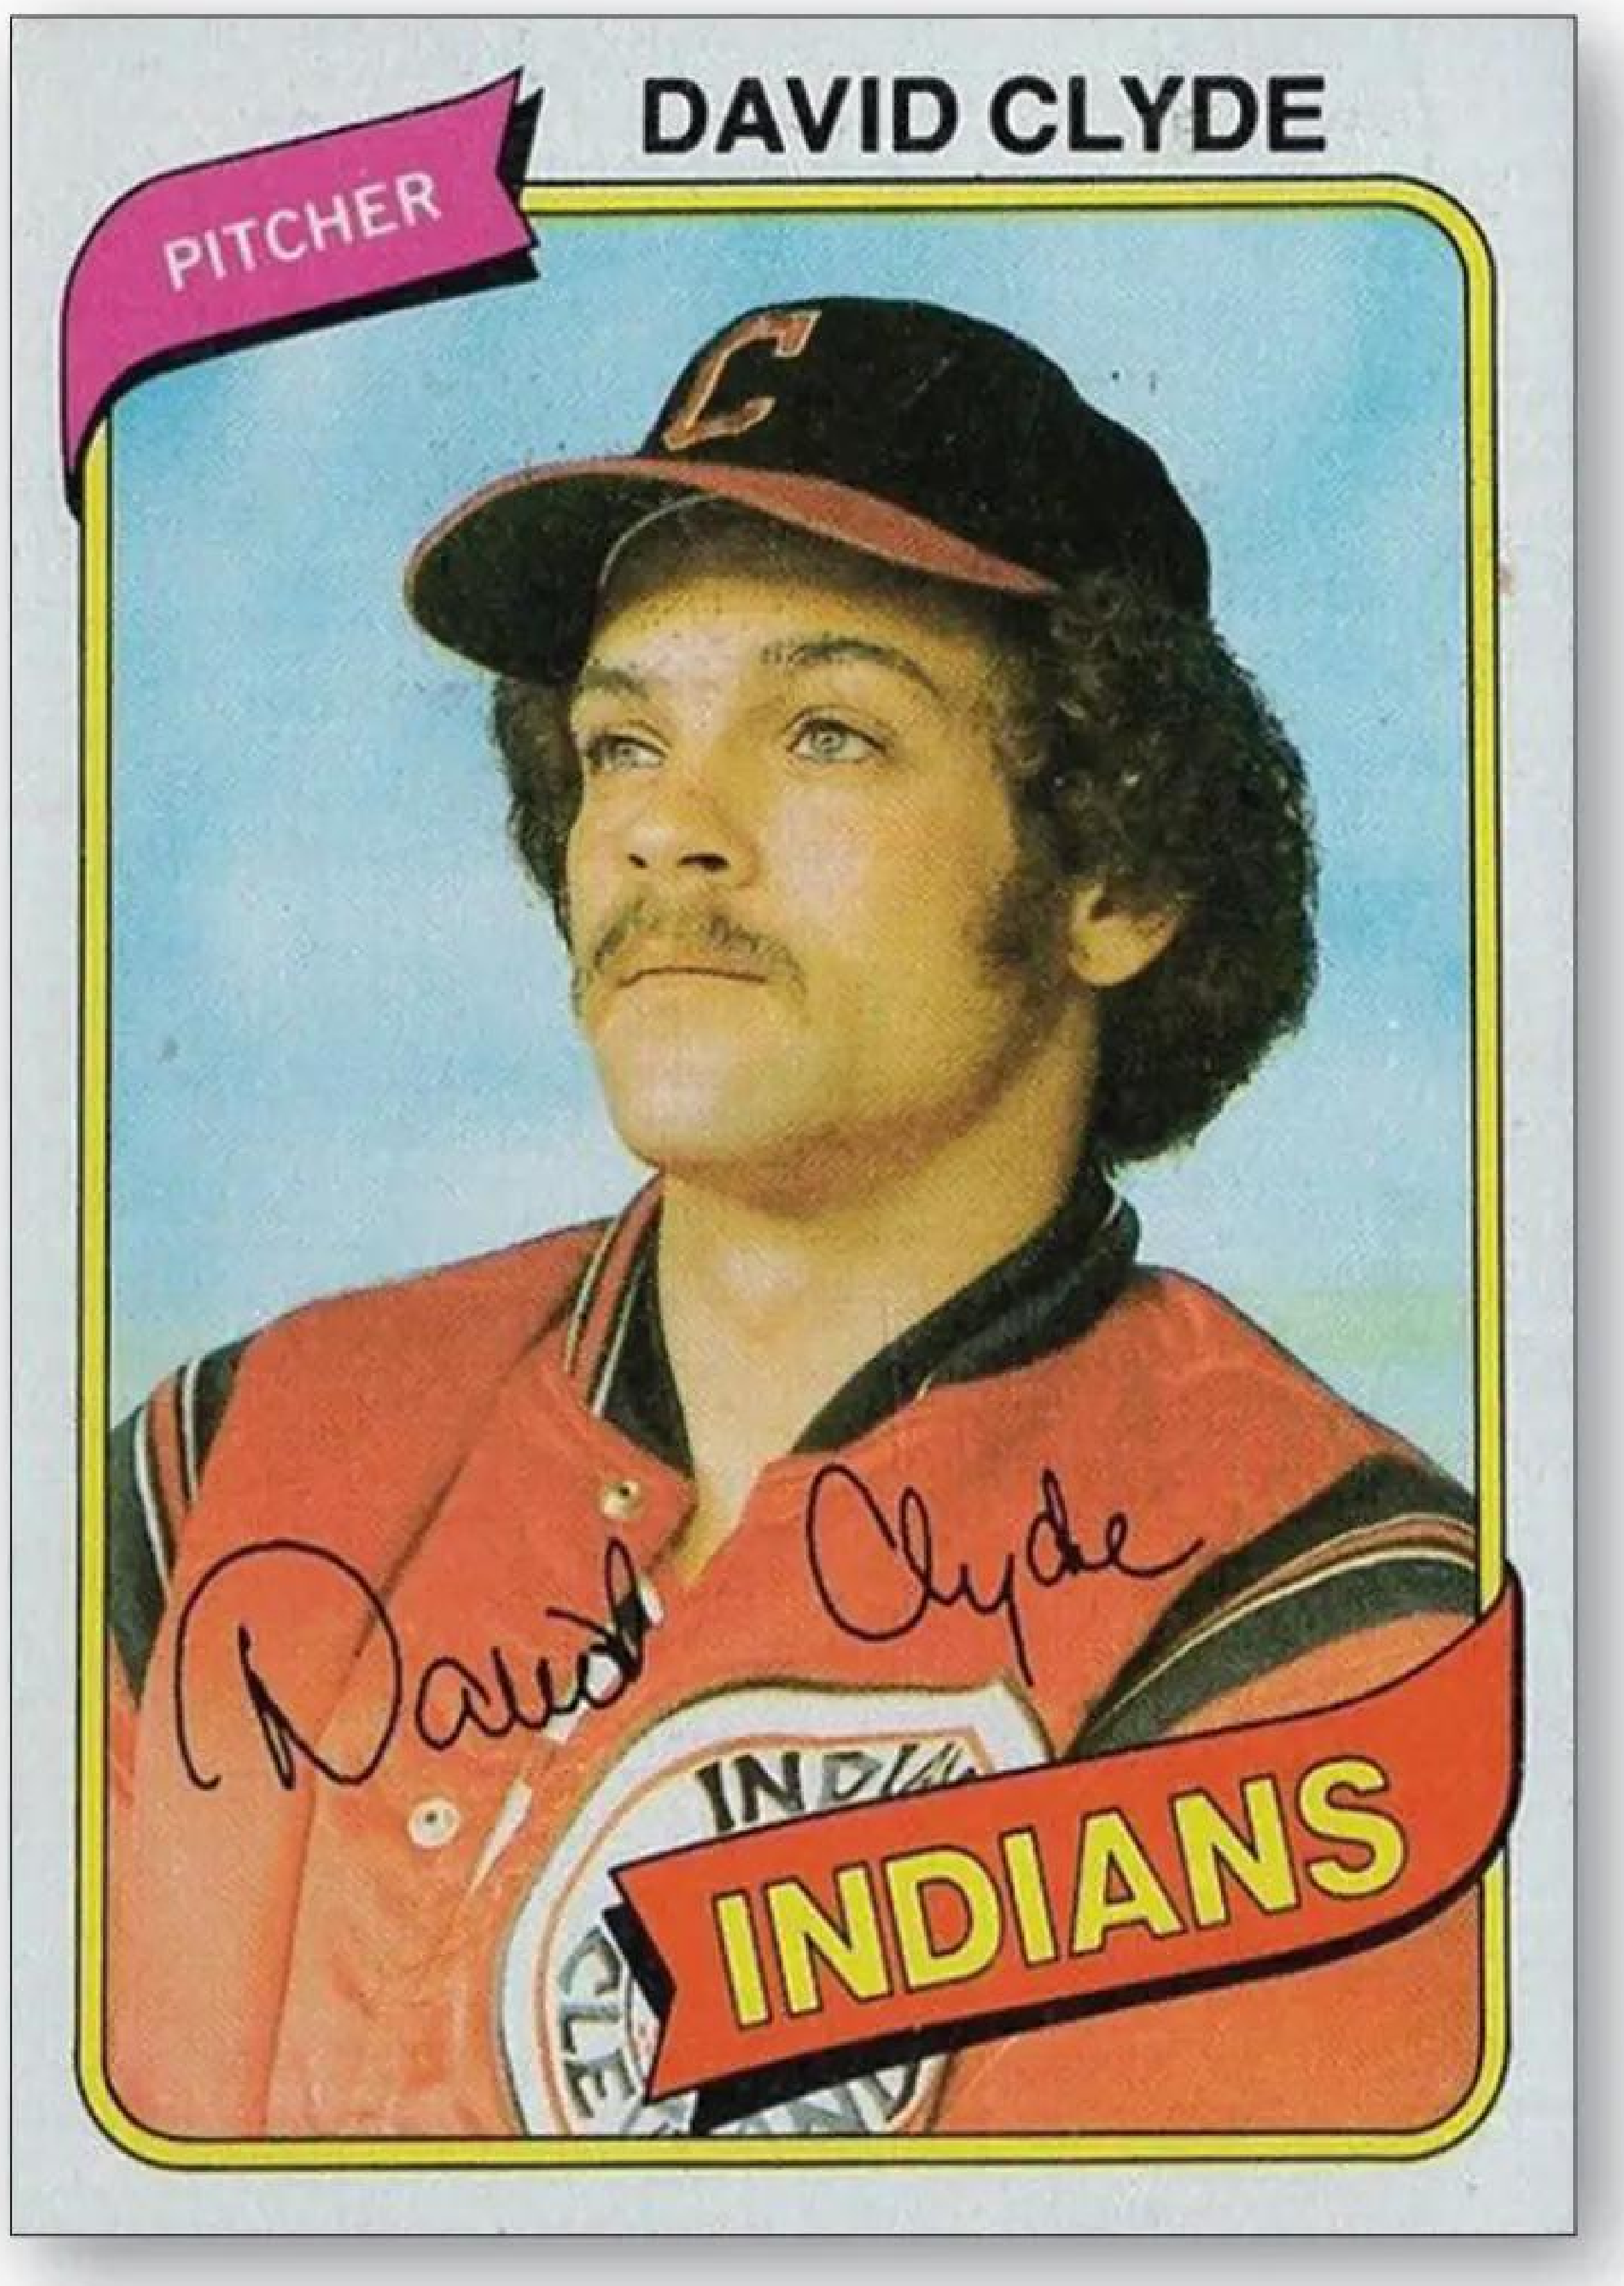
Dave Winfield (fourth overall) and Eddie Murray (third round). He is one of just three prep pitchers ever taken No. 1 along with fellow lefties Brady Aiken (2014) and Brien Taylor (1991), and the only one to make it to the big leagues.



1979 Topps #399

The ink was still drying on Clyde's contract when he reached the majors. With Texas on its way to another 100-loss campaign and attendance in the toilet, the original plan hatched by the owner was to let Clyde make a couple of starts to boost ticket sales before reporting to the minors. Short had concocted other promotions to put more butts in the seats (literally, in the case of his infamous "Hot Pants Night" in 1972), but Clyde was destined to become his greatest sideshow.

Rangers manager Whitey Herzog was opposed to fast-tracking Clyde. "I've got nothing to do with it," he told reporters in his office before Clyde's debut on June 27, 1973, "but if I was the director of player personnel here … I tell you I'd be raising hell about this. A young pitcher in his first year should be out where he can dominate. A kid takes a shellacking or two and his confidence suffers. But I'll say this, Clyde does have confidence. He doesn't think he shouldn't be here."



1980 Topps #697

Sixty-six days after his 18th birthday ("A date that shall live in infancy," quipped Sports Illustrated writer Ron Fimrite), Clyde took the mound for the first sellout in Rangers history with 35,698 fans — nearly 30,000 more than the previous night. Another 10,000 reportedly were turned away. The parking lot overflowed and the Wednesday night turnpike traffic outside the stadium was so bottlenecked that the start of the game was delayed 15 minutes.

"The longest 15 minutes in my life," Clyde told MLB.com in 2023. "It was almost like you're getting ready to unwrap what you know is the present you wanted on Christmas morning, and you just start to peel the package open, and Mom and Dad come down and say, 'Nope, not until after breakfast.' So, yes, a very long 15 minutes."

Clyde's family, his girlfriend and former teammates and coaches from high school and Little League were there. The fans filling every seat at Arlington Stadium, burning the backs of their legs on its hot, metal bleachers on a 90-degree evening, were treated to a bizarre pregame ceremony featuring live lion cubs, grass-skirted Polynesian dancers and a papier-mâché giraffe on wheels.

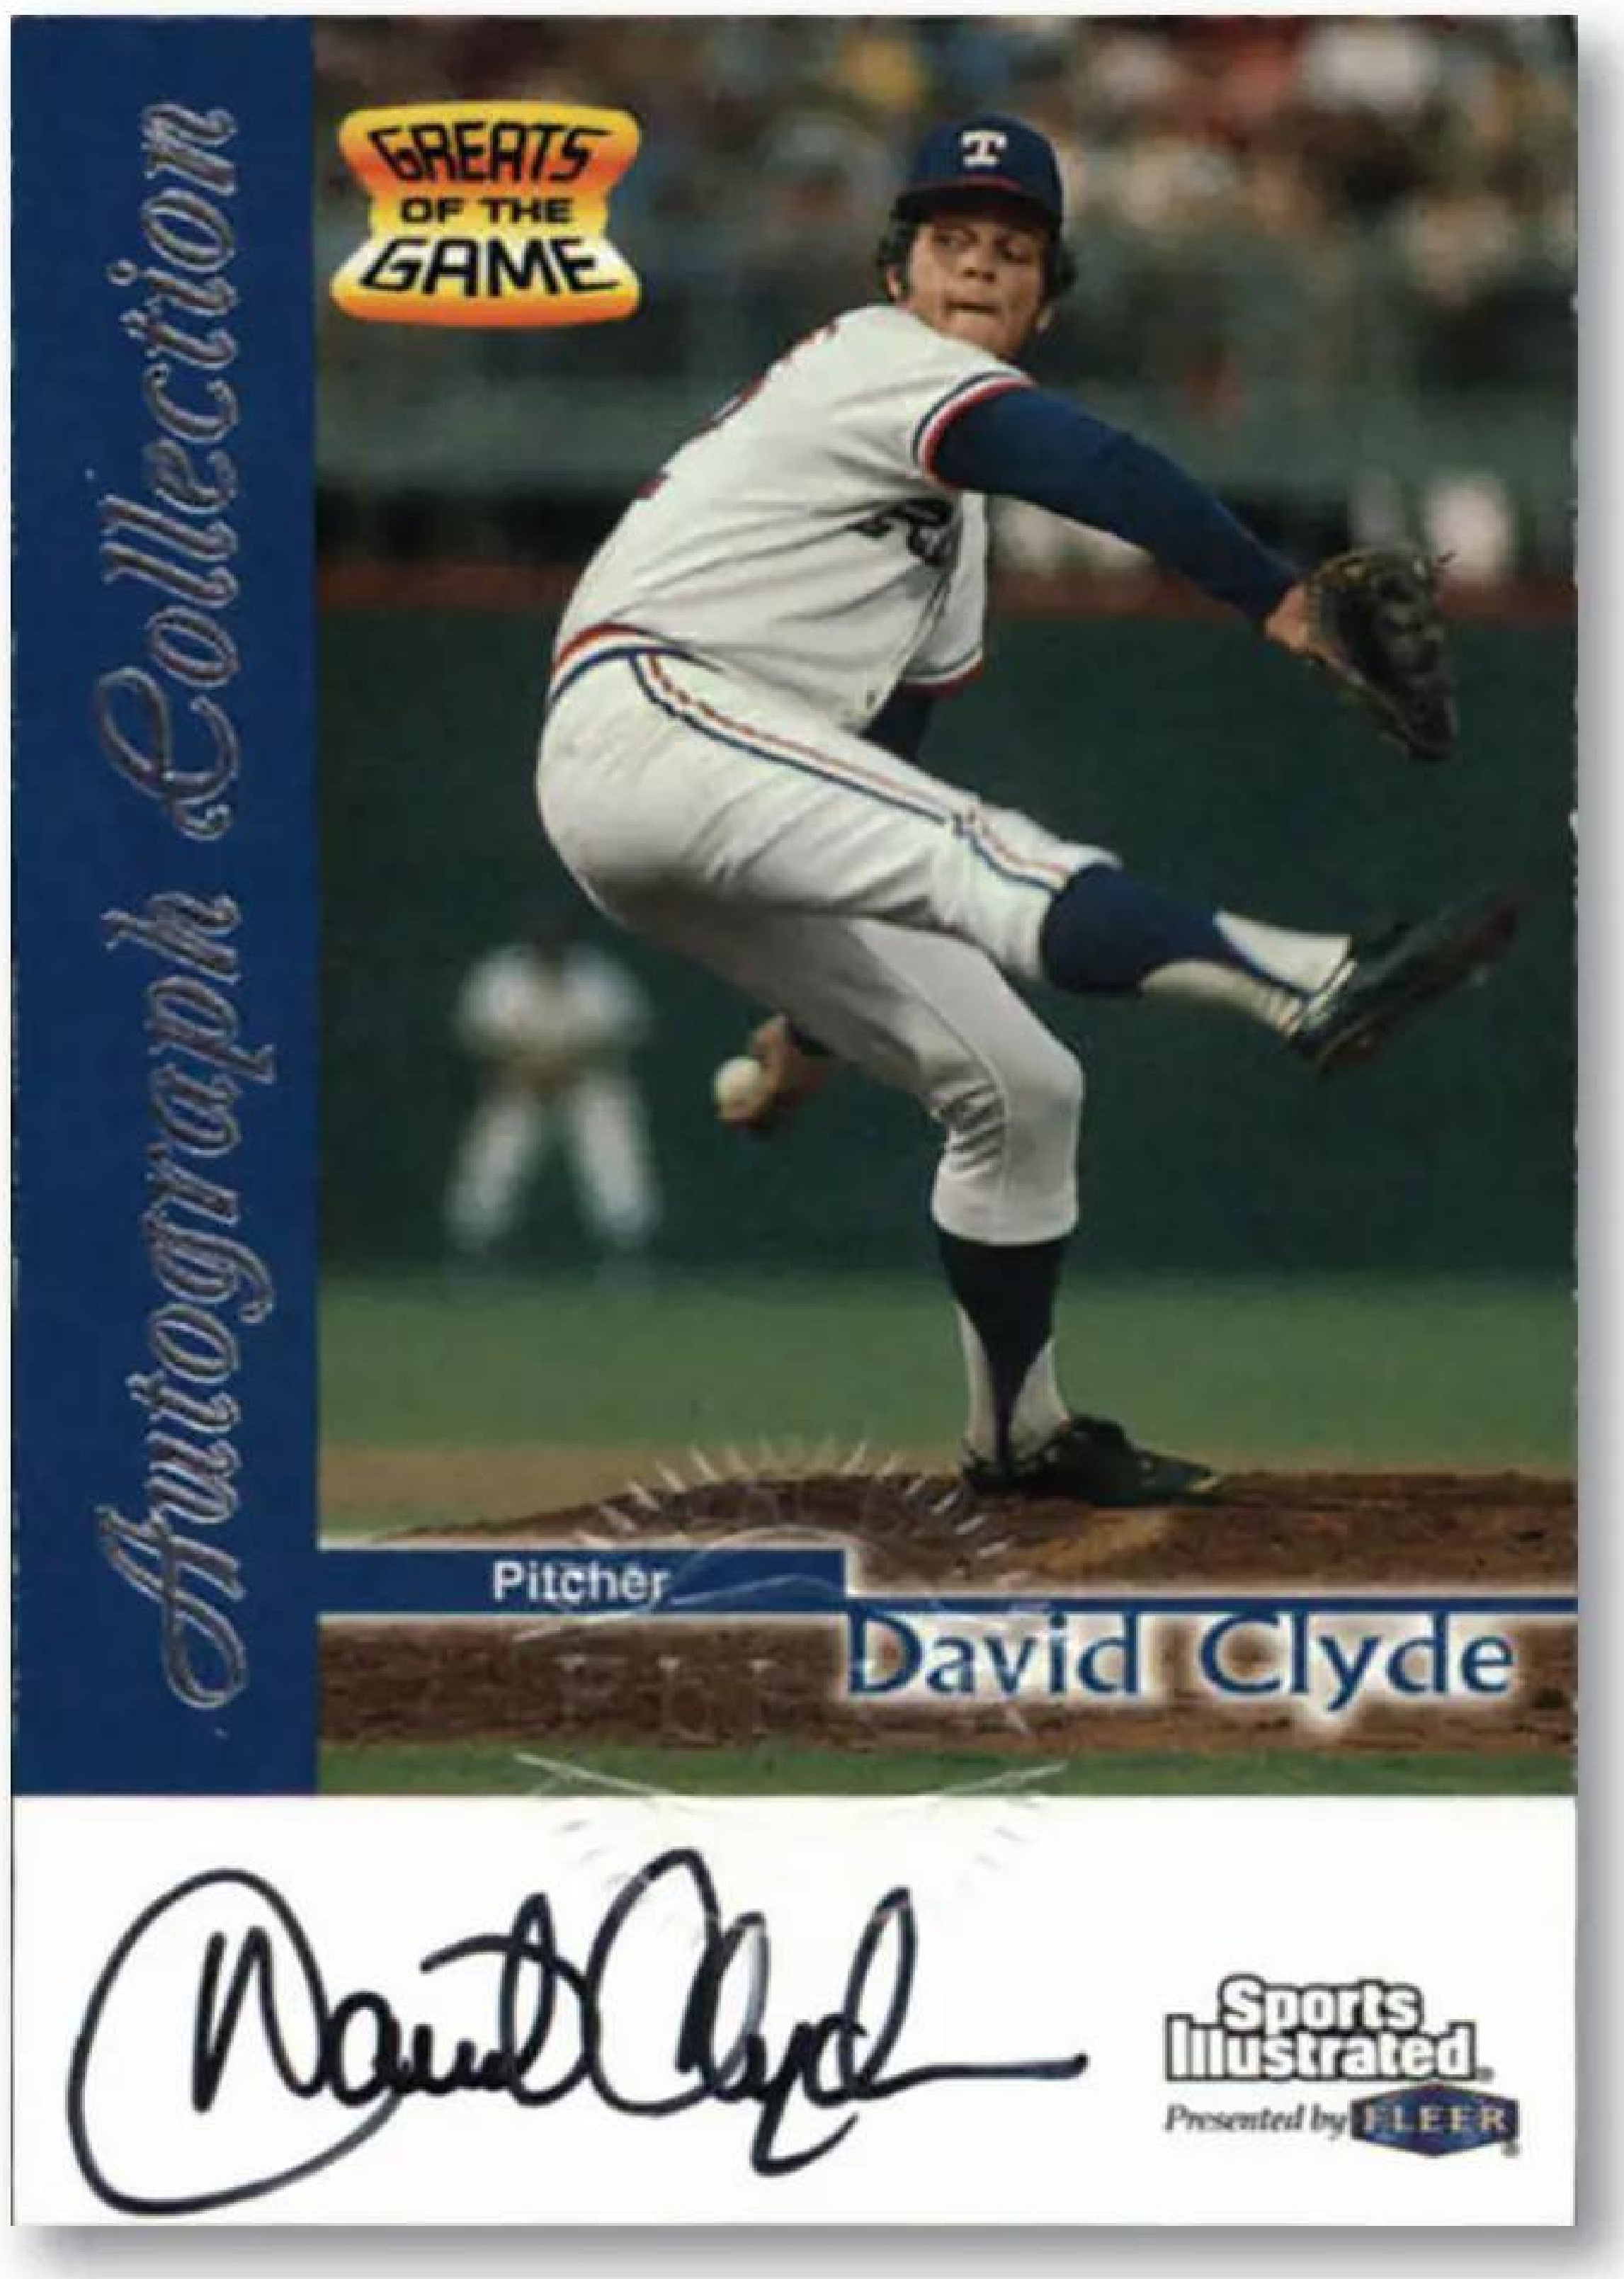
The star of this circus was the 6-foot-1, 180-pound Clyde, his mop of curly brown hair spilling out from his Texas "T" ballcap. He wore the same uniform number as his idol Koufax, who sent Clyde a telegram: "Go get 'em, number 32."

His opponents were the Minnesota Twins, with future Hall of Famer Jim Kaat on the mound and future Hall of Famer Rod Carew batting second.

After walking the first two batters, including Carew on four pitches, Clyde struck out the next three batters. He gave up a two-run home run to Mike Adams in the second inning, but it was the only hit he allowed. He retired the side in order in the third and fourth innings and received a minutes-long standing ovation after the fifth inning, which had been announced as his last. A four-inning save by Bill Gogolewski preserved the 4-3 win for Clyde, who finished his one-hit wonder with eight strikeouts and seven walks.

"From now on, time here shall be marked from June 27, 1973," Arlington Mayor Tom Vandergriff gushed. "The people came on just a promise, a hope. But David Clyde made it clear that people here will respond to a product that is exciting. He wasn't just a fairy tale coming out of Houston. He was a dream come true."

That dream quickly and quietly faded. Clyde's sensational start turned out to be the beginning of the end, or perhaps the end of the beginning.



1999 Fleer Sports Illustrated Greats of the Game AU

Clyde remained with the Rangers, a deviation from the plan based more on receipts than results. “Bob Short was a fast-buck guy. He had no plan for the future. If he could make some money … he was going to make it,” Herzog said in a 2002 interview on The Last Word with Jim Rome.

Attendance remained dismal on days Clyde didn’t pitch. Desperate for another gate attraction, Short fired Herzog in September 1973 and hired Billy Martin. Martin brought in pitching coach Art Fowler, “who wouldn’t know a release point from a whooping crane,” said Mike Shropshire, author of Seasons in Hell: With Billy Martin, Whitey Herzog and the Worst Baseball Team in History. “You couldn’t have found a manager and a pitching coach more ill-suited for a pitcher like David.”

Clyde made 18 starts that first year, finishing 4-8 with a 5.01 ERA as he struggled with control (and blisters) and hitters began sitting on his fastball. “He should have been sent to the minors, but Short saw what he had,” Herzog told Sports Illustrated in 1988. “David Clyde was sacrificed for the Ranger franchise. If he hadn’t come along, Short probably wouldn’t have found a local buyer the next year.”

After a 3-0 start (all complete games) in 1974, Clyde’s express train trajectory derailed. He never won another game for Texas, finishing 3-9 that season

BONNY DEBUT FOR CLYDE

A gunner fresh out of high school, David Clyde, 18, draws a full house to a Texas ball park for his first major league appearance by RON FIMRITE

It remained for the mayor of Arlington, Texas himself to put the Big Event in historical perspective. "From now on," said the Hon. Tom Vandergriff, "time here shall be marked from June 27, 1973."

It is a date that shall live in infancy, for on this night in Arlington Stadium, David Clyde, a stripling of 18, began his major league baseball career by pitching the Texas Rangers to a 4-3 win over the Minnesota Twins. The lad went five innings, threw 112 pitches, struck out eight, walked seven and allowed only one hit, a two-run homer. It was a startling performance for a youngster only 19 days out of Westchester High School in Houston, but it was much more than that—an awakening of interest, perhaps, in a community that has steadfastly ignored its baseball team.

Clyde, at least, is not easily ignored. He is a left-handed fastball pitcher whose achievements at Westchester High—an 18-0 record in his senior year with an earned run average of 0.18 and 328 strikeouts in 148⅓ innings—were trumpeted throughout the state. The first player selected in the June 5 major league draft, he had been judged by virtually every scout who saw him as the finest schoolboy pitcher in the nation. He was signed by the Rangers to a contract that called for a bonus of approximately $125,000 and a free college education. And, as his numberless interviews over the past few weeks established, he is a teen-ager of extraordinary tact and maturity, one who is humble, courteous and agreeably respectful of his elders. He has curly brown hair, wide blue eyes and a bashful smile. He is 6' 1" and he weighs a muscular 190. He is obviously a creation of the late lamented Ralph Henry Barbour.

A paragon of this sort does not just slip into the Rangers' starting rotation; he enters the lists like a knight-errant. So lavish had the publicity been that by June 27 the aroused fans of the Dallas-Fort Worth megalopolis were prepared to accept nothing less than the new Sandy Koufax—who just happens to be Clyde's idol. Before Clyde, these same citizens had embraced the Rangers about as warmly as they might the Miami Dolphins. The team drew but 662,974 spectators in 1972, a dreary average of 8,840 per game, and until June 27 this year's total attendance had been running nearly 40,000 below last season's. It has been suggested that the Rangers deserved their inattention: they were dead last in the as Martin shuffled his still teenaged hurler between the rotation and bullpen or flat-out ignored him for long stretches.

Clyde finally went to the minors in 1975, spending the season at Double-A Pittsfield (Massachusetts) before making one start for Texas that September. That turned out to be his final appearance for the Rangers, as shoulder surgery wiped out most of 1976 and he spent all of 1977 at Triple-A Tucson before being traded to the Cleveland Indians in February 1978.

After going 7-18 with a 4.60 ERA in 47 games (40 starts) with Texas, Clyde compiled an 11-15 record with a 4.66 ERA in 37 games (33 starts) with Cleveland from 1978-79. He was traded back to the Rangers in January 1980 but released that March after a rotator-cuff injury. After pitching in the minors for the Houston Astros in 1981, Clyde announced his retirement at age 26 in February 1982. “It wasn’t fun for me anymore,” he said.

Clyde joined his father-in-law’s lumber business and raised a family in Tomball, Texas. Folks on the street still ask him about his debut, and reporters come around on every big anniversary with the same “what if” and “what might have been” questions. Sure, he wishes another team — any other team — had drafted him, but he takes comfort in knowing that what happened to him, and to a career filled with so much promise, won’t happen to another kid.

“The biggest thing is that I think baseball has learned, ‘Let’s not do that again,’” Clyde told MLB.com on the golden anniversary of his debut.

Over the last 52 years, only two pitchers have followed Clyde’s leap from high school to “the show.” Both did it with the Oakland A’s in 1978: right-hander Mike Morgan (No. 4 overall pick) and left-hander Tim Conroy (No. 20). Since that year, the only 18-year-old to appear in the majors was shortstop Alex Rodriguez in 1994.

Clyde, now 70, didn’t turn out to be the second coming of Sandy Koufax, but he’s comfortable with his place in the universe. This universe.

“I’ve got a lot to be thankful for, and it’s just nice to be remembered. That it all wasn’t for nothing,” he told CBS Texas in 2023, fighting back tears. “Even though there’s bittersweet memories, there were an awful lot of good things.”

DRAFTED!

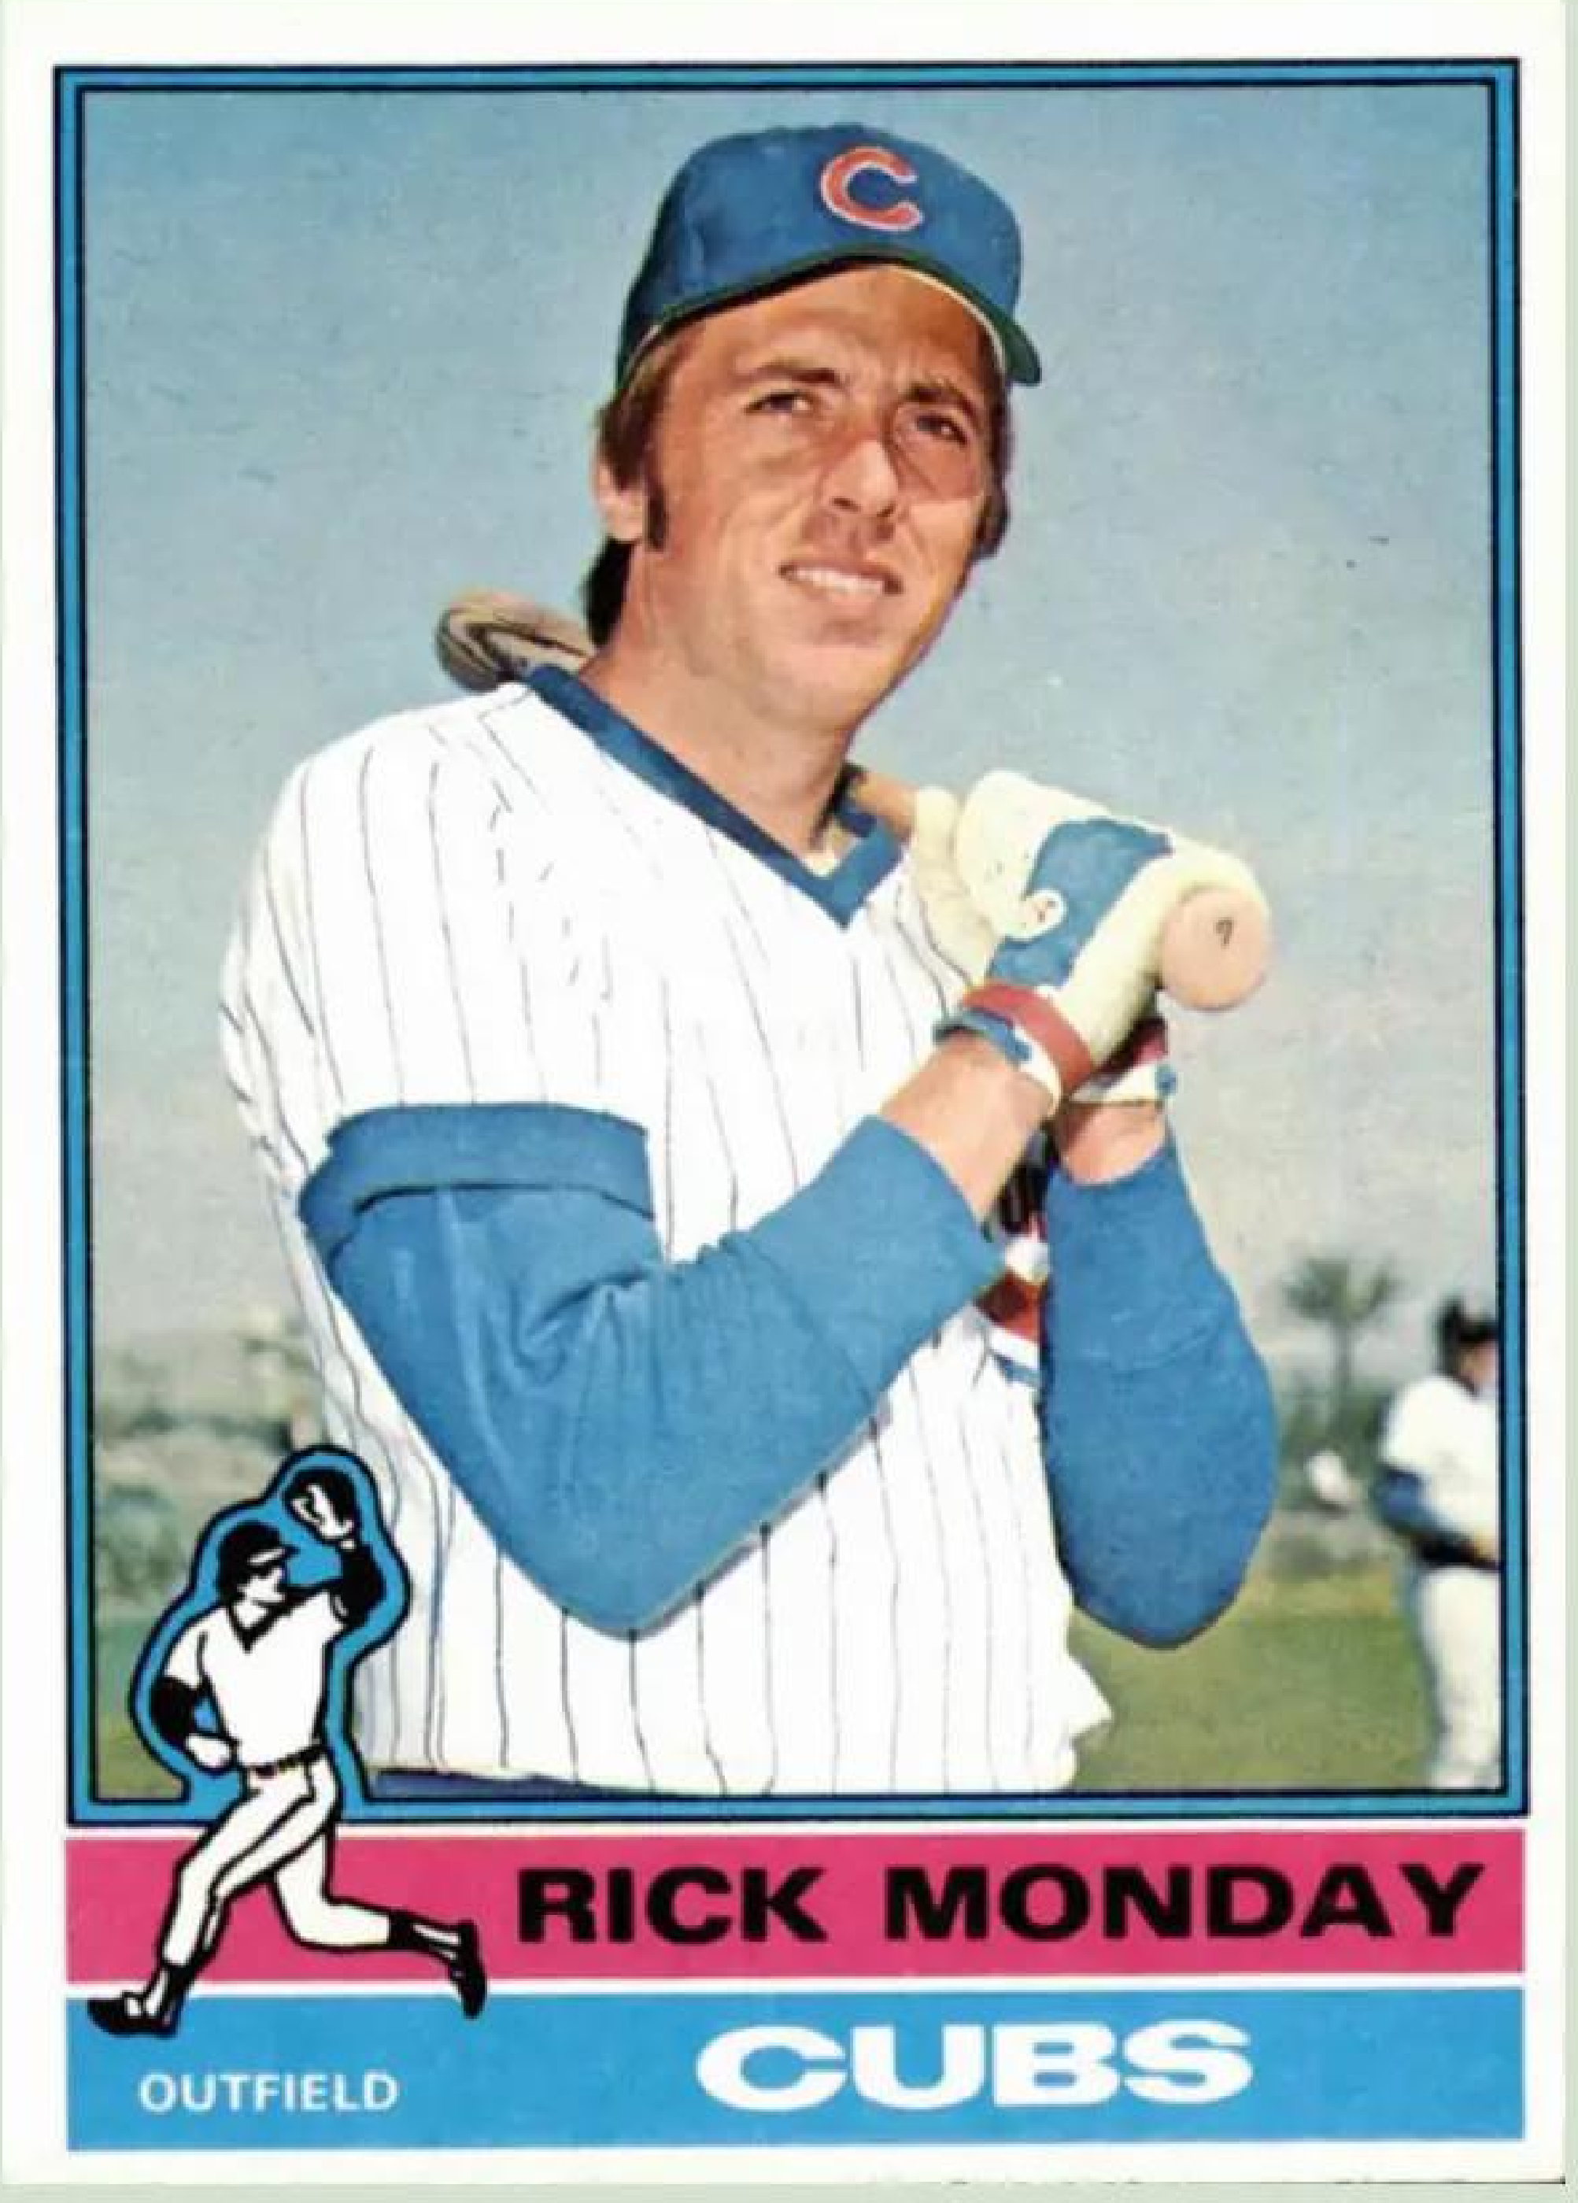
Sixty years ago, the first MLB Draft gave struggling teams first crack at top prospects like Johnny Bench, Nolan Ryan, Tom Seaver and Reggie Jackson. Those names worked out, but others didn't.

BY STAN CARLBERG

Rick Monday, out of Arizona State, was the first player selected in MLB's first player draft in 1965.

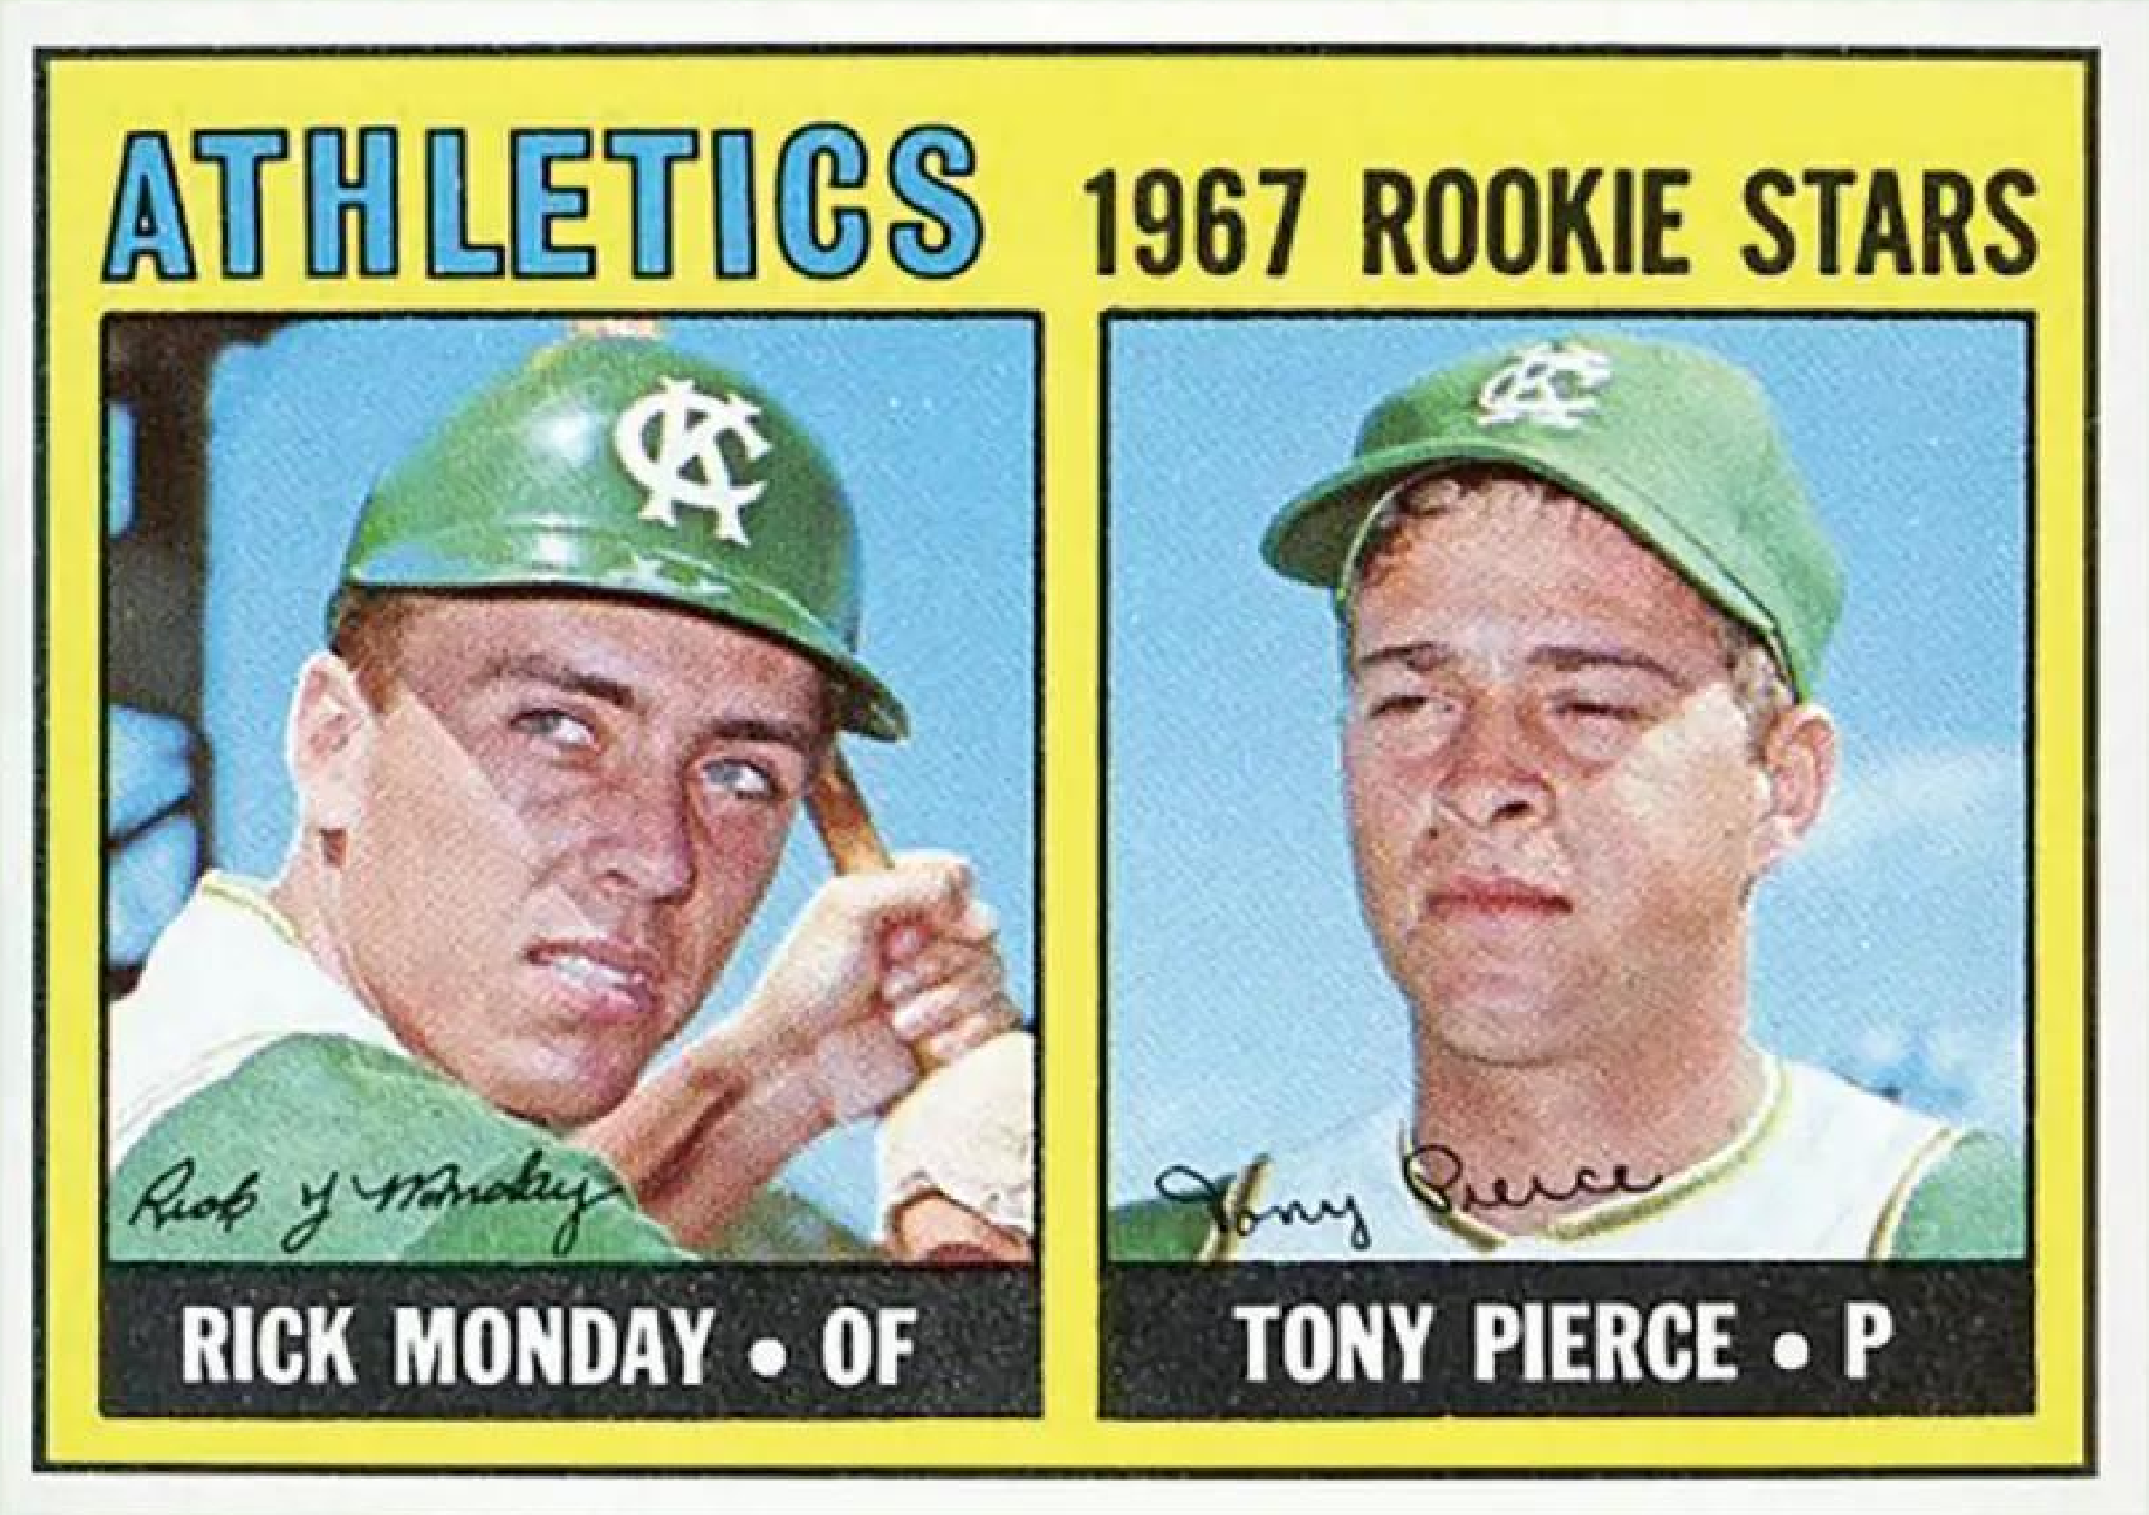
GETTY IMAGES

In Field of Dreams, when Kevin Costner explains that baseball owners installed lights after learning more people could attend night games, Ray Liotta quips, "Owners" — and we know exactly what he means. Look, it's no secret: if there's one thing owners love more than making money, it's saving it.



In 1965, the MLB Draft was introduced to curb skyrocketing salaries for unproven talent. Owners figured it was too risky to throw big money at players who may never make the big leagues. While the draft lowered amateur signing bonuses, it also brought other changes to the game.

On the 60th anniversary of the MLB Draft, we're looking back at some of the early draft picks, their cards, and how the draft leveled the playing field across the league. With struggling teams having first crack at the nation's top talent, the draft created new dynasties in smaller markets like Oakland and Cincinnati . . . and eventually led to free agency a decade later.



1967 Topps #542 RC

The Next Mick

Comparisons can be tough, especially when you're billed as the next Mickey Mantle. In June 1964, MLB owners stretched their pocketbooks to land Rick Reichardt, a two-time Big Ten Conference batting champ and fullback who led the University of Wisconsin to the 1963 Rose Bowl.

CHICAGO
RICK MONDAY

Reichardt signed with the Los Angeles Angels for a jaw-dropping $205,000, exceeding the yearly salaries of veteran superstars like Mantle, Willie Mays and Sandy Koufax. Even Topps mentioned Reichardt's hefty signing bonus on the back of his 1965 Rookie Card (#194), with scouts touting him as baseball's next big thing. Imagine Reichardt flipping over his RC and seeing that? Talk about undue pressure.

While Reichardt had modest success with the Angels, his baseball career didn't live up to the unfair expectations placed on him. But his impact on the game was felt in other ways. The bidding war for his services propelled the MLB to hold the first player draft a year later.

Owners got their wish when the first overall pick of the inaugural 1965 MLB Draft signed for almost half the price. And with struggling clubs getting first dibs at the nation's top talent, a power shift reverberated throughout the league.

A Patriotic First Pick

In 1964, the Kansas City Athletics finished with a 57-105, giving them first pick in the inaugural draft. With the top prospects up for grabs, the A's selected Rick Monday (1967 Topps #542 RC). Not a bad choice. After all, Monday was named the College Player of the Year after leading the Arizona Sun Devils to the 1965 College World Series championship. He signed for $104,000, almost half the price the Halos paid for Reichardt a year earlier.

An All-Star selection in 1968, Monday helped the A's – then in Oakland - to its first of five straight American League West titles in 1971. But he wouldn't enjoy the A's championship run as he was traded to the Chicago Cubs for southpaw Ken Holtzman, a fellow '65 draftee (4th round), after the season. Holtzman would play a pivotal role in A's 1972-75 rotation, winning 77 games and going 4-1 in World Series play.

Monday's best season came in '76, when he had a career-high 32 dingers and scored 107 runs. Despite receiving some NL MVP votes, his contributions on the field were overshadowed by an incident that took place at Dodger Stadium on April 25.

As two protestors attempted to light an American flag on fire in left field, Monday, a veteran of the U.S. Marine Corp Reserved, was warming up in center. Seeing what was happening, he swung into action, scooping up the flag before running it safely toward the Dodgers' dugout.

Rick Monday scoops up the American flag from two men – later - identified as a father and son who had doused it in lighter fluid and tried to strike a match in the outfield at Dodger Stadium. Monday ran the flag safely to the dugout as the two knuckleheads were arrested.

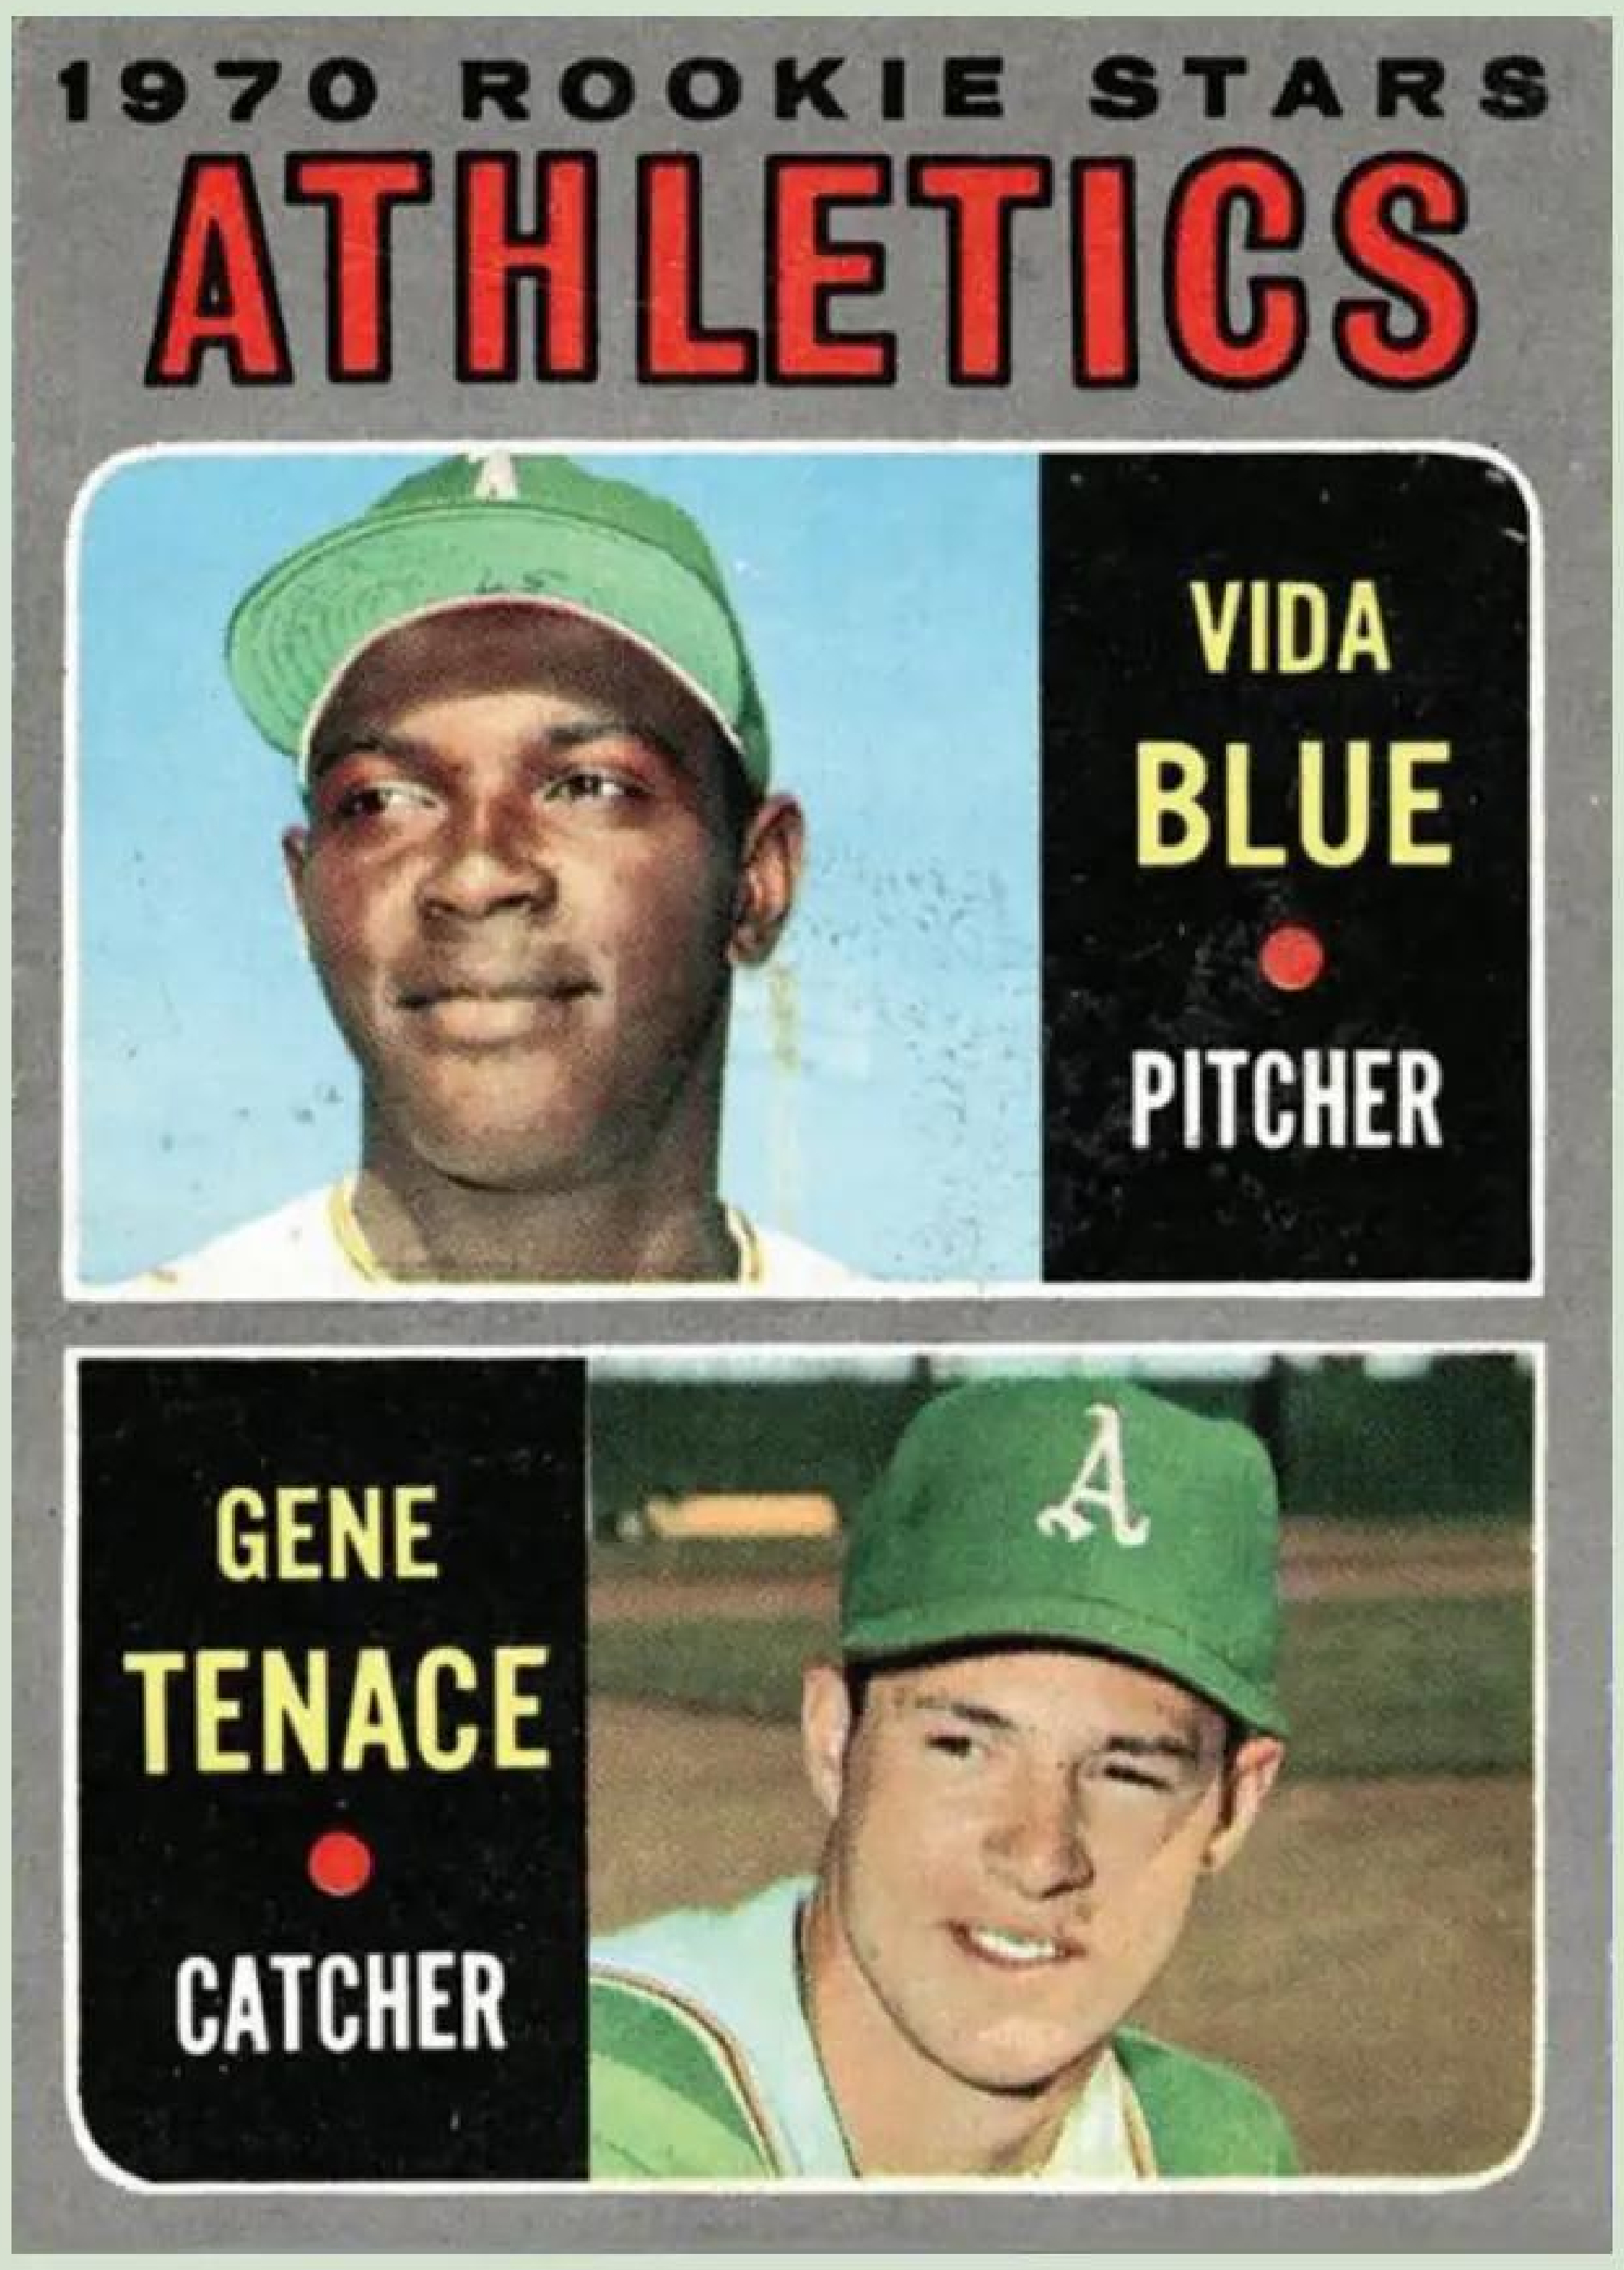
"I turned to where the noise was coming from," Monday once reflected on the moment. "When they began to douse (the flag) with lighter fluid, it angered me. It angered me because that was how I was brought up. You don't do that to the American flag. I began to run at them."



During his next at-bat, the LA crowd gave him a standing ovation before singing God Bless America. In 2018, baseball historian Jacob Kornhauser included Monday's heroicact of saving the flag in his book, 100 Moments That Shaped Baseball History.

Traded to the Dodgers in 1977, Monday's biggest moment on the big stage came in Game 5 of the 1981 NLCS against the Expos. His two-out, ninth-inning home run off Steve Rogers was the margin of victory as the Dodgers moved on to beat the Yankees in the World Series. The blow ended Montreal's only postseason appearance, and over the years, has become known as "Blue Monday" to Expos fans.

Dynasty in the Making

During the first three years of the MLB Draft, hands-on A's owner Charlie Finley, acting as his own GM, took advantage of his club's struggles to assemble the league's hottest minor league talent. In the inaugural draft, he picked up Arizona State third baseman Sal Bando (1967 Topps #33 RC) in the 6th round and future All-Star catcher and World Series MVP Gene Tenace in round 20.

A year later, Oakland landed Arizona State slugger Reggie Jackson (1969 Topps #260) as the second overall pick behind Steve Chilcott, who went first with the Mets.

With the selection of Vida Blue in the 2nd round of the 1967 draft, the Kansas City A's — who moved to Oakland in '68 — had the foundation for what would become the Swingin' A's of the 1970s. The future Oakland battery of Blue and Tenace made their Topps debut on the 1970 Athletics Rookie Stars #21.

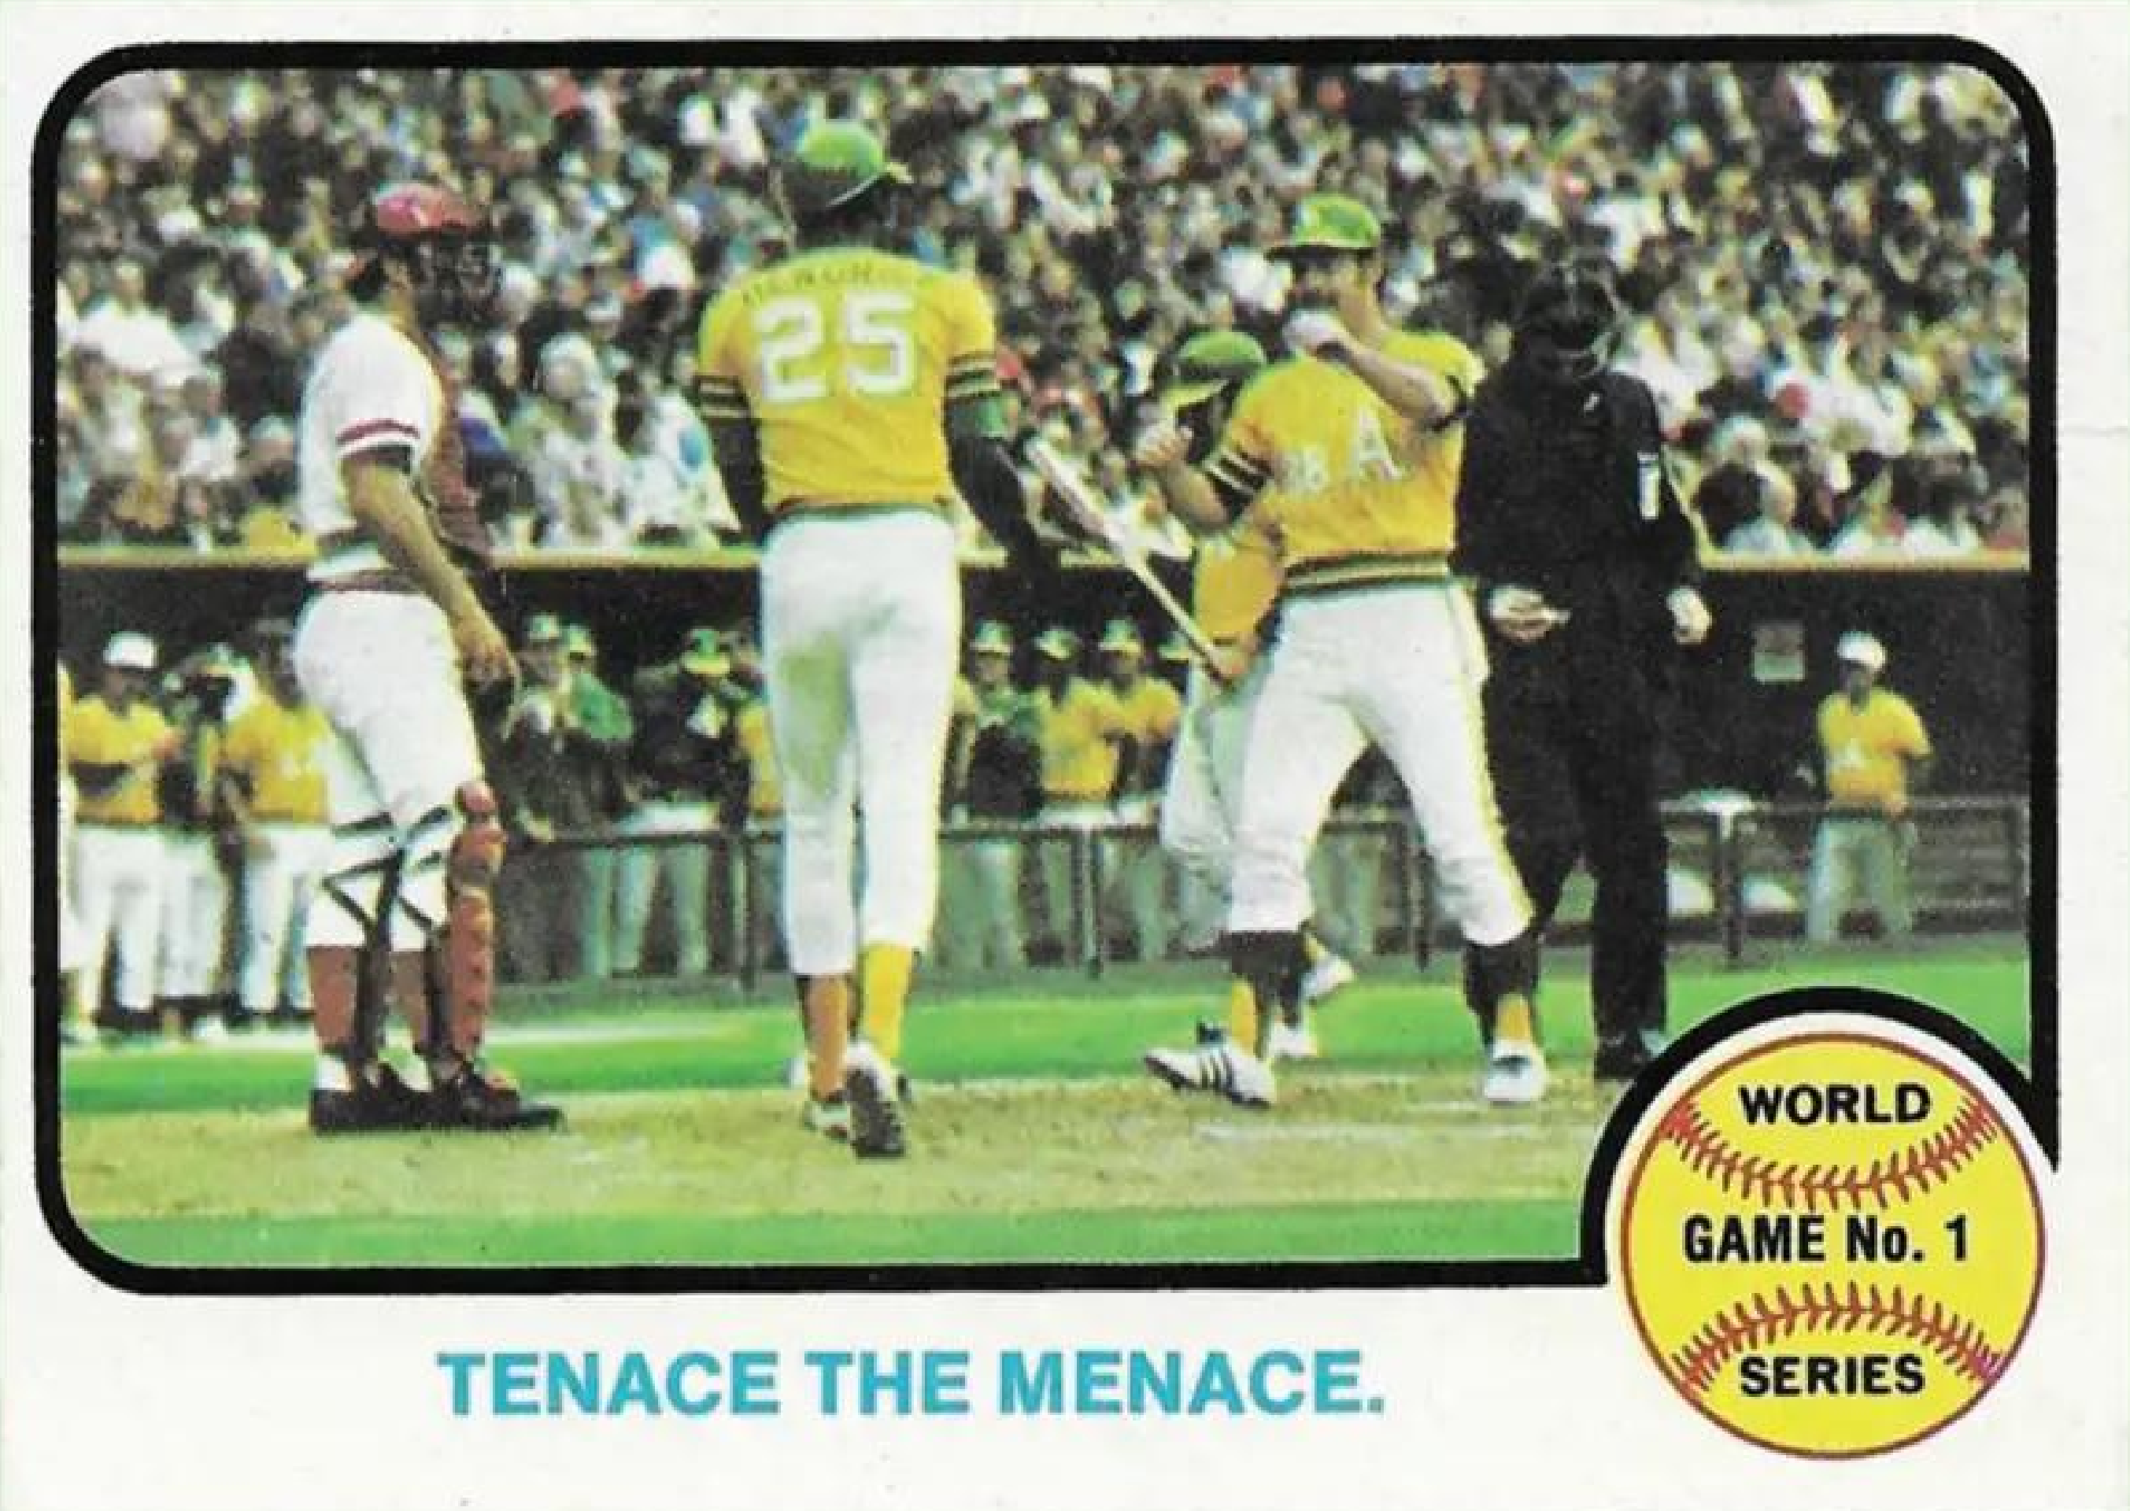
In '71, Blue went 24-8 with a league-leading 1.82 and 301 Ks to capture the AL Cy Young and MVP awards to lead Oakland to its first of five straight AL West flags. After blasting 47 home runs in '69, Jackson emerged as the team leader alongside Bando, a captain.



1973 Topps #203

When Jackson tore his hamstring in the Game 5 clincher in the '72 ALCS, Oakland's lineup was left with a huge void heading into the Fall Classic against the Reds.

Enter the light-hitting backstop Gene "Tenace the Menace," who slugged just five home runs in the regular season to supply the extra pop the A's needed. His four dingers and nine RBIs (1973 Topps #203) powered Oakland to a seven-game victory over the Reds.

"I got in sort of a zone," Tenace has said of his breakout performance. "It was pretty special to do something of that magnitude in a World Series."

Jackson made up for it in '73, capturing both the AL MVP and World Series MVP to lead Oakland to another seven-game thriller over the Mets (1974 Topps #479). A year later, reliever Rollie Fingers shut down the Dodgers to capture its third straight championship (1975 Topps #466), cementing Finley's Swingin' A's as one of baseball's great dynasties.

MLB's First All-Minority Lineup

On September 1, 1971, the Pittsburgh Pirates made baseball history when skipper Danny Murtaugh penciled in the MLB's first all-Black and Afro-Latin starting lineup.

Led by outfielder greats Roberto Clemente and Willie Stargell, the lineup included catcher Manny Sanguillen, first baseman Al Oliver, shortstop Jackie Hernandez, second baseman Rennie Stennett, and pitcher Dock Ellis. Filling out the starting lineup were 1966 draft picks Dave Cash (5th round) and Gene Clines (6th round), who started at third and center, respectively. It wasn't until the National Anthem that Cash, looking around the field, realized the significance of the moment.

"There's Jackie, there's Rennie, there's Al, Clemente, Clines, Stargell, Sanguillen, and Dock's on the mound. I looked and said 'Al (Oliver), there's nine brothers out there.' He looked at me and he was astonished, too. He didn't realize what was going on," Cash recalled in the 2014 No No: A Dockumentary. After the game, when asked if he was trying to make history, Murtaugh said he was just playing his best players. "I put the best athletes out there. The best nine I put out there happen to be Black."

At first, Ellis thought the lineup was a stunt, but later said he believed Murtaugh was simply playing the best players he had on that day.

With the help of third baseman Richie Hebner, a 1966 first rounder (15th overall pick), the Pirates went on to win it all in '71. The 24-year-old's bat caught fire in the NLCS against San Francisco, hitting a pair of game-changing home runs off pitching legends Juan Marichal and Gaylord Perry to help the Bucs capture their first pennant in 11 years.

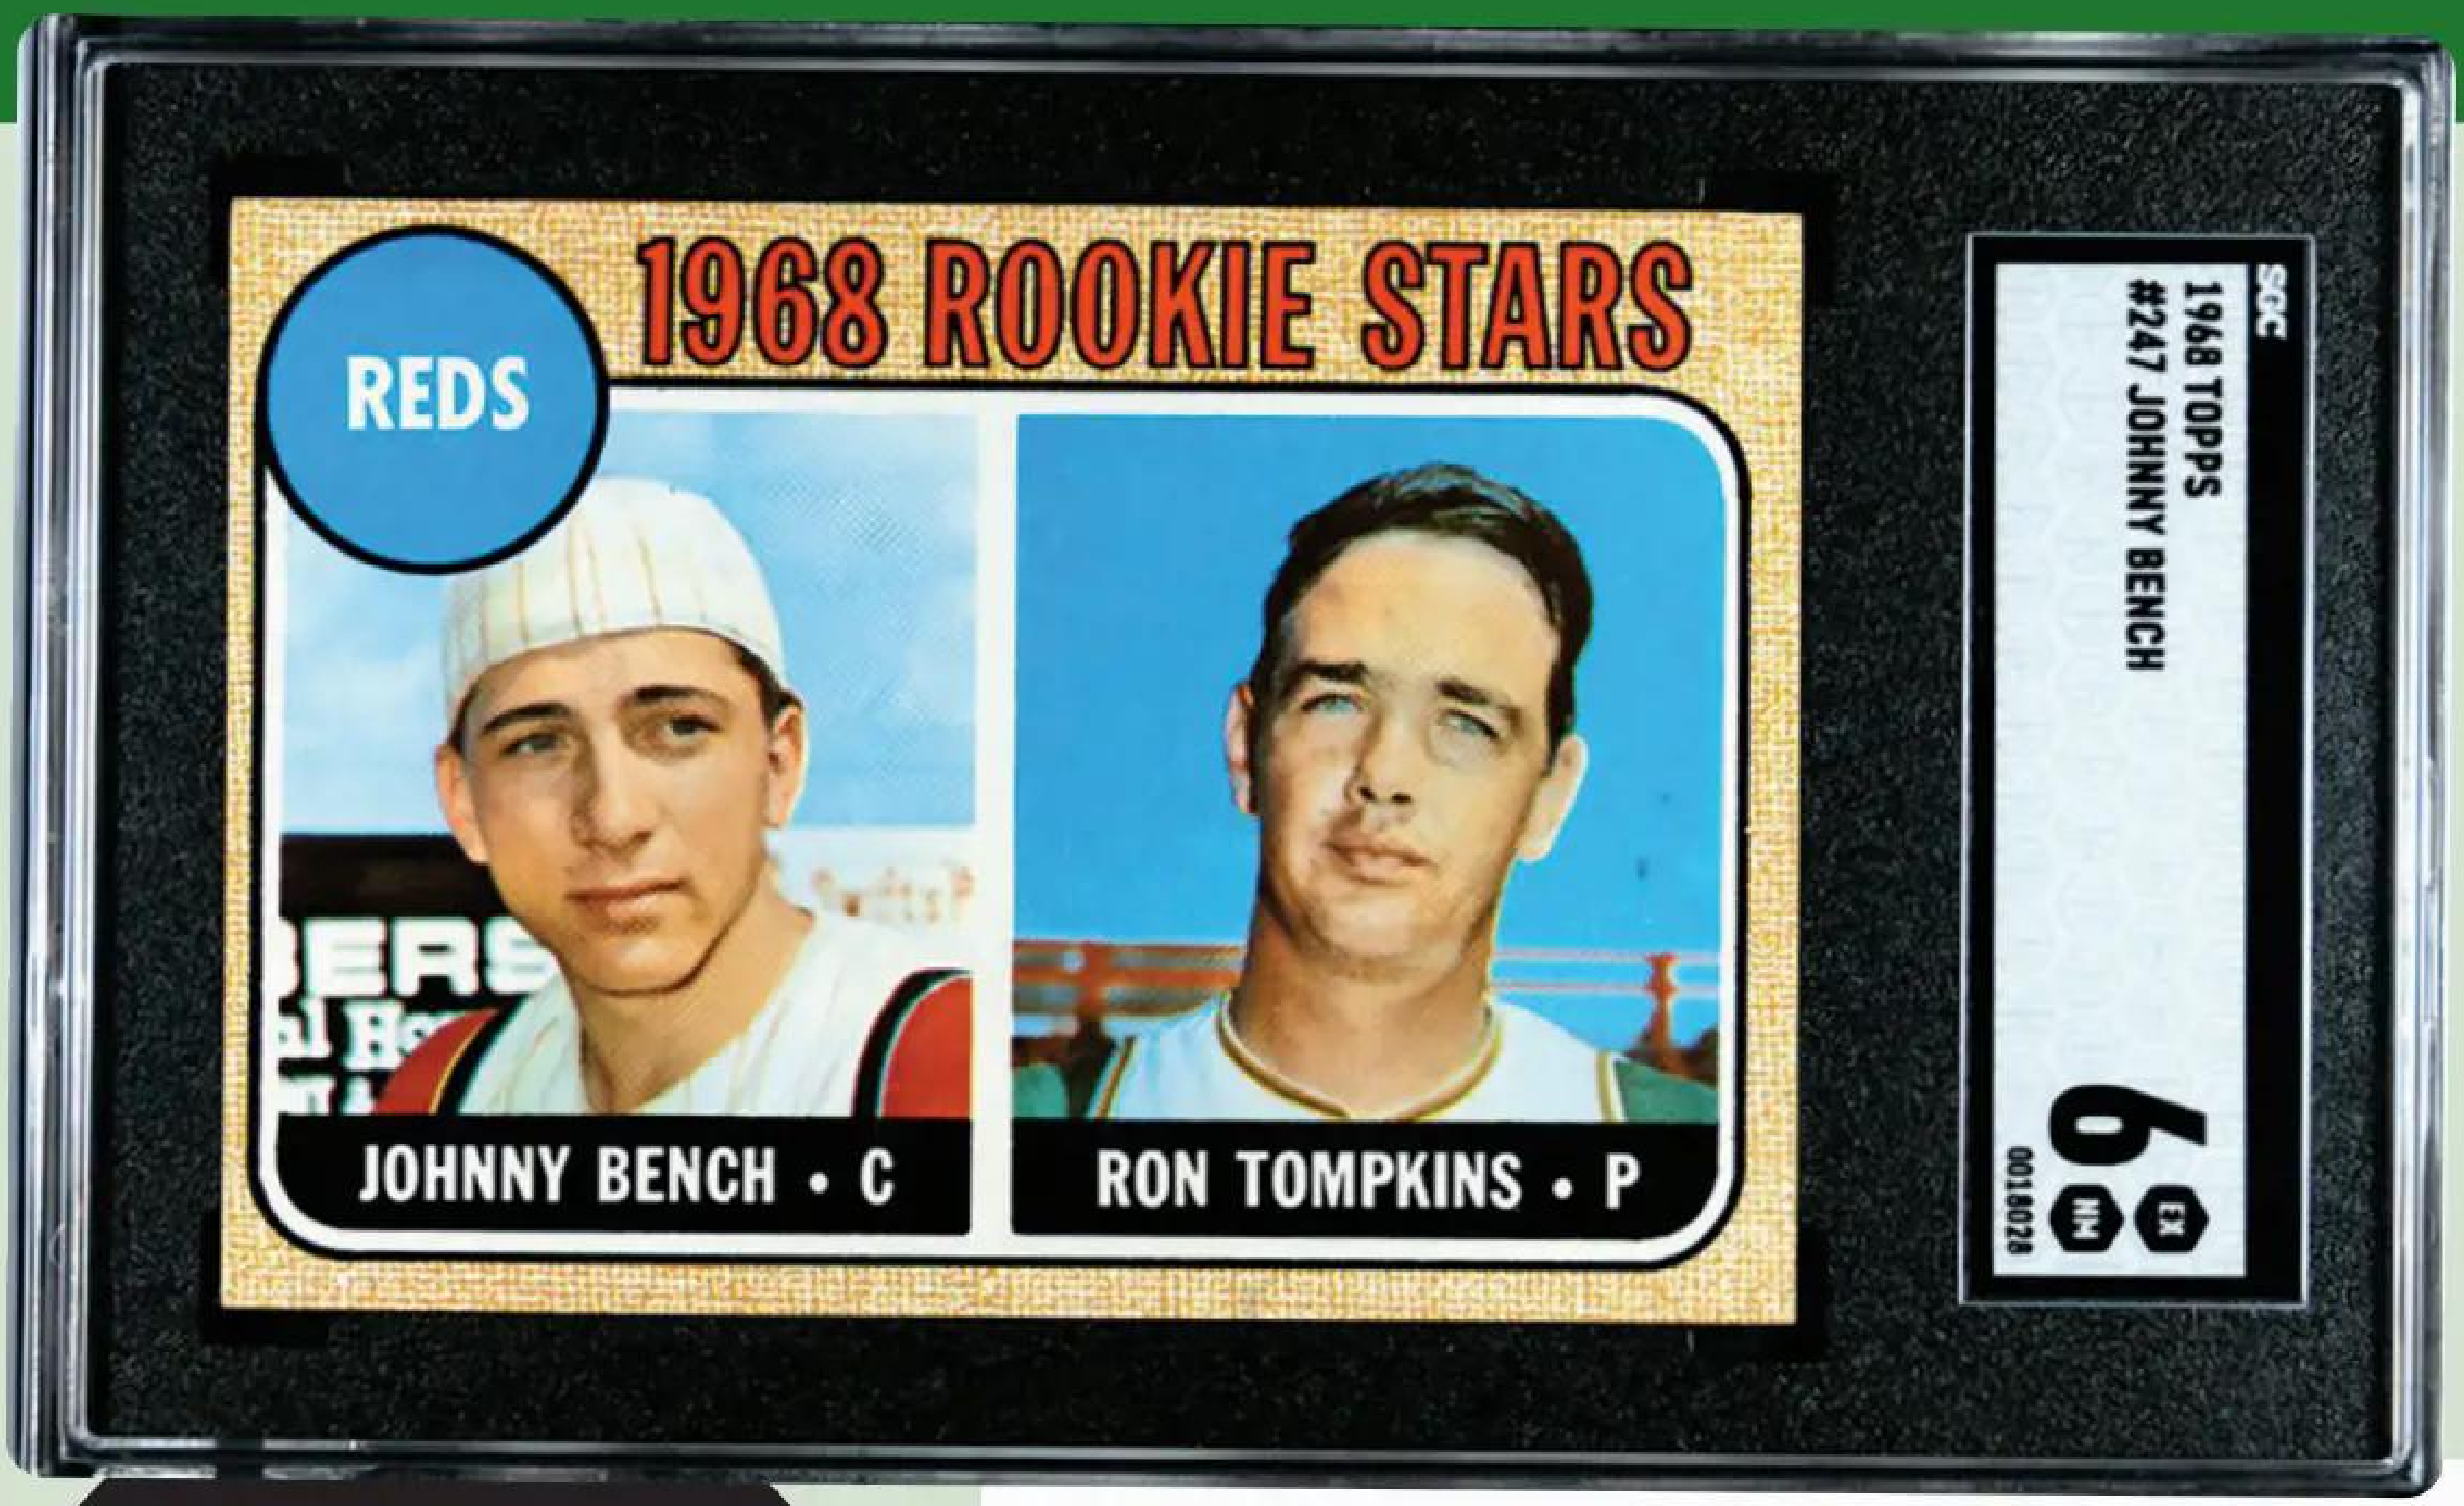
Hebner played a key role in Pittsburgh's five NL East flags between 1970-75. He and Oliver both made their Topps debut in the Pirates 1969 Rookie Stars (#82). Hebner later appeared in the 1978 and 1984 playoffs with the Phillies and Cubs, finishing his career with four home runs and 16 RBI in postseason play.

Diamonds in the rough

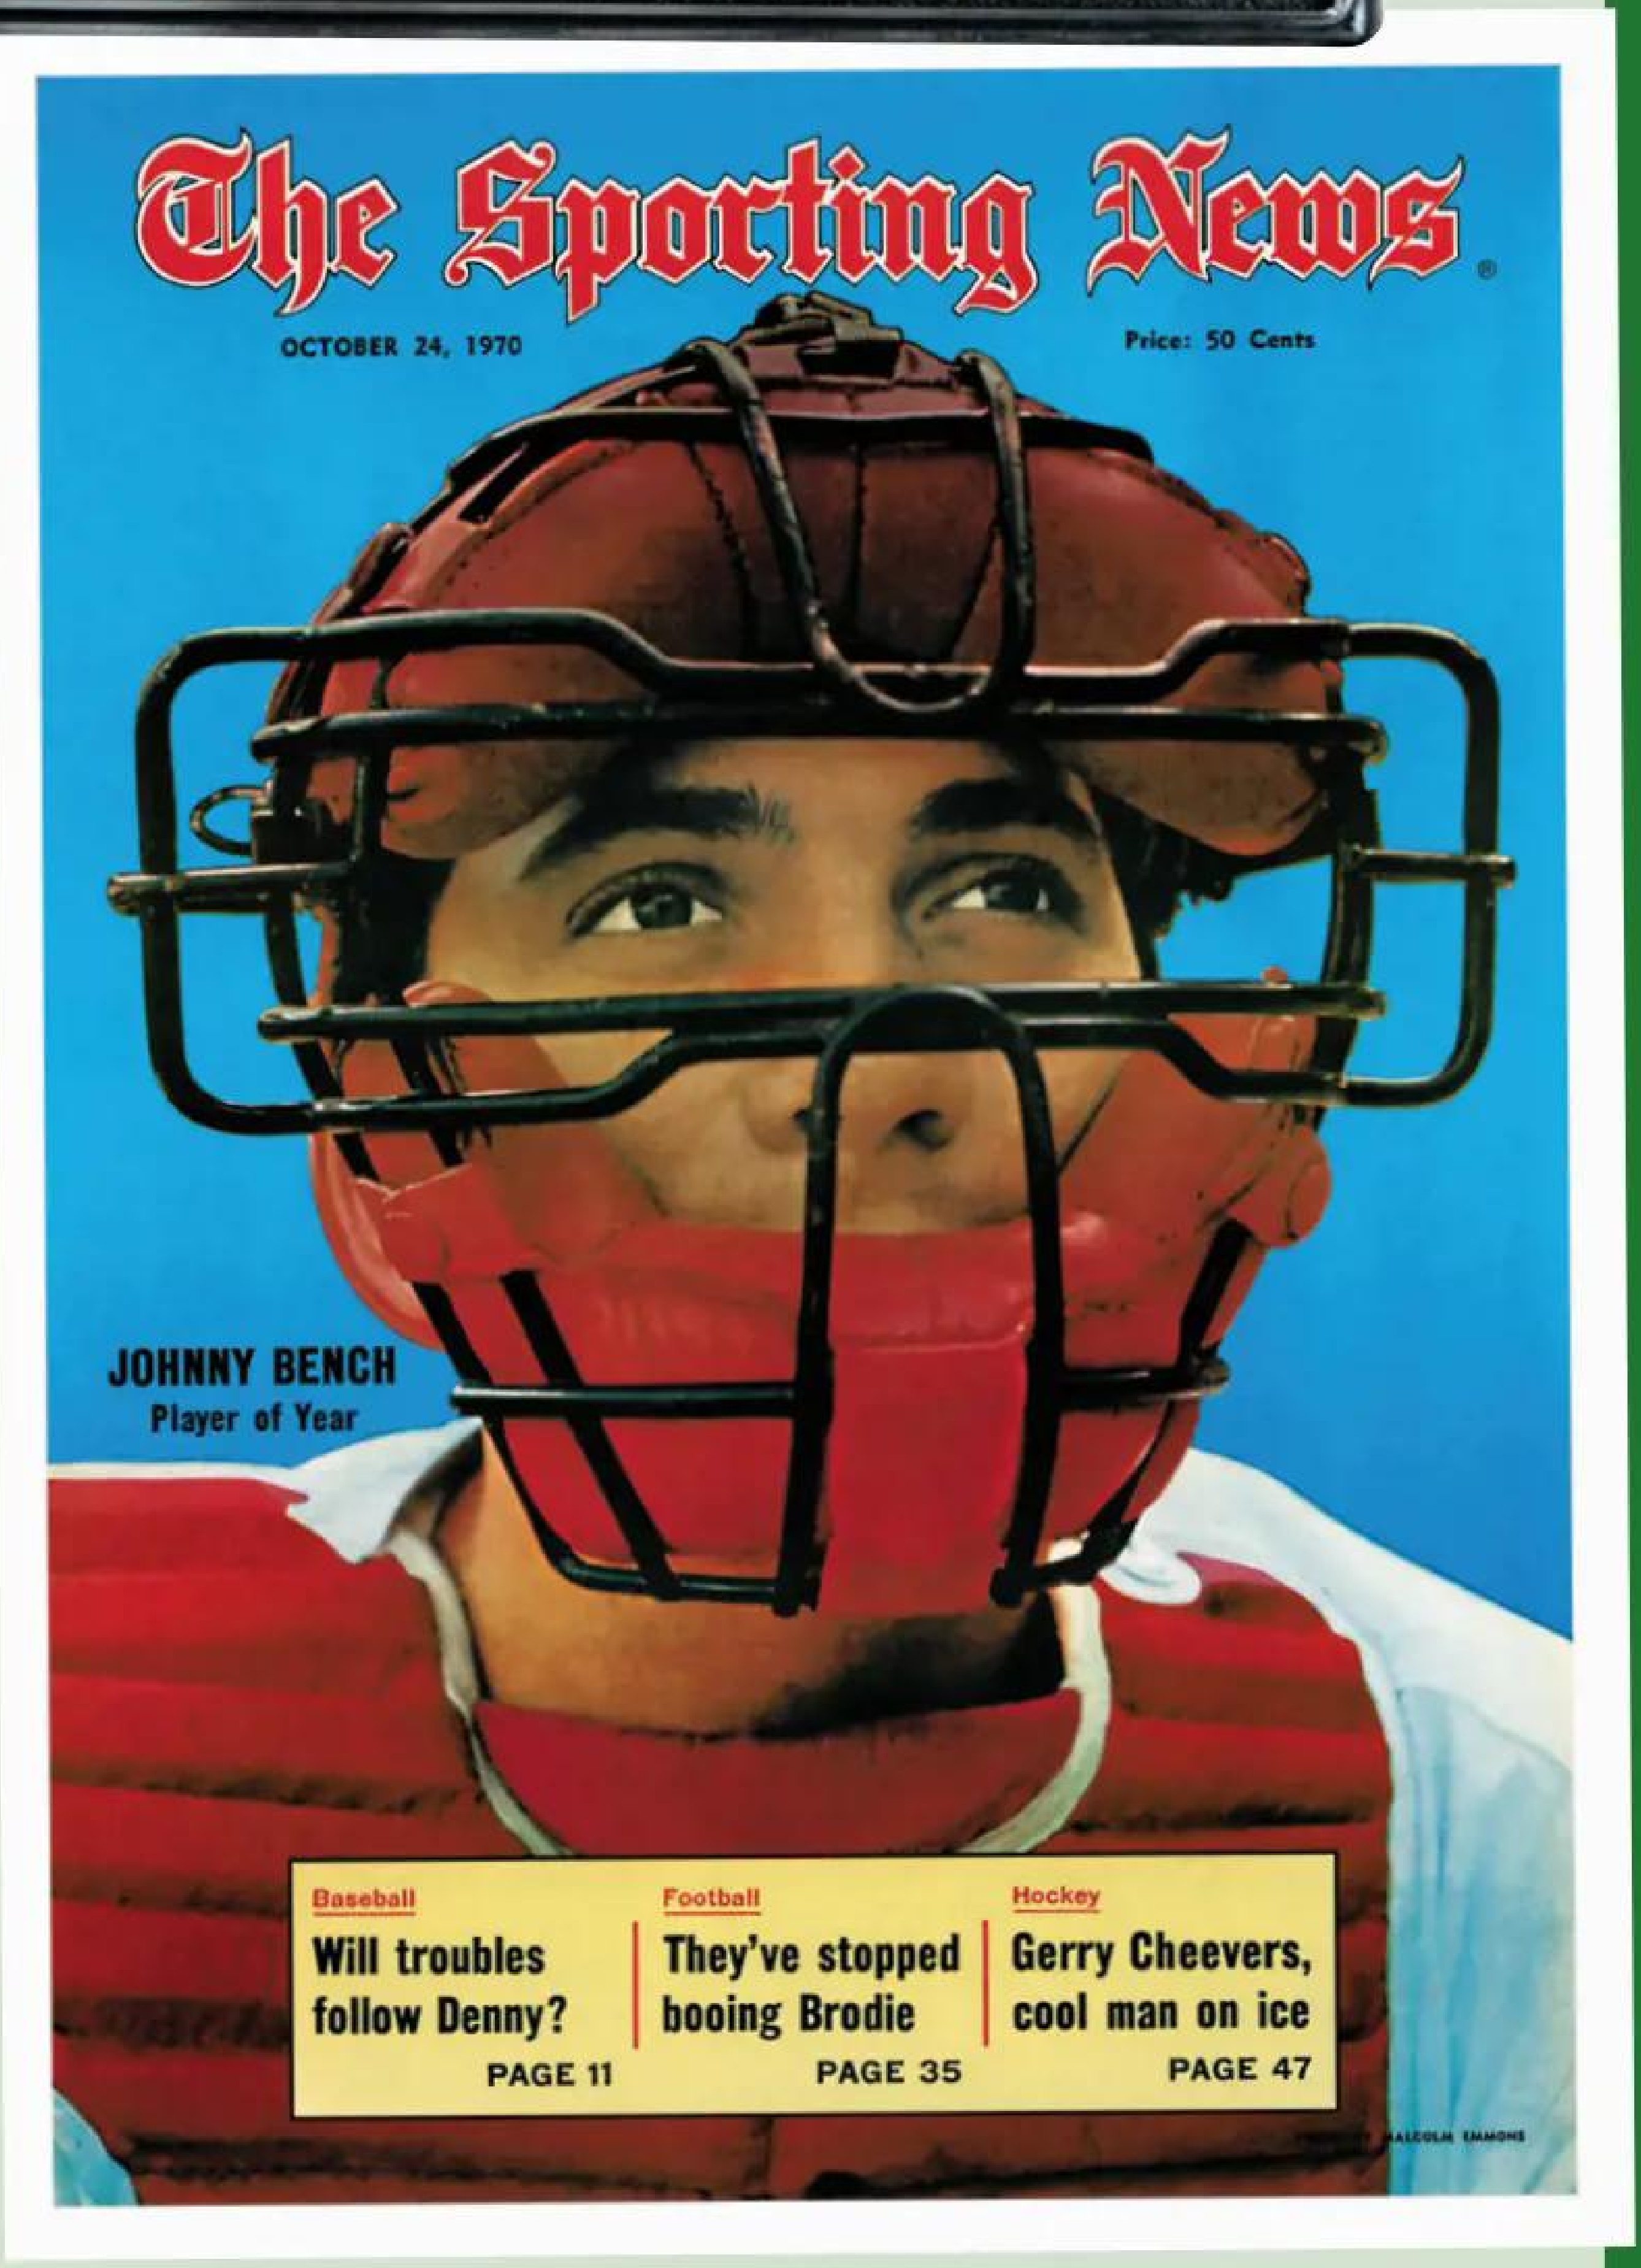
With a population of roughly 700 people, Binger, Oklahoma, was never thought of as a hotbed for major league talent. But in the 2nd round of the 1965 draft, the Cincinnati Reds selected 17-year-old Johnny Lee Bench (1968 Topps #247). The young backstop would go on to lead the Big Red Machine to six NL West division titles, four pennants and two world championships, capturing the World Series MVP in the Reds' sweep over the Yankees in '76 (1977 Topps #412) along the way.

Bench was the complete package. His unique style behind the plate revolutionized the game while his power numbers at the plate broke both single-season and career marks for catchers.

In his rookie season, Bench was named the starting catcher in the Midsummer Classic. At 20, he captured his first of 10 consecutive Gold Gloves and was named the 1968 NL Rookie of the Year. Two years later, he was named the NL MVP when he blasted 45 home runs, a new single-season mark for catchers, and knocked in 148 to lead Cincinnati to its first NL pennant in nearly a decade. He won his second MVP trophy in '73 after clubbing 40 long balls and driving in 125 as the Reds made their second Fall Classic appearance in three years. Alongside Pete Rose, Joe Morgan and Tony Perez, Bench's timely hitting helped the Reds to back-to-back championships in 1975-76.



Johnny Bench went from tiny Binger, Okla., to Cincinnati and Cooperstown. He was a second-round pick in the first MLB Draft in 1965.



GETTY IMAGES

After the 1983 season, the Cincinnati great called it quits. At the time of his retirement, he was the all-time leader in home runs (327) by a catcher, and was among the career leaders in RBIs, hits, doubles and runs scored for backstops. He was elected to the Hall of Fame in 1989.

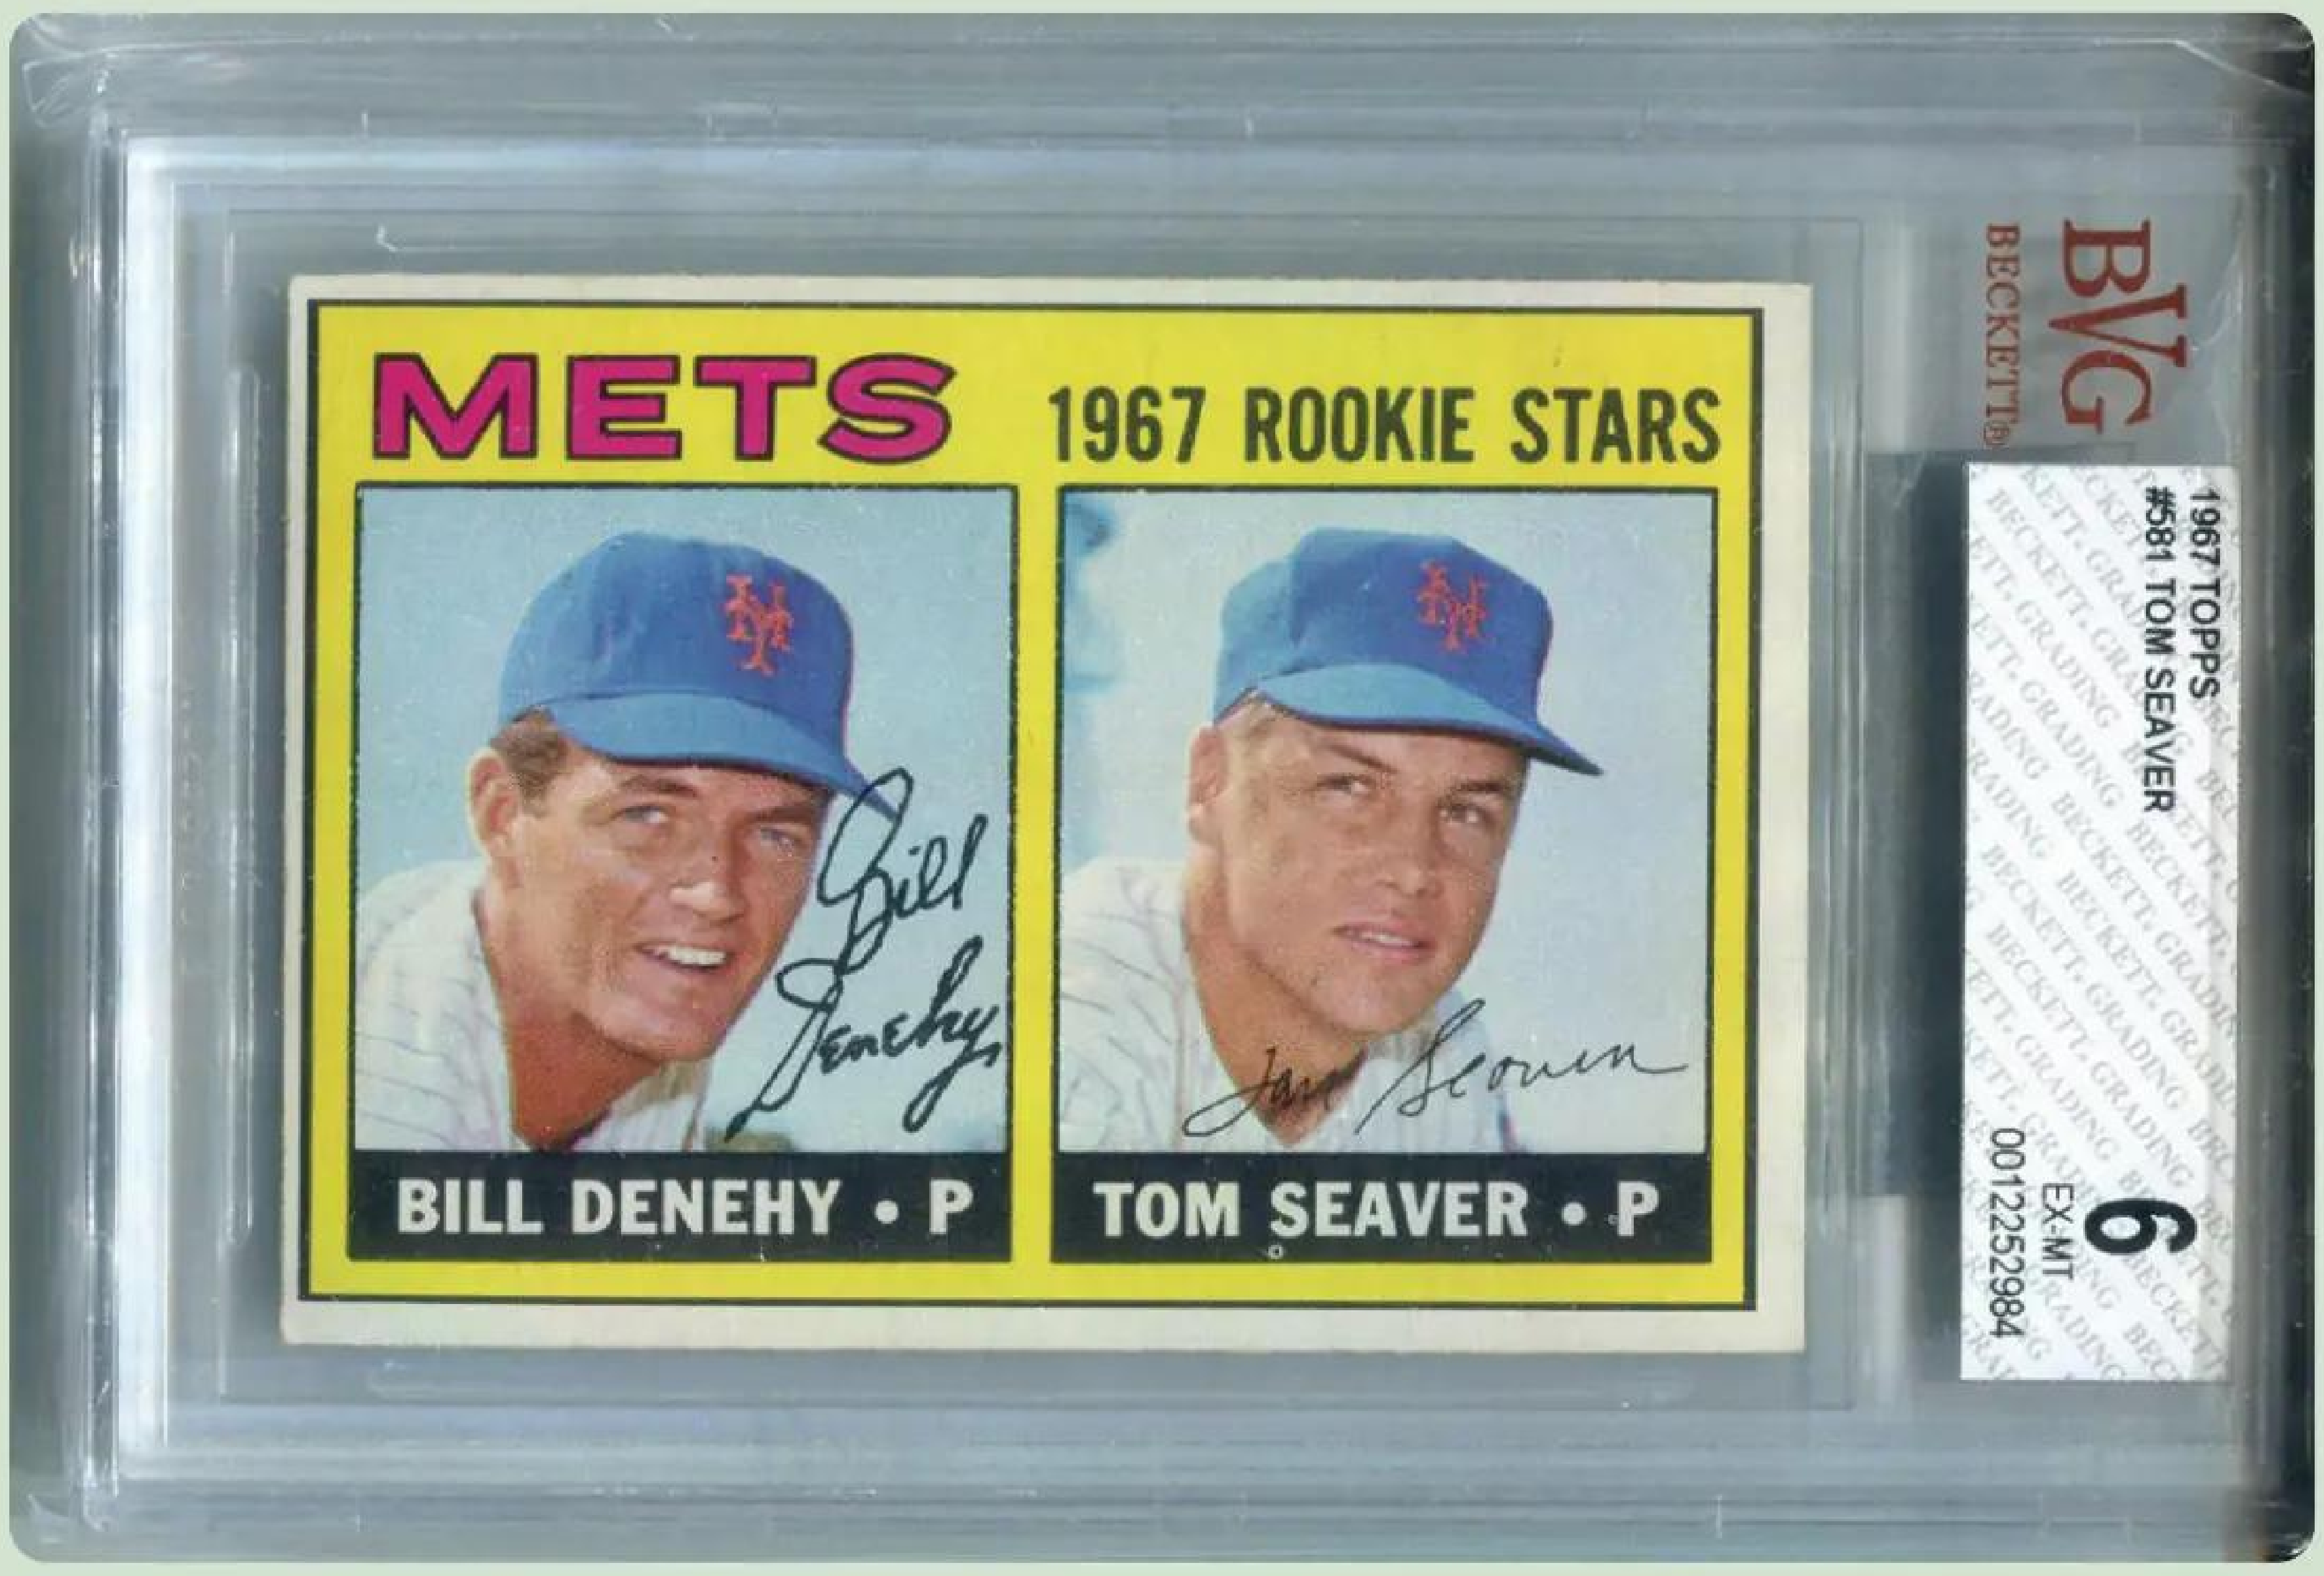
A strikeout machine who went 19-3 with 211 strikeouts during his senior year at Alvin High School in Texas, Lynn Nolan Ryan was selected by the New York Mets in the 12th round (226th pick) of the '65 draft (1968 Topps #177).

Ryan's teenage arm certainly lived up to the hype of Mets' scout Red Murff, who claimed Ryan had "the best arm I've seen in my life." After working on his control and adding a change-up to his repertoire, Ryan finished his first full season in pro ball with the Class A Greenville Mets with a 17-2 mark, earning him a cup of coffee with New York.

During the Vietnam War, serving weekends in the military reserves hampered Ryan's early development with the Mets.

"I flew home every weekend for my reserve duty," Ryan has said reflecting on his days with the Mets. "Because of that, I never pitched on a regular basis. If my turn in the rotation came up when I was gone, I would be skipped and not come up until my next turn. I was so inconsistent that being an overthrower was not a good combination."

When Ryan returned to the Bigs in '68, he was used primarily as a reliever and spot starter. During the Miracle Mets' 1969 postseason run, his two appearances played a key role in their Cinderella season.



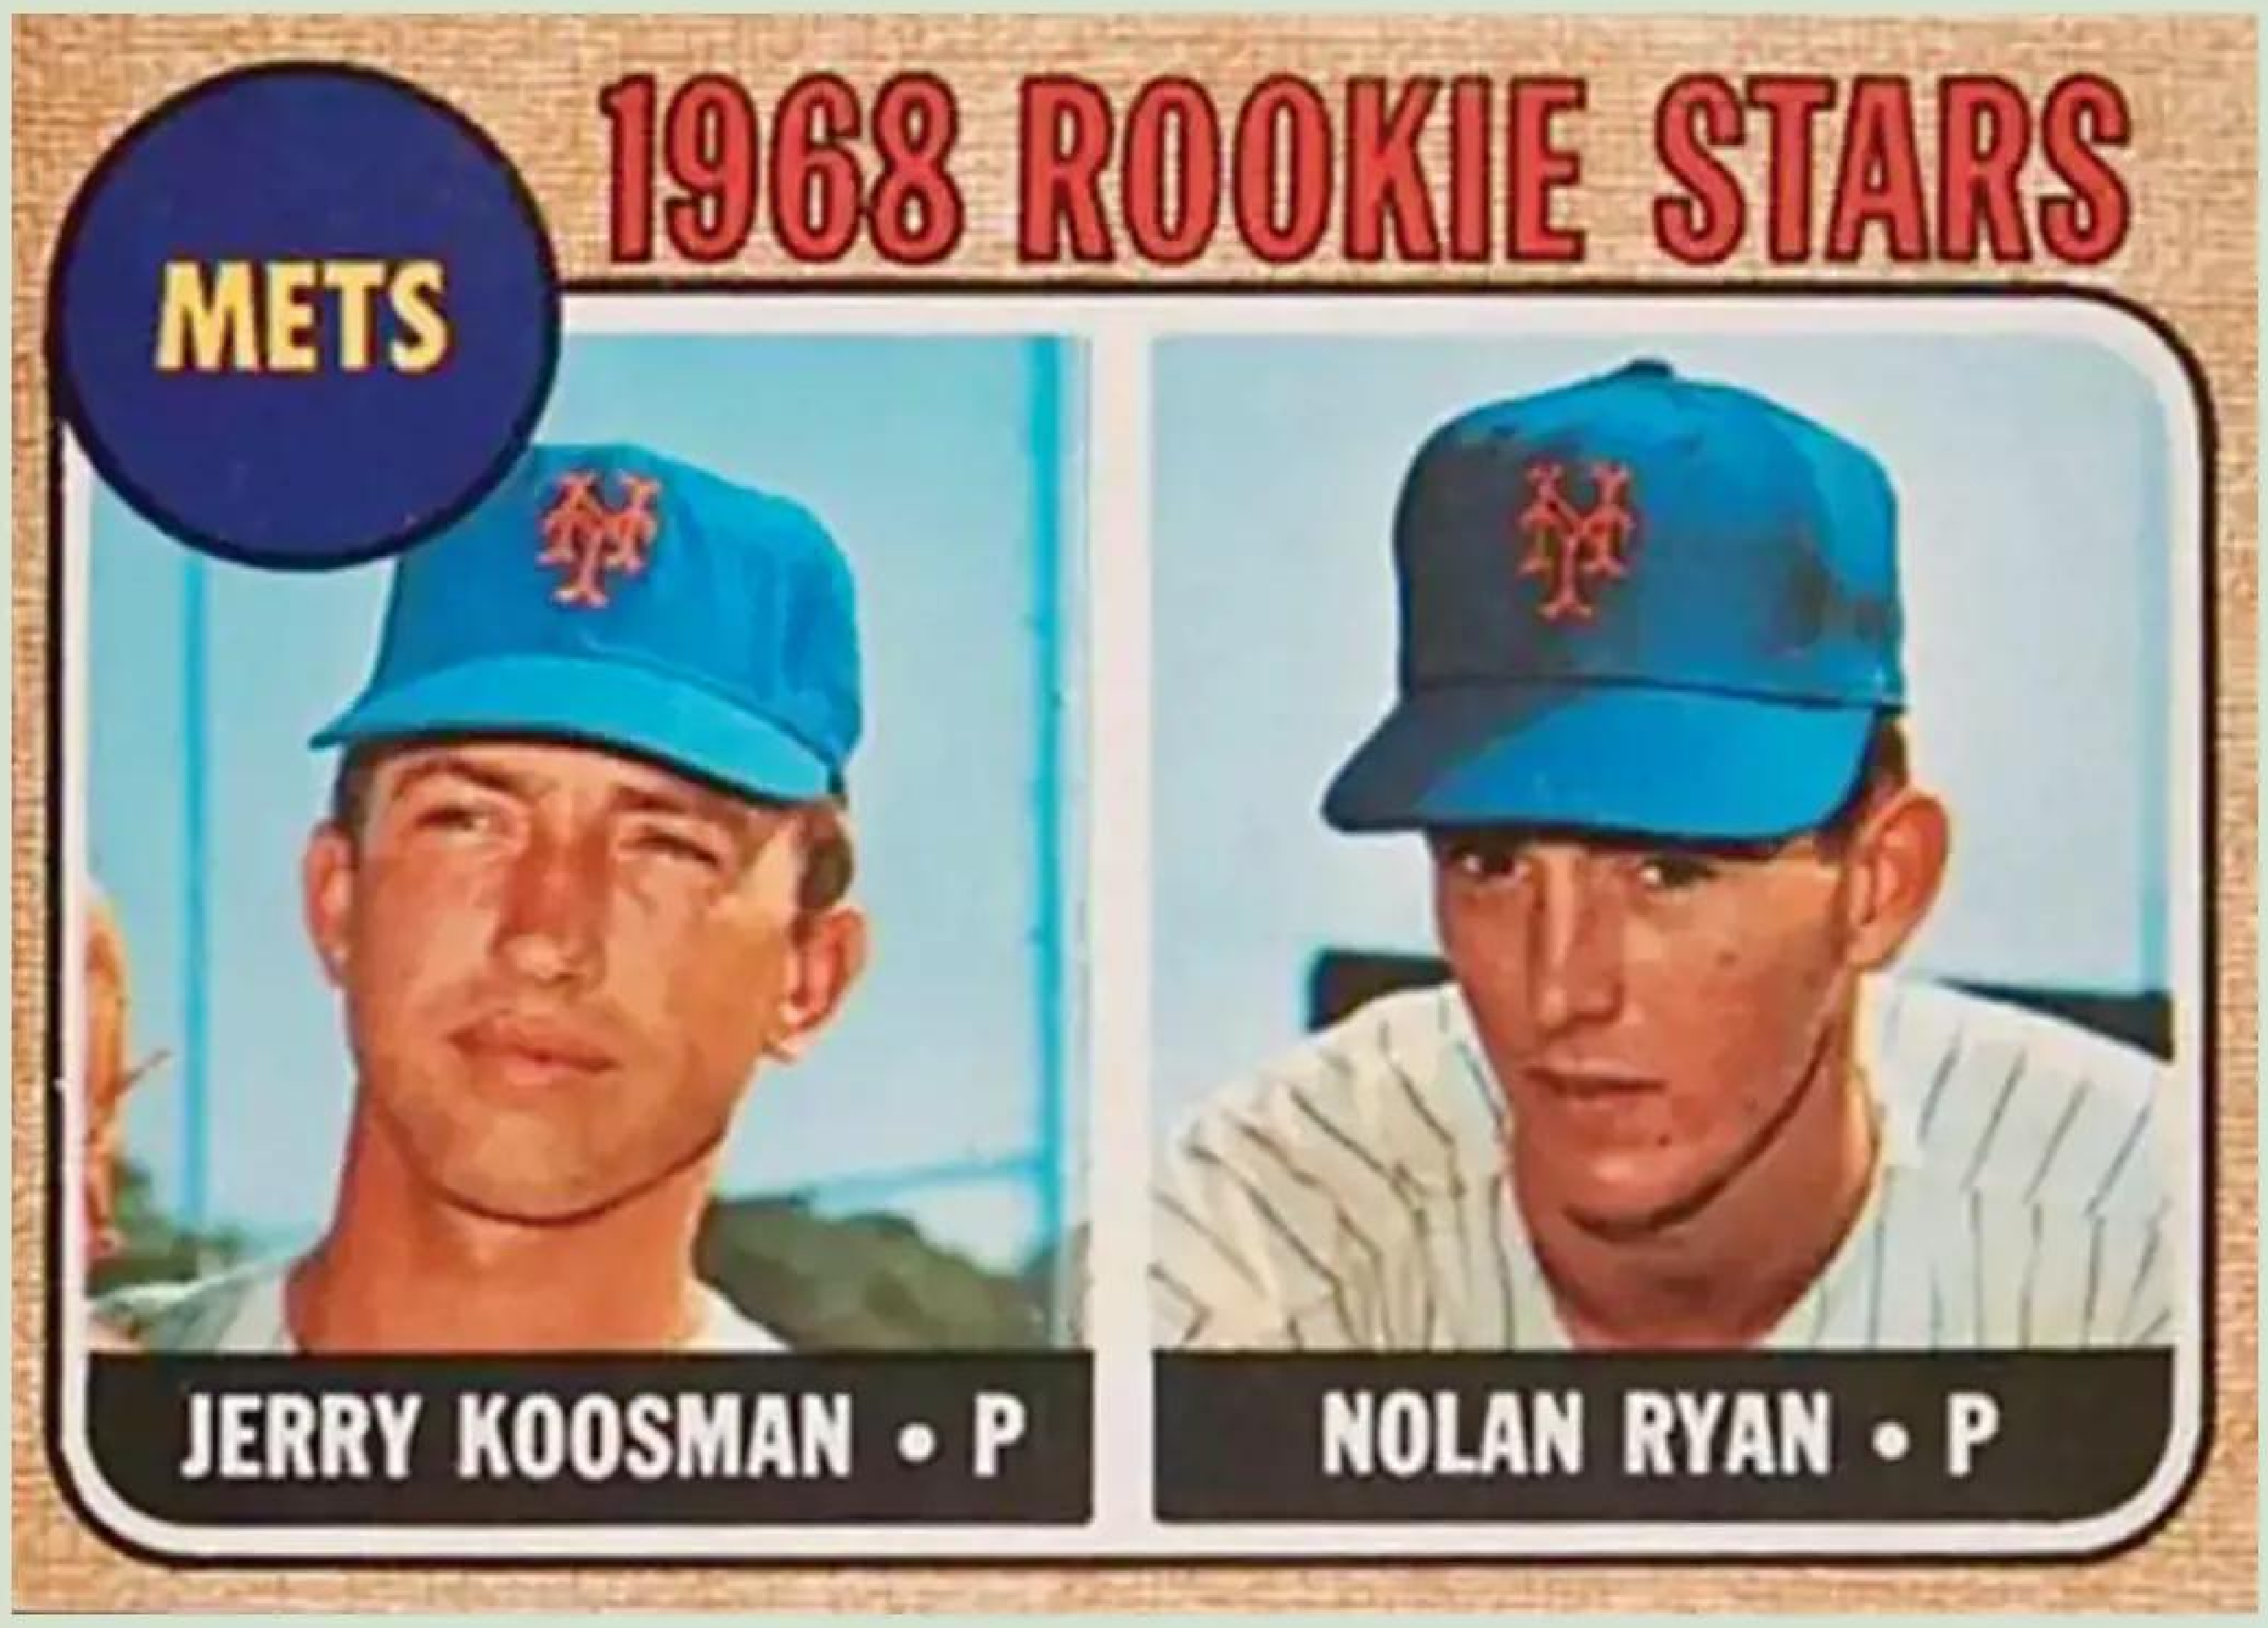
In Game 3 of the first NLCS against the Braves, he pitched seven innings in relief to earn his first playoff victory as the Mets claimed the NL pennant in the franchise's eight-year history (1970 Topps #198). A week later, Ryan pitched another 2 1/3 innings of shutout ball to give New York a 2-1 in the World Series as New York went on to beat Baltimore in five games.

Loaded with young arms that included 1969 NL Cy Young winner Tom Seaver and southpaw Jerry Koosman, the Mets dealt Ryan to the California Angels after the 1970 season. The trade has gone down as one of the worst in baseball history as Ryan became the greatest flame-thrower the game has ever seen.

His 5,714 career strikeouts and seven no-hitters will likely never be broken. After 27 seasons, the eight-time All-Star finished with 324 wins before receiving the call from Cooperstown in 1999 with a 98.9% vote.

After going 50-112 in 1965, the Mets had the first overall pick in '66. Rather than adding a big bat to their lineup, they went with high school phenom Steve Chilcott. Unfortunately, Chilcott would succumb to injuries in the minors and never make a big-league plate appearance. The big bat they passed on was Reginald Martinez Jackson, who was scooped up by the A's for the second overall pick.

Three years after leading the Arizona Sun Devils to 41 wins, Reggie was voted to his first Midsummer Classic after blasting a then-MLB record 37 home runs by the All-Star Break. Finishing the '69 season with 47 home runs and 118 RBI, Reggie had arrived in time for Oakland's five consecutive NL West titles (1971-75) and three world championships (1972-74).



Named the American League and World Series MVP in '73, Reggie was on his way to superstardom. His performance in the 1977 World Series with Yankees christened "Mr. October" into another stratosphere. He finished the decade with eight All-Star appearances, five World Series rings with Oakland and New York, and his own candy bar.

Reggie came full circle when he signed with Oakland in '87, wrapping up a Hall of Fame career that included four home run crowns, 14 All-Star appearances, 563 home runs, 1,702 RBIs, and one of the game's biggest personalities.

With the Mets, he was known as "The Franchise." But that nickname could have easily been with any other team invited to throw their name into the hat for a special draft lottery.

Tom Seaver was originally drafted in the 10th round of the 1965 draft by the Los Angeles Dodgers, but passed after the LA wouldn't match his counteroffer. After signing with the Braves in the secondary January draft, Baseball Commissioner William Eckert voided the contract because Seaver was on the USC roster for two exhibition games he didn't play in. If that wasn't enough, the NCAA considered him ineligible to finish the season with the Trojans because he had signed a pro contract. When his father threatened to sue the MLB, Eckert proposed that any other team that matched the Braves' offer would be eligible for a lottery drawing for Seaver. Only the Mets, Phillies and Indians matched the offer, with the Mets winning the rights to Tom Terrific.

Seaver was named the NL Rookie of the Year (1967 Topps #581) when he notched 16 victories. Two years later, his 25 victories captured his first of three Cy Young awards while leading the Mets to the promised land.

When Seaver called it quits in '86, he'd collected 311 wins, three ERA crowns, five strikeout titles and a dozen All-Star selections. When Cooperstown came calling in 1992, he received the highest vote percentage (98.8%) of any player up to that time.

The Infield

In an age when free agency makes it nearly impossible for teams to keep the same starting infield for more than one season, the Los Angeles Dodgers infield of Steve Garvey, Davey Lopes, Bill Russell and Ron Cey played together for 8 1/2 seasons! From June 1973 to the final out of their 1981 World Series, The Infield, drafted between 1966 and 1968, captured four NL pennants and a World Series ring in their final game together.

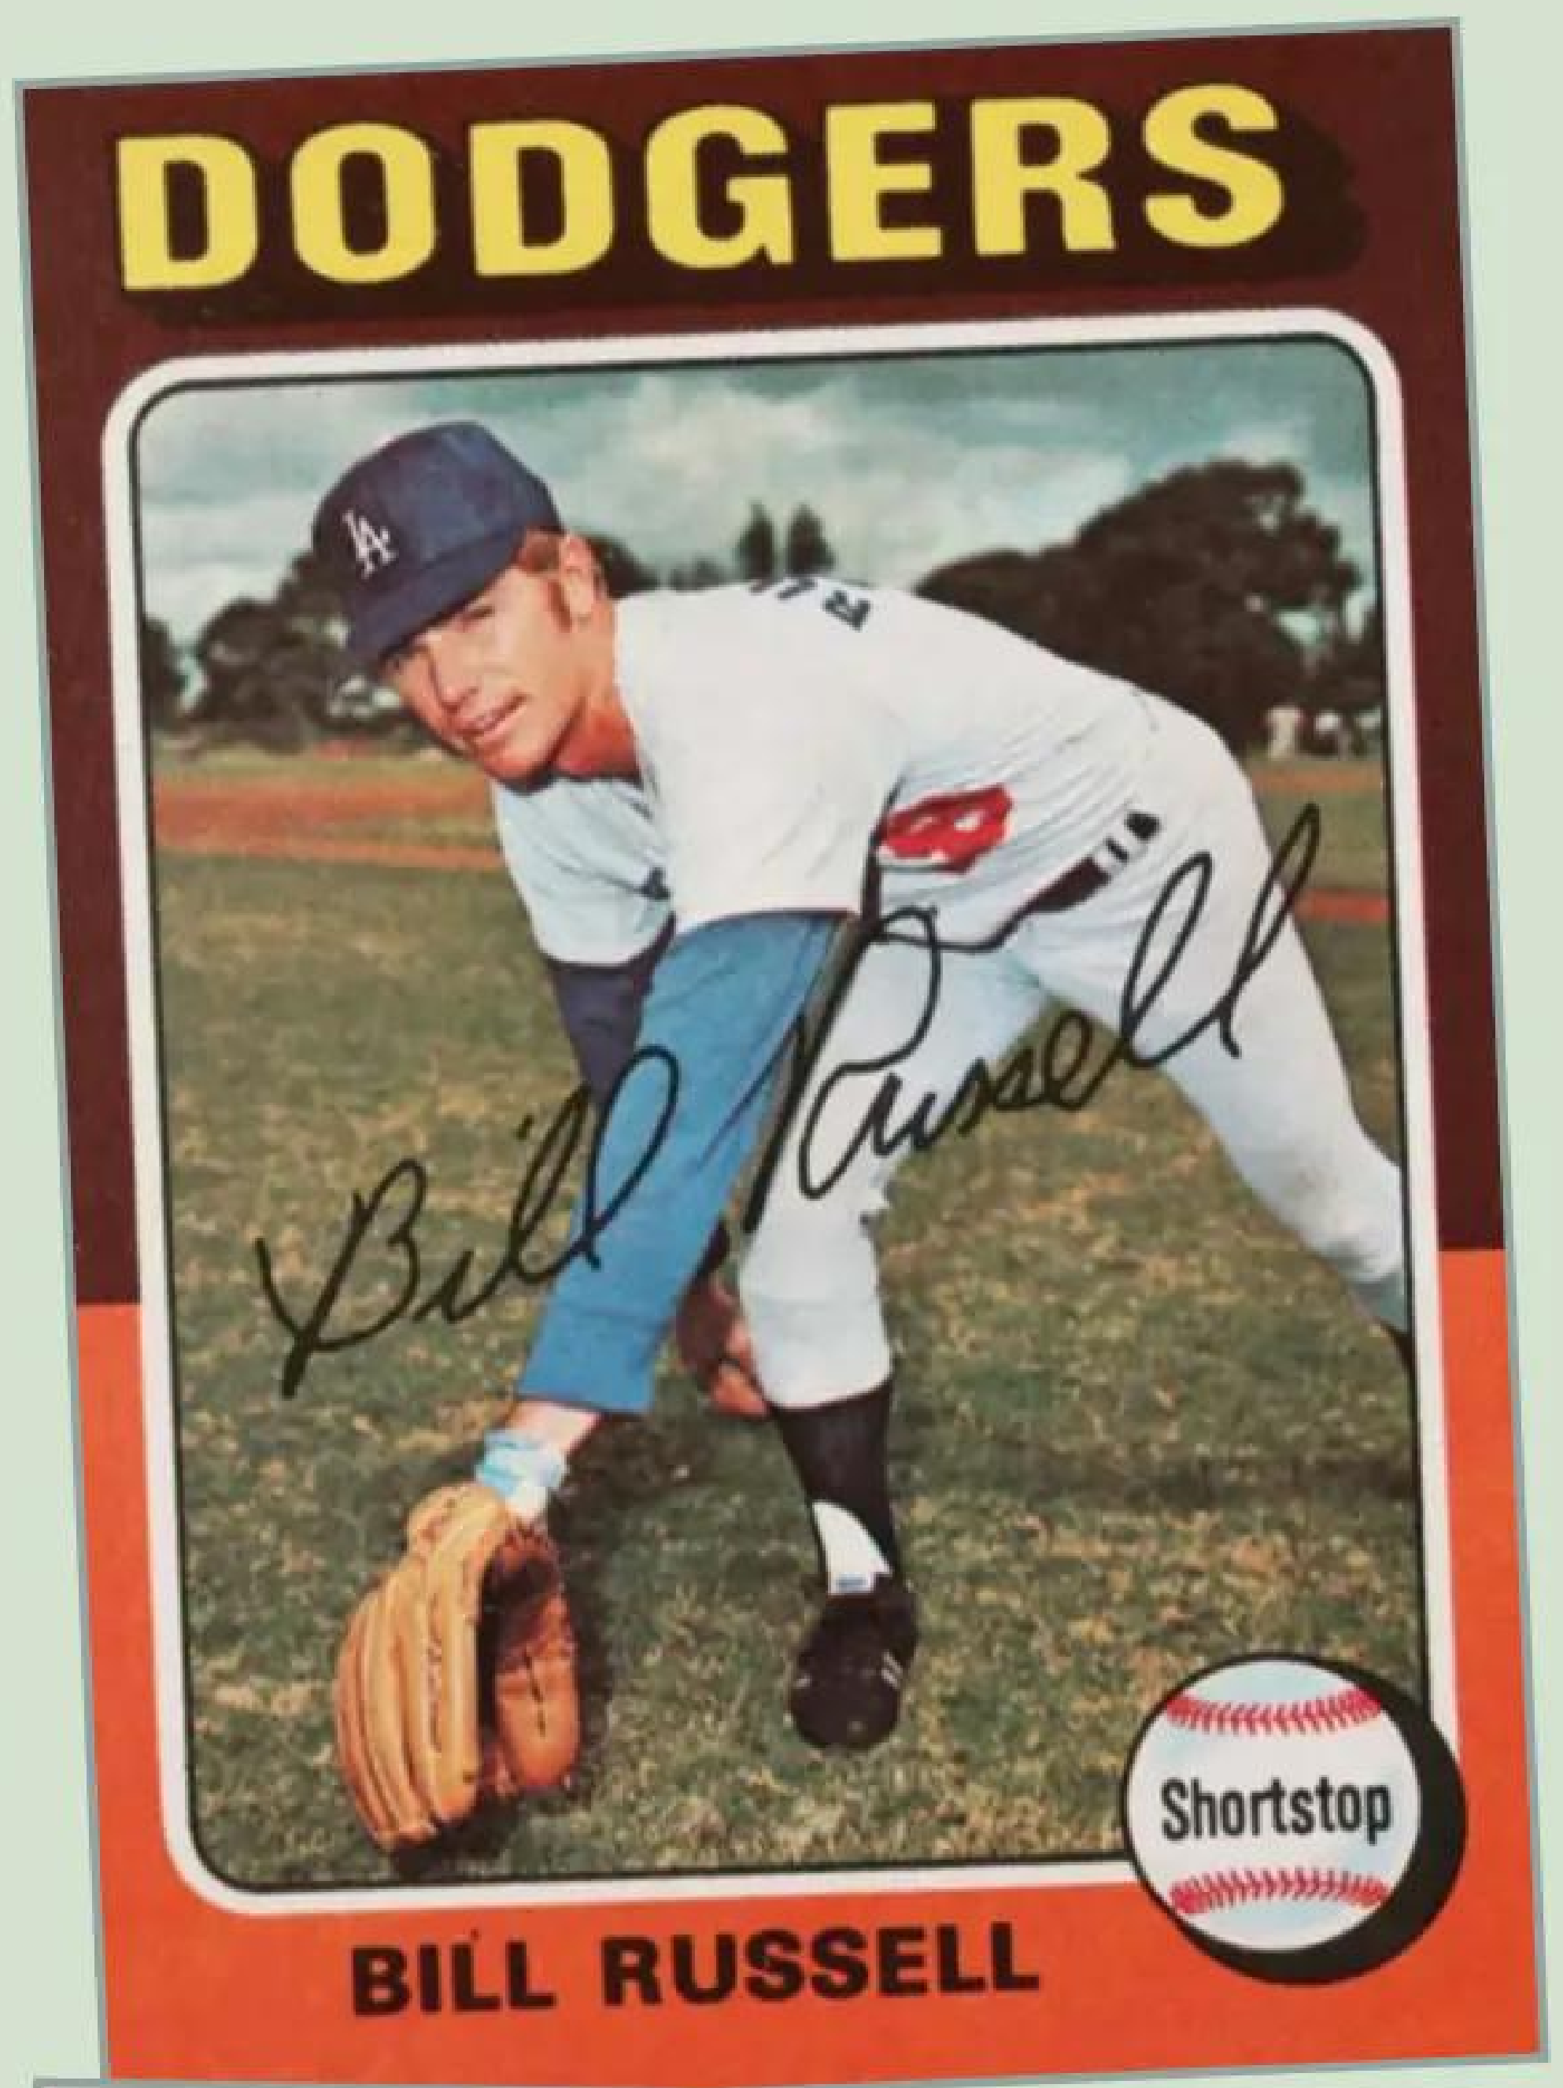
While each member became an All-Star in their own right, it was Garvey's star that burned the brightest during his 19-year career. Drafted by LA in '68 (1st round, 13th overall pick) as a third baseman, he moved to first after perennial Gold Glove first baseman Wes Parker retired. From there, Mr. Consistency would go on to set a NL Consecutive Game record of 1,207 straight games with the Dodgers and San Diego Padres that still stands today.

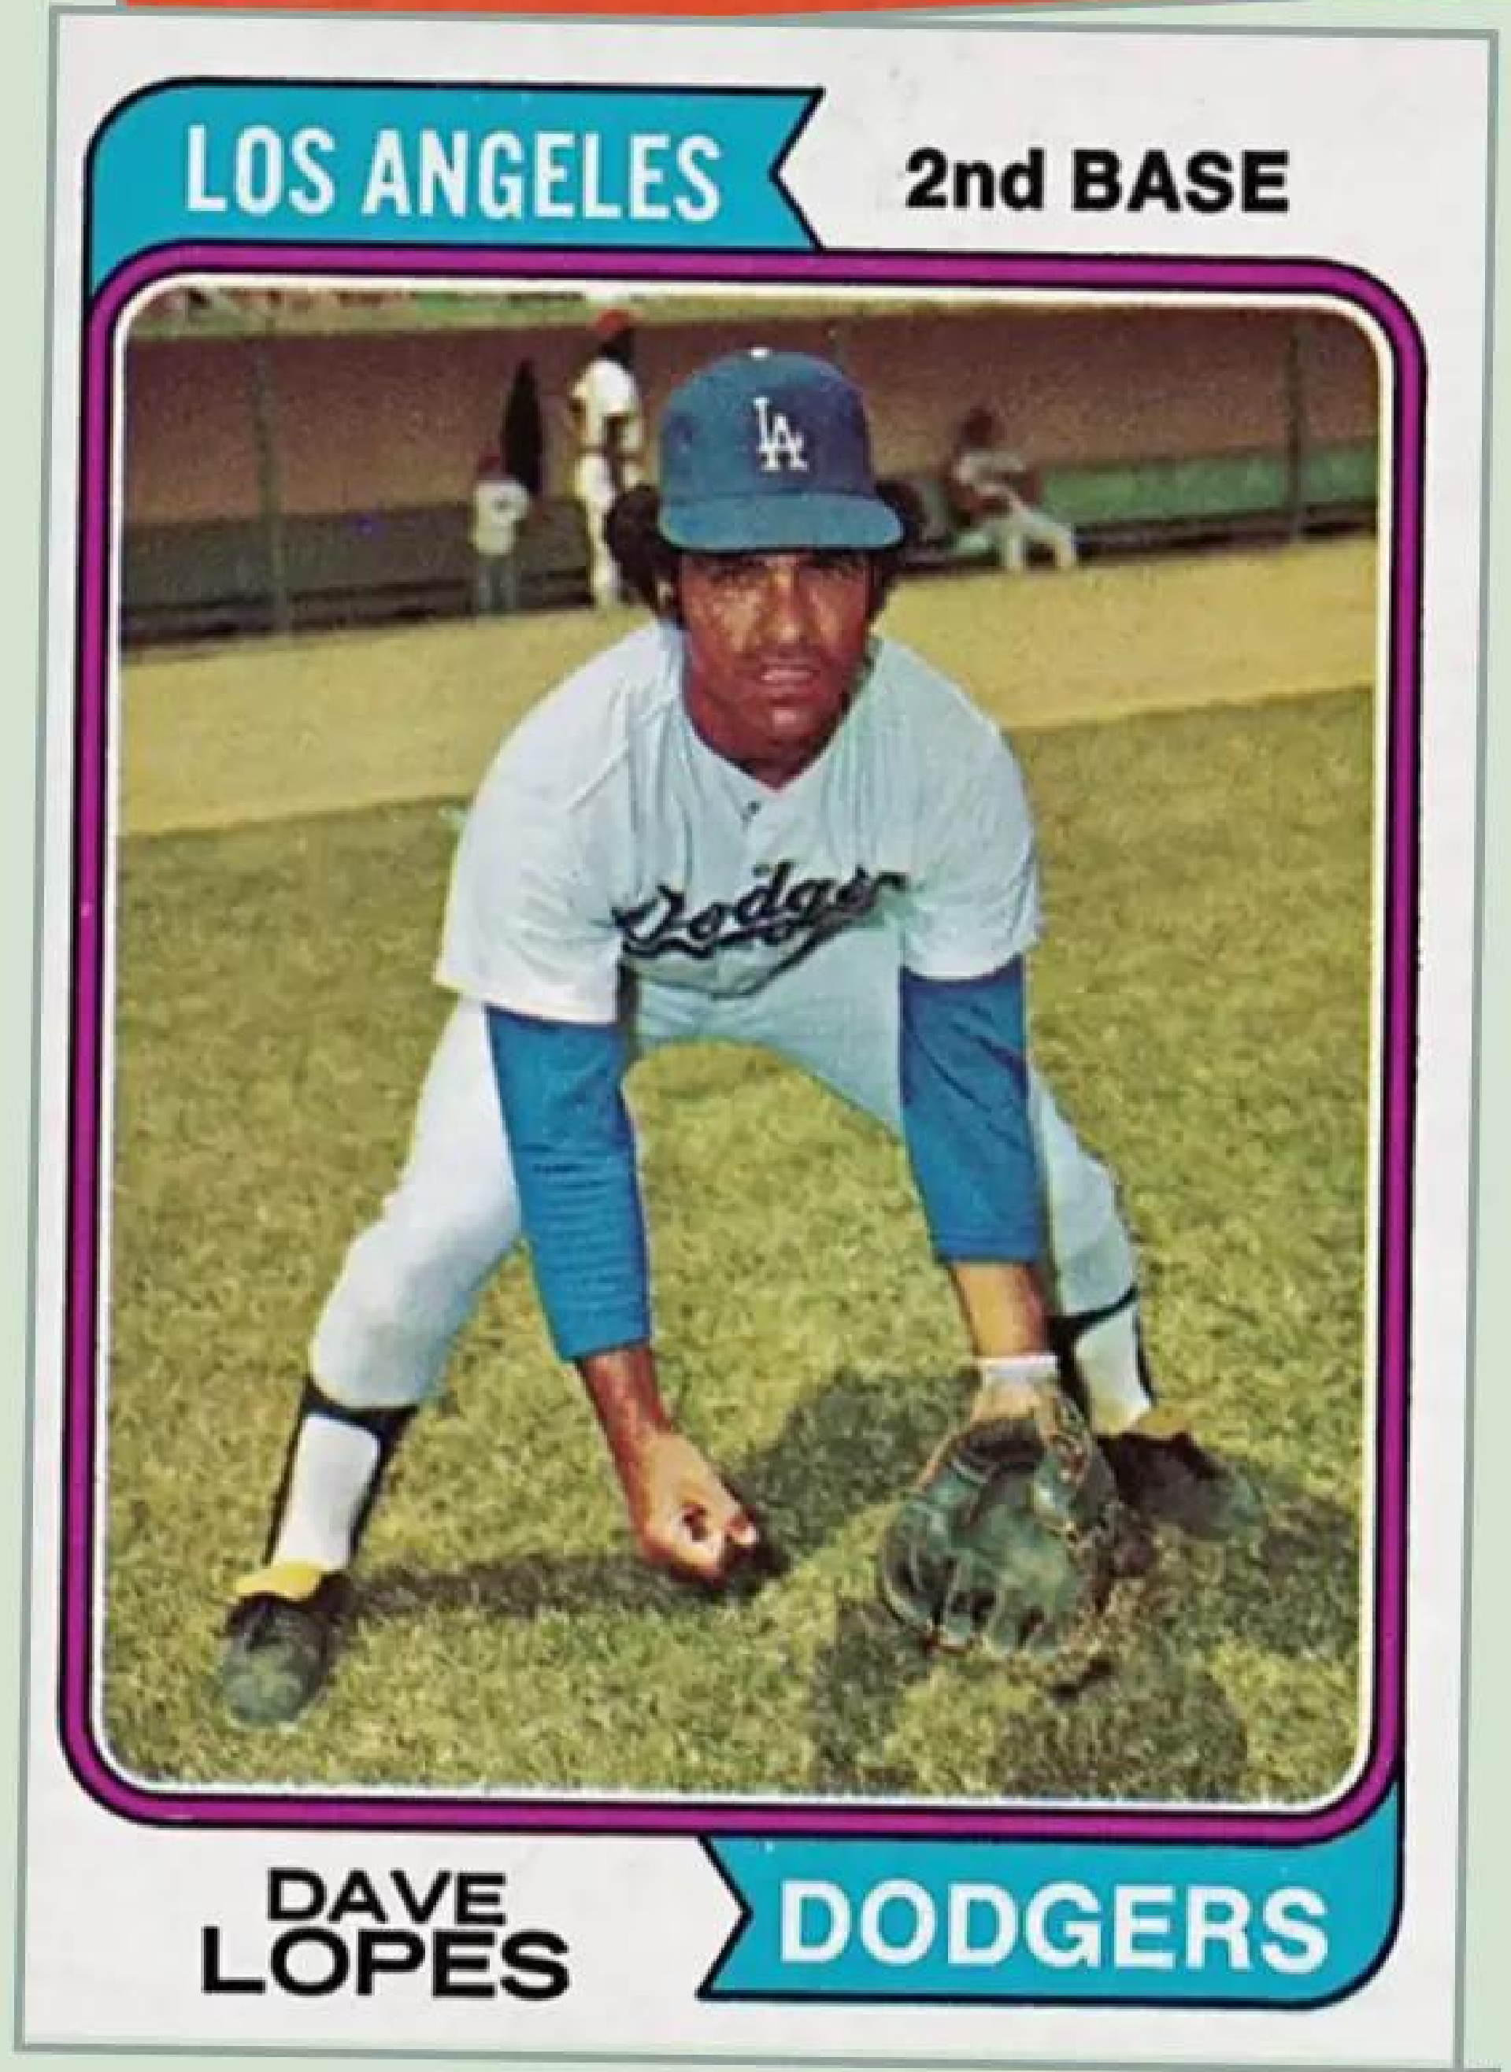
Along the way, he would appear in 10 All-Star games, nab four Gold Gloves, an NL MVP, and became the first player to win two MVPs in the Midsummer Classic. Popeye would finish with a Dodgers record six 200-hit seasons (five more than any other Dodger) and four 100-RBIs campaigns.

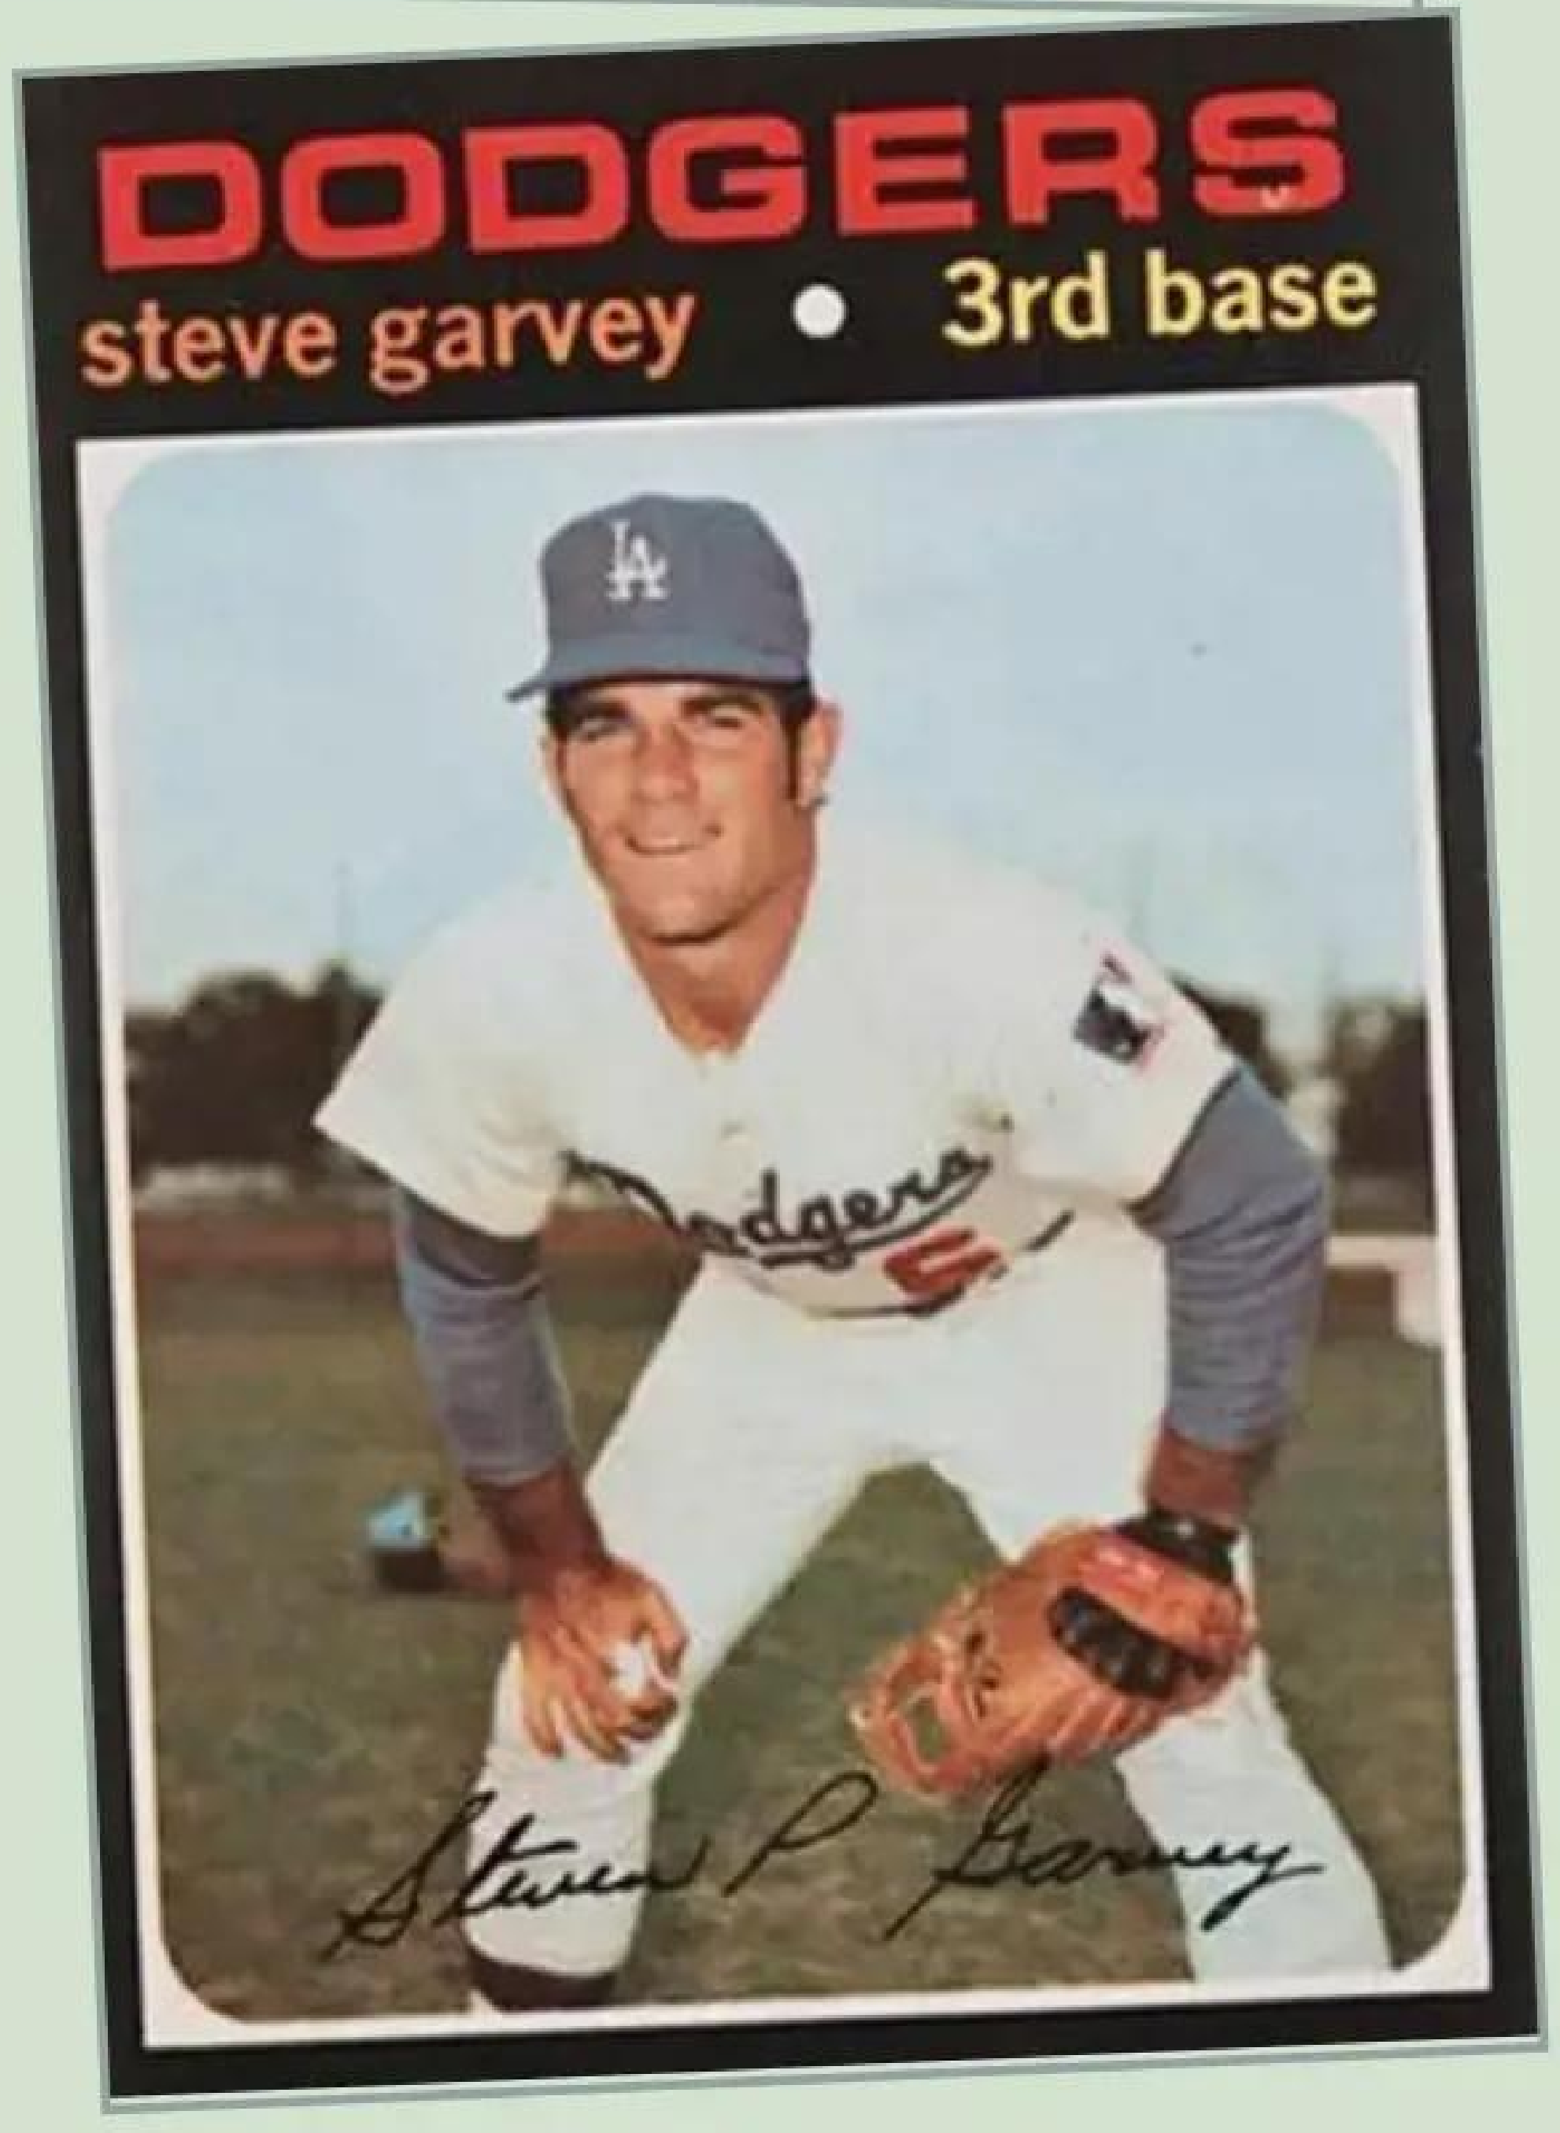
As a clutch hitter, Garvey (1971 Topps #341) was never better than in the postseason. In 55 games, he collected 75 hits, 11 home runs, 31 RBIs and batted .338, including the crushing blow in the 1984 NLCS that ended the Cubs' magical run as the Padres advanced to their first World Series.

Drafted as an outfielder in January 1968 (2nd round), Davey Lopes was moved to second base by minor league manager Tommy Lasorda. Offensively, Lopes (1973 Topps #609) became the catalyst for a productive offense that captured four NL flags in eight years. He led the league in stolen bases in 1975-76, was a four-time All-Star and swiped 557 bags during his 16-year career. One of the most prolific base stealers of all time, Lopes ranks third with an 83.01% success rate (557-for-671), and in '75, he set a major league record of 38 consecutive swipes without being caught.

As an outfielder, Bill Russell (1966, 9th round) didn't become the Dodgers starting shortstop until veteran Maury Wills retired following the '72 season. Playing more games than anyone in LA Dodger history, Russell (1970 Topps #304) held on the longest, covering the left side from 1974-83. During his 18-year career with the Dodgers, he saw action in five NLCS contests, batting .337 to help LA to four World Series appearances. Russell was named to three All-Star teams before becoming just the third LA Dodgers manager in 1996, succeeding Hall of Fame skipper Lasorda.







At the hot corner, third baseman Ron Cey (1968, 3rd round) completed the legendary infield. Offensively, the Penguin brought the pop, blasting 22 or more home runs 10 times in his 16-year career. The six-time All-Star helped the Dodgers to four pennants as was named co-MVP (with Steve Yeager and Pedro Guerrero) of the 1981 World Series. Cey appeared in a pair of rookie cards in the early '70s. His true rookie card (1972 Topps #761) may be a high number, but his second appearance on the 1973 Rookie Third Baseman (#615) is one of the decade's most sought-after cards with all-time great Mike Schmidt appearing on cardboard for the first time.

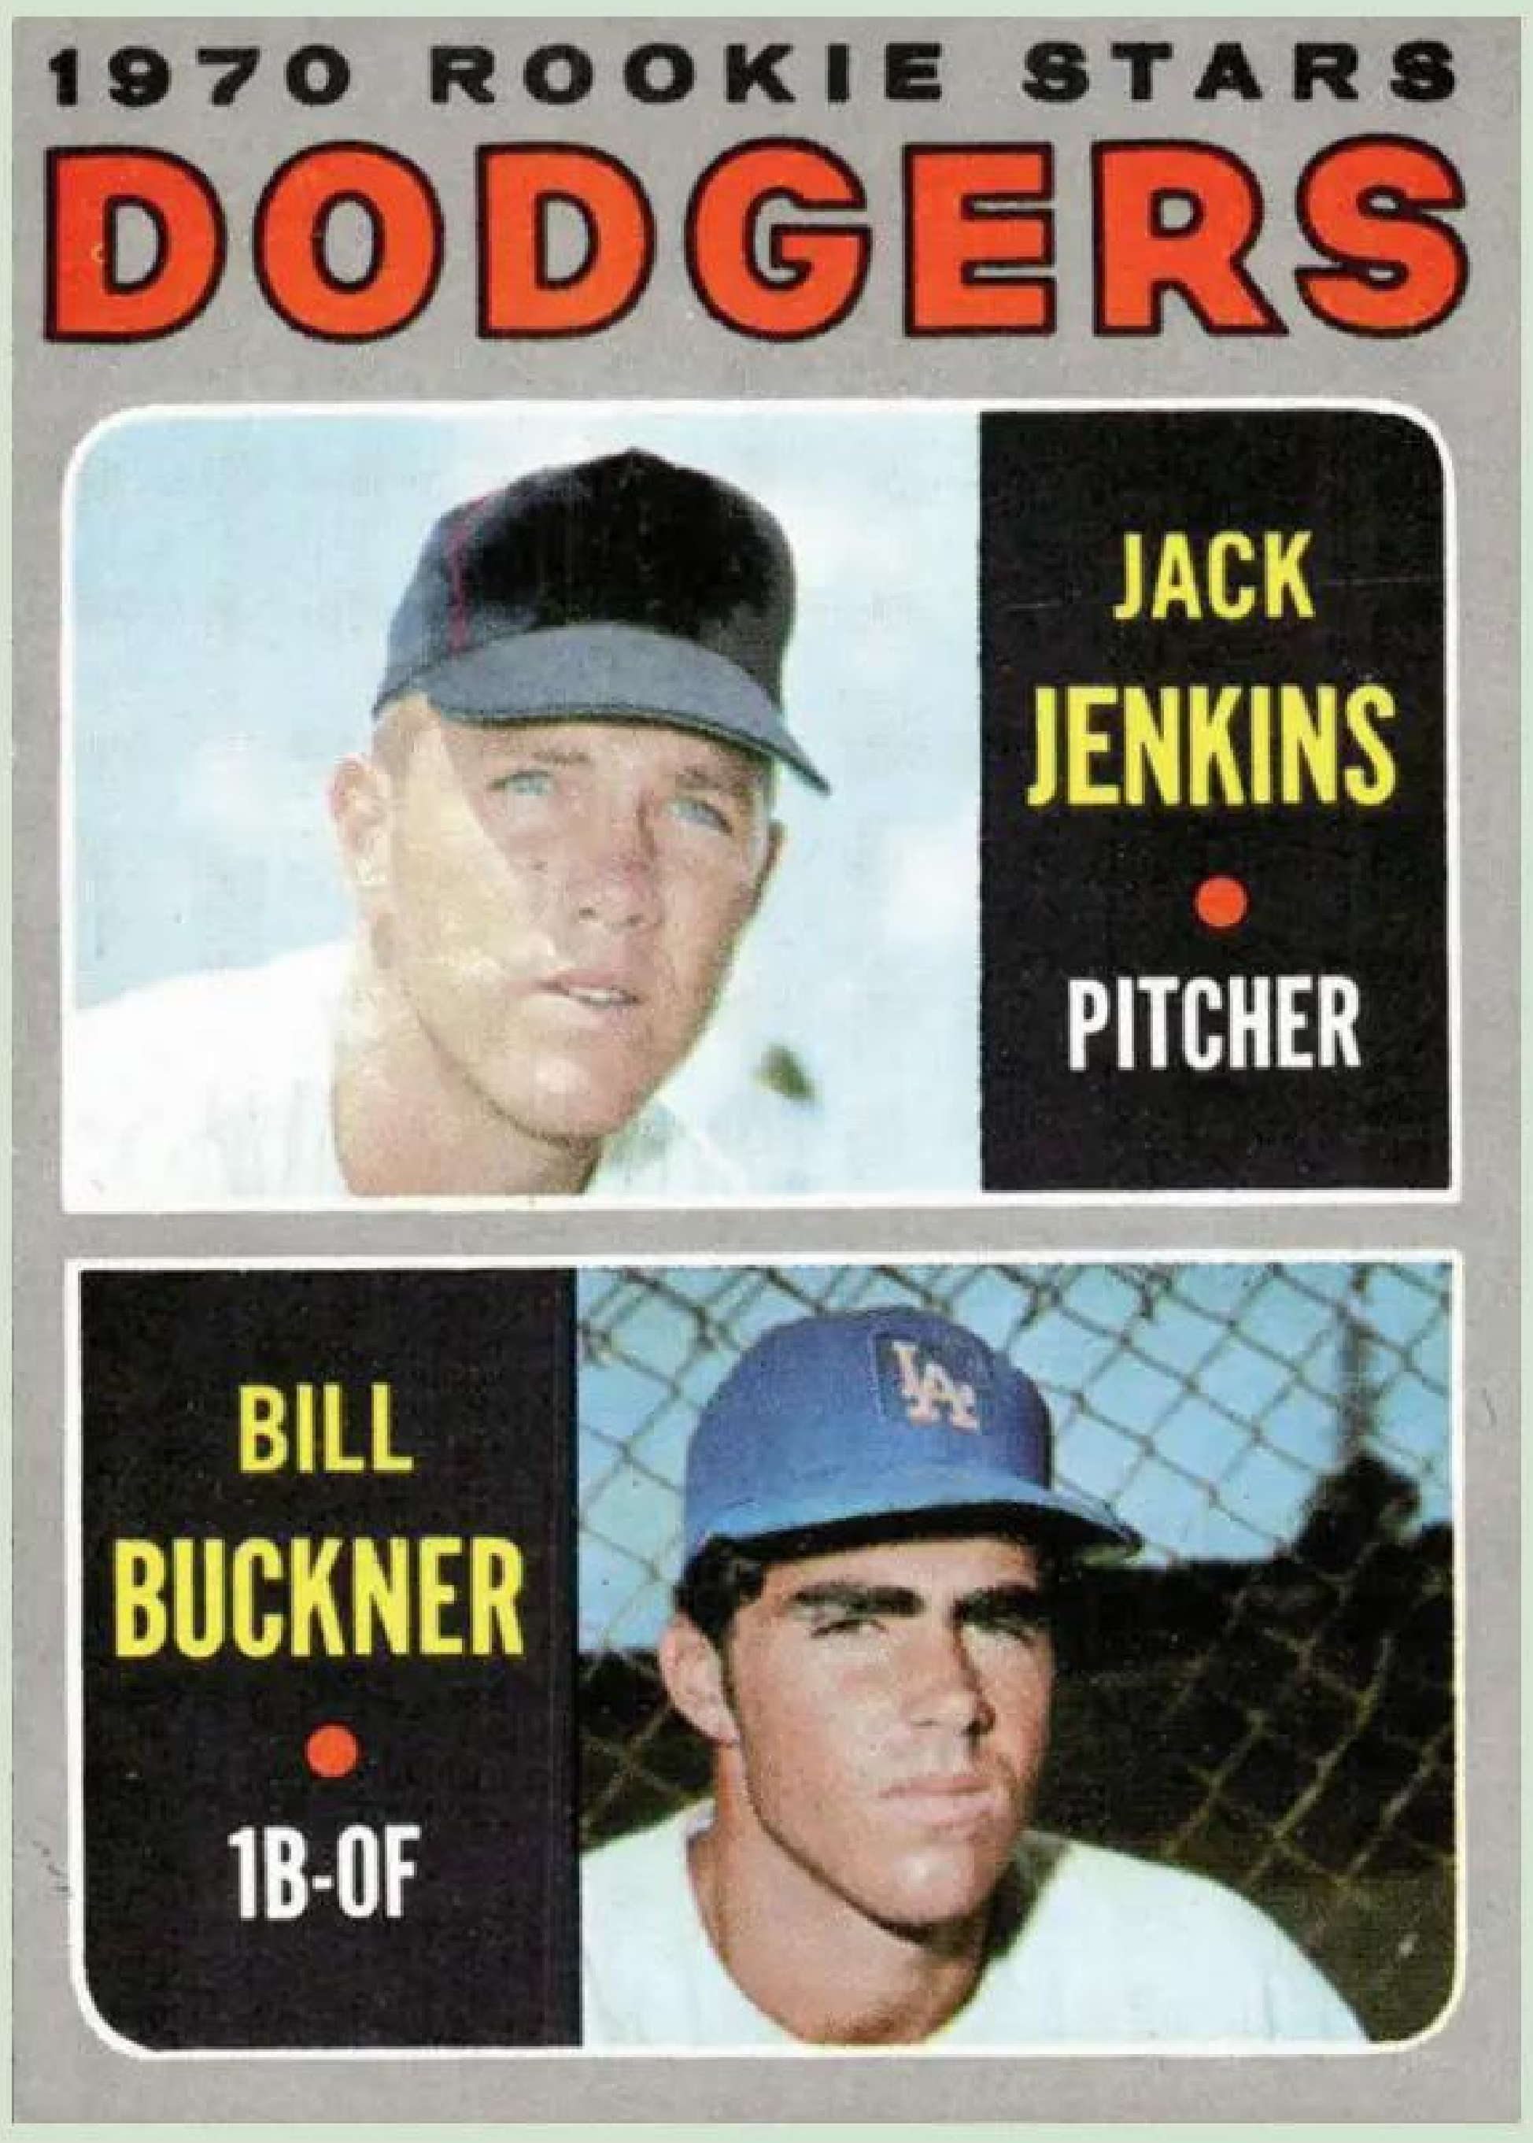
Looking back, Russell has said that the foursome's longevity was largely fueled by their success on the field. "We were very fortunate to be in an organization that kept us together for 8 1/2 years. In order to stay together, you had to produce, you had to win, and we did all that."

While he's not typically mentioned with the four infielders, it's worth noting that catcher Steve Yeager (1967, 4th round) was a mainstay during the Dodgers four-pennant run from 1974-81. A reliable backstop (1973 Topps #59) who led the NL in '78 by throwing out 46.7% of base runners, Yeager's double and two home runs, including a game-winner in Game 5, helped pave the way for the Dodgers '81 World Series win over the Yankees.

Destiny Awaits

For better or worse, some ball players have destinies bigger than their individual accomplishments — a moment in time when they become part of history. While these early draft picks all went on to have notable careers in the big leagues, they're largely remembered for a single moment in time.

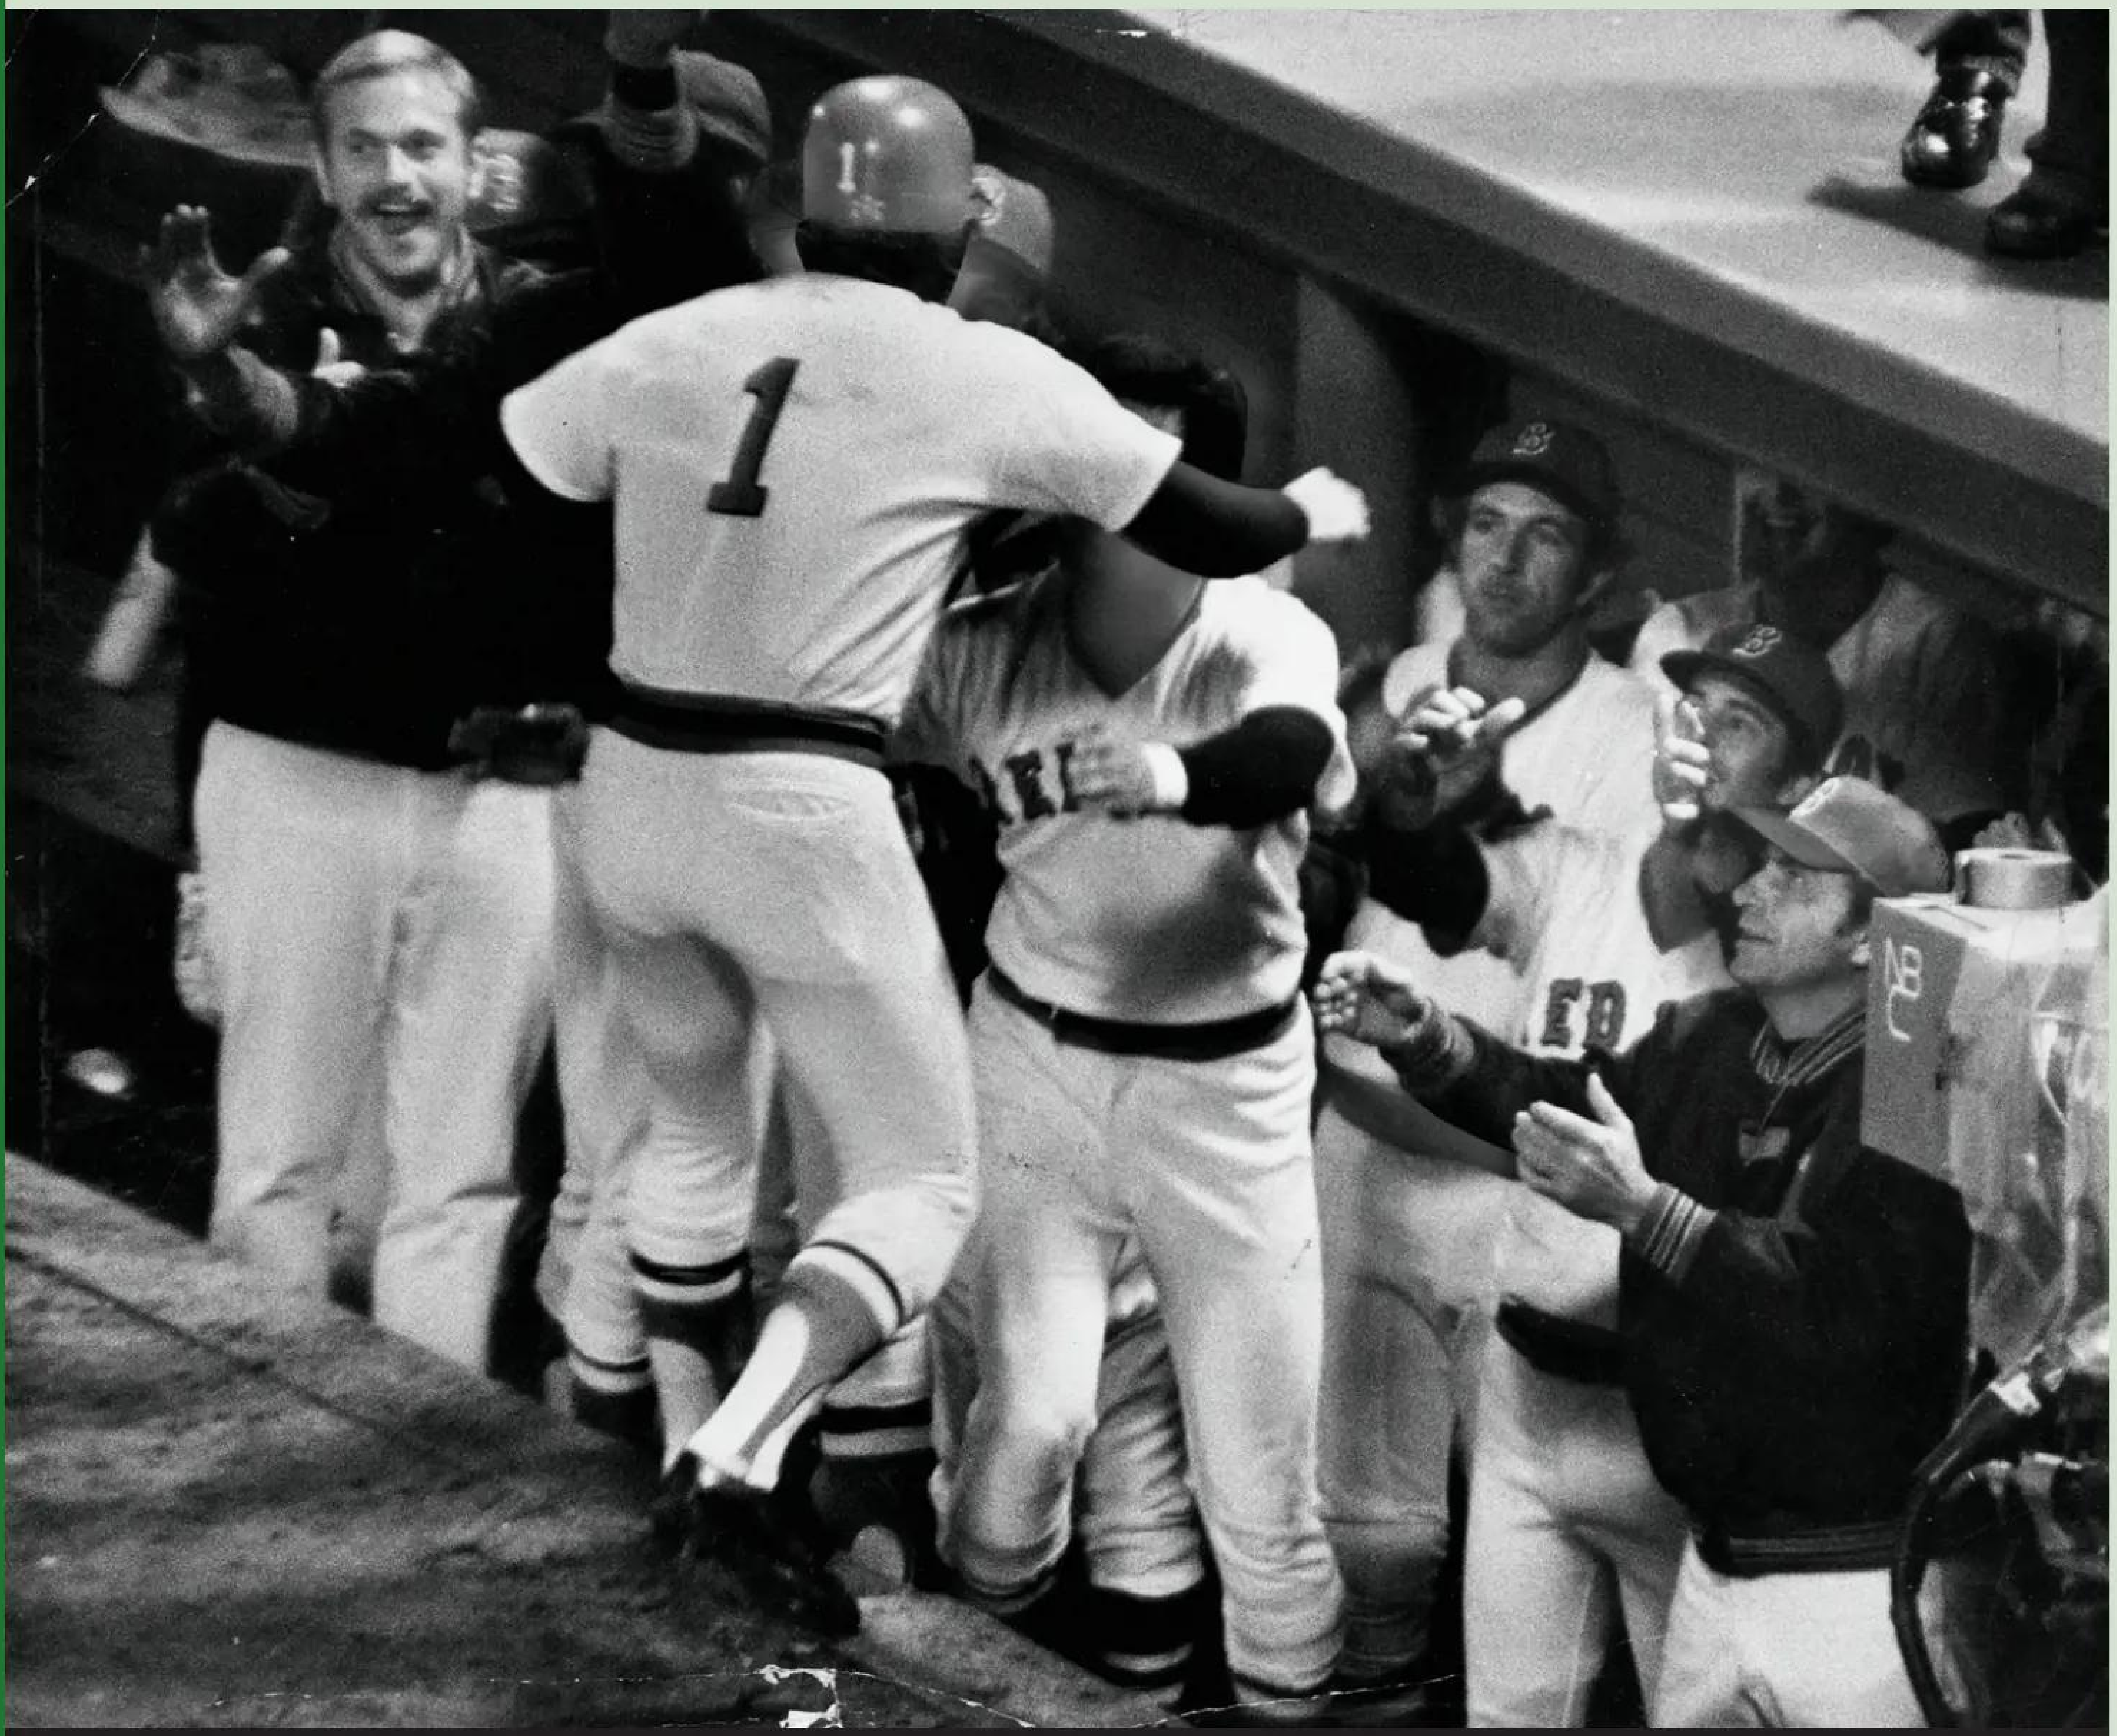
Bernie Carbo was Cincinnati's first pick in the 1965 draft (8th overall), ahead of Johnny Bench. Batting .321 and slugging 21 home runs in 1970, he played a part in the formation of the young Big Red Machine, which captured the NL flag before falling to a more veteran Orioles club in the World Series.



1970 Topps #286

In '75, Carbo found himself facing his old Cincinnati mates in the Fall Classic. With Boston down 6-3 and two out in the 8th of Game 6, he narrowly fouled off an inside 2-2 pitch before sending the next pitch over Fenway's center field wall to tie the score, setting the stage for Carlton Fisk's 12th inning walk-off.

"[Carbo] looked like a Little Leaguer the pitch before, then he comes back and looks like Ted Williams on the next swing," the late Hall of Famer Joe Morgan famously remembered.



Bernie Carbo is welcomed by teammates after hitting a game-tying home run for the Red Sox in Game 6 of the 1975 World Series, helping Boston to a win over Cincinnati – the team that had drafted him.

GETTY IMAGES

Along with Fisk's legendary game-winning wave, Carbo's unlikely pinch-hit home run has become part of Red Sox lore.

A Parade All-American in football, baseball and basketball, Ron Blomberg went No. 1 overall in the 1967 draft with the Yankees. Receiving a reported 100 scholarships in both football and basketball, he was in such high demand that even legendary UCLA basketball coach John Wooden paid him a visit.

Skipping college, Blomberg signed with New York for $75,000. When healthy, he hit well over .300. But injuries and being a platoon player kept his official at-bats too low to contend for a batting title.

On April 6, 1973, Blomberg made baseball history when he stepped up to the plate as baseball's first designated hitter (1974 Topps #117). Facing Boston's Luis Tiant, Blomberg walked with the bases loaded. The moment changed baseball forever, and the bat Blomberg used now resides in Cooperstown.

For a player largely remembered for one misplay, Bill Bucker's baseball career is grossly underrated. A two-time, All-California high school wide receiver, Buckner's bat was even more impressive. His .667 and .529 batting averages at Napa High School caught the attention of the Dodgers, who picked him up in the 2nd round of the '68 draft. He tore up minor league pitching, hitting over the .300 clip at every stop before moving to the parent club 1971 (1970 Topps #286).

In a career that includes two World Series appearances with the Dodgers and Red Sox, a batting crown, two doubles titles, 2,715 hits, and five seasons of getting league MVP votes, it's a travesty that a single play has come to define such an accomplished career.

After knocking in 100-plus runs in 1985 and 1986, Buckner played a pivotal role in helping Boston to its first World Series appearance in 11 years. Despite fighting a lingering ankle injury for most of his career, his veteran leadership and experience in ‘86 led to BoSox skipper John McNamara keeping him at first base late in the game. With the Red Sox up 5-3 in the bottom of the 10th of Game 6, things looked good for Boston. But with two outs, the Mets made a miraculous comeback with a string of hits to tie it up at five apiece. With Ray Knight at second, Mookie Wilson’s slow roller to first made its way under Buckner’s glove and into short right field, scoring an elated Knight and breaking the hearts of Red Sox Nation as Boston fell to the Mets in Game 7.

Part of the inaugural 1st round draft class, catcher Ray Fosse went seventh overall for the Cleveland Indians (1970 Topps #184). When he reached the big leagues in 1970, Fosse’s bat caught fire. Manager Earl Weaver selected him as an All-Star reserve after he hit .313 with 16 home runs and 45 RBIs, including a 23-game hitting streak, in the first half of the season.

Replacing Detroit’s Bill Freehan, Fosse was behind the plate when the All-Star Game went into extra innings. In the bottom of the 12th, Pete Rose rounded third base in an attempt to score on Jim Hickman’s single to center. Amos Otis’s throw home forced Fosse to move up the third base line. With Fosse focused on the ball, Rose stumbled before barreling full speed into Fosse, who didn’t brace for the impact. Fosse rolled over in pain as Rose scored the winning run to give the NL the victory. The collision not only had an impact on Fosse’s playing career, the shoulder injury he suffered became a chronic condition he felt for decades.

While he’s best known for the All-Star Game collision, Fosse was selected to the AL All-Star squad the following season before winning two World Series rings with Oakland in 1973-74 — the first against Rose’s Reds.

In certain circles, the middle name of Bucky Dent is an expletive. It all comes down to a single swing by the light-hitting Yankees shortstop that put an exclamation point on one of the biggest collapses in major league history.

But don’t blame Dent. Nobody was more surprised about his historic three-run home run that put the Yankees up 3-2 in the 1978 AL East tie-breaker against the Red Sox, than he was. The blast helped New York overcome a 14-game deficit to Boston to win the AL East crown en route to their second-straight championship.

“I hit the ball pretty good but I didn’t know it was going to be a home run until I rounded first base and saw (the umpire) signal it was a home run," Dent once recalled. "I remember how Fenway Park went dead quiet. It was quite a moment. That was a great game. Two great teams playing each other and the whole world paused to watch. Forty-five years later, I still have people come up and say to me, oh you broke my heart, or it was the greatest game to watch."

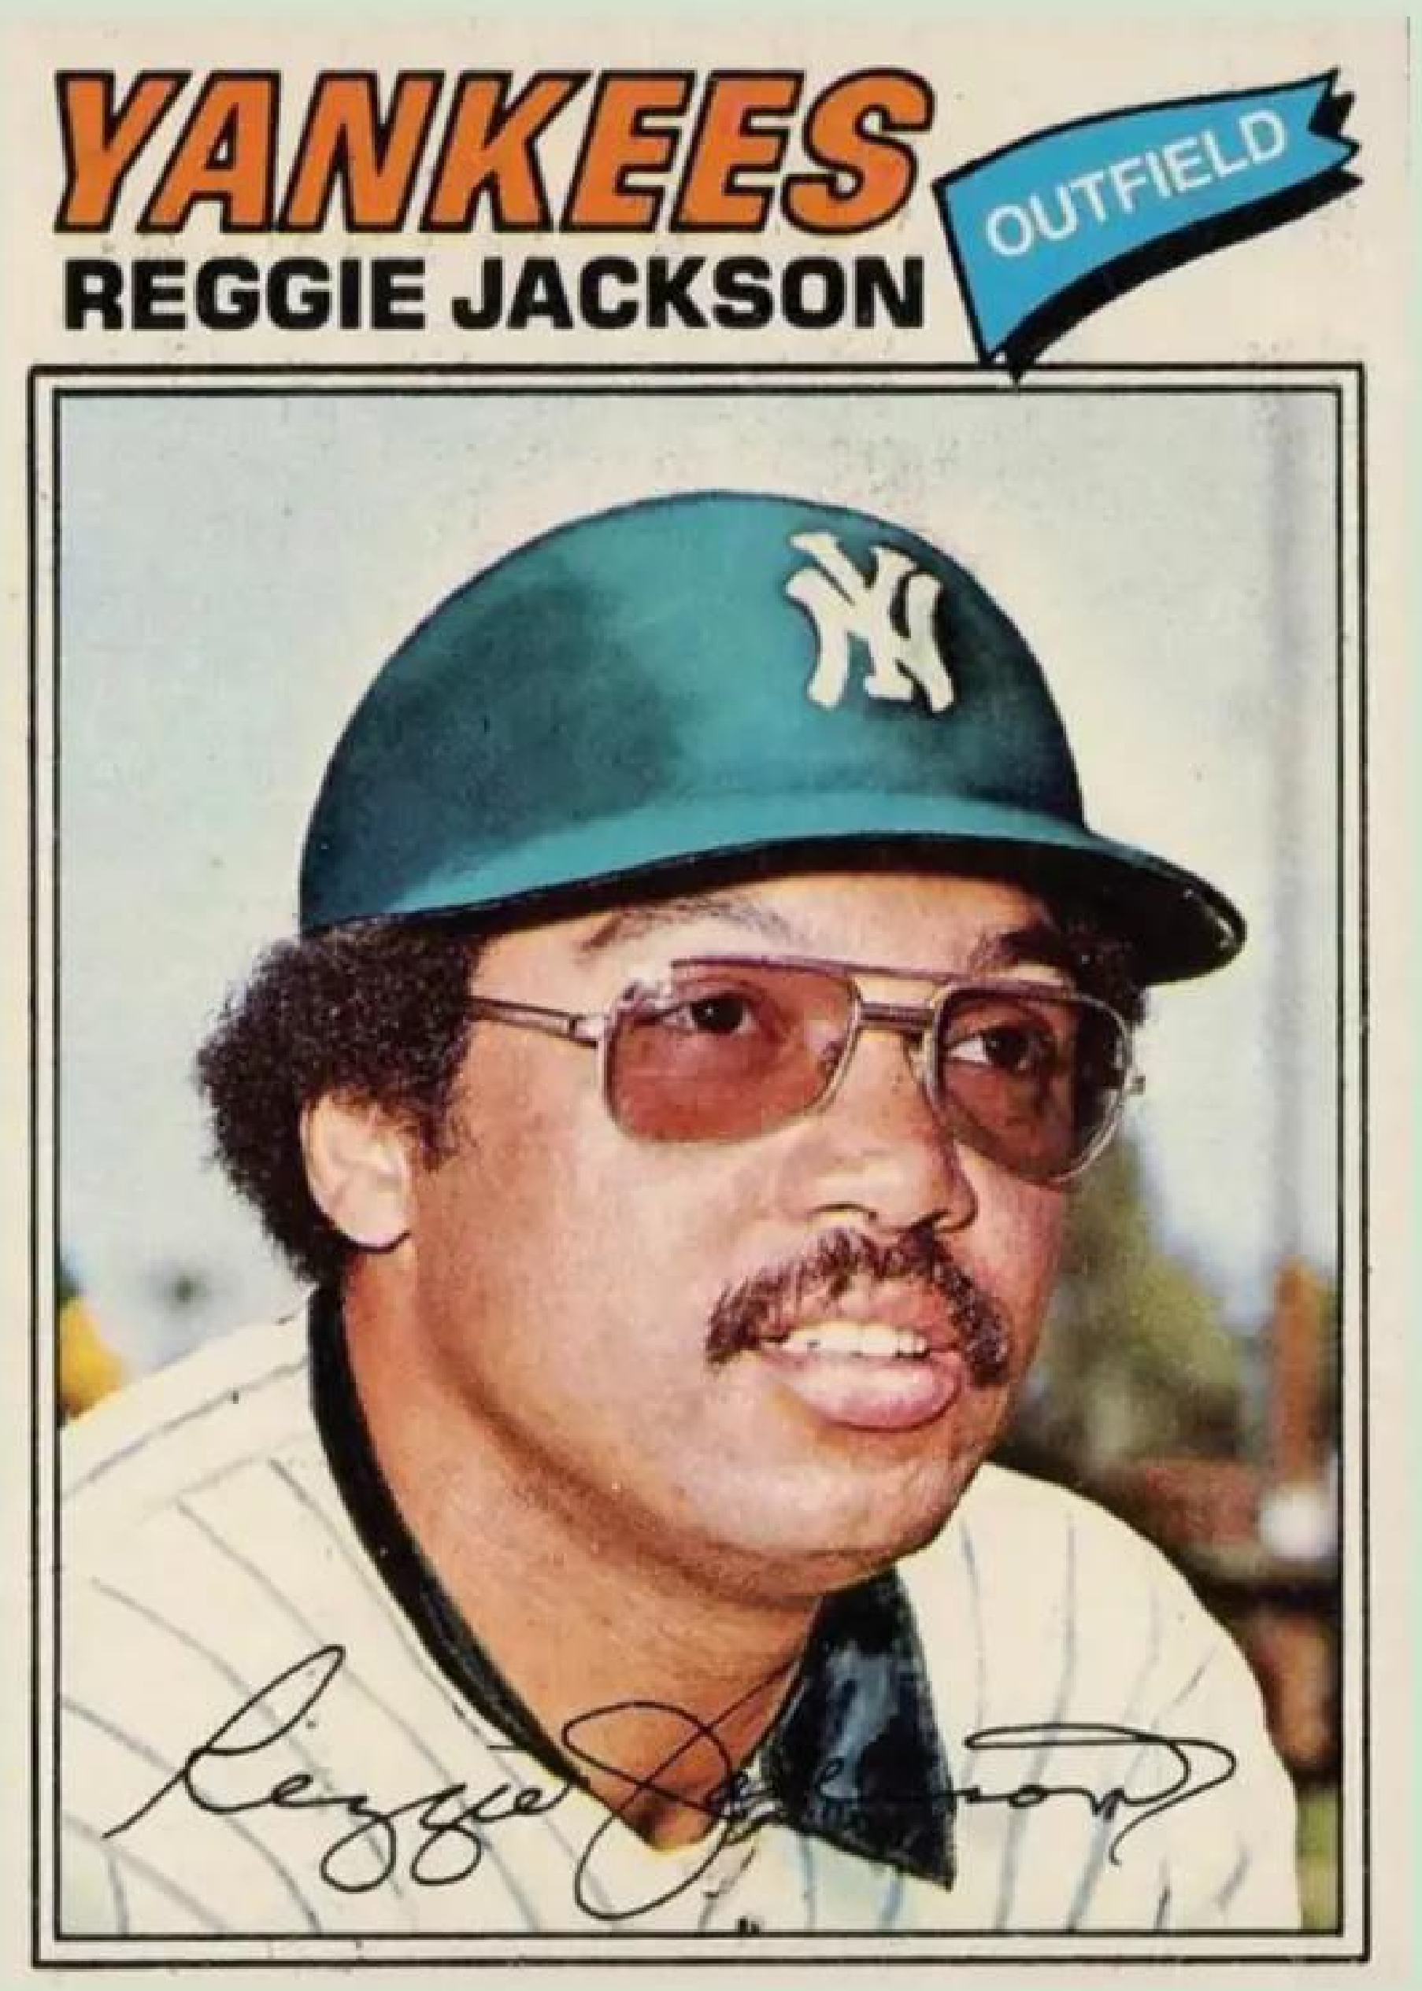
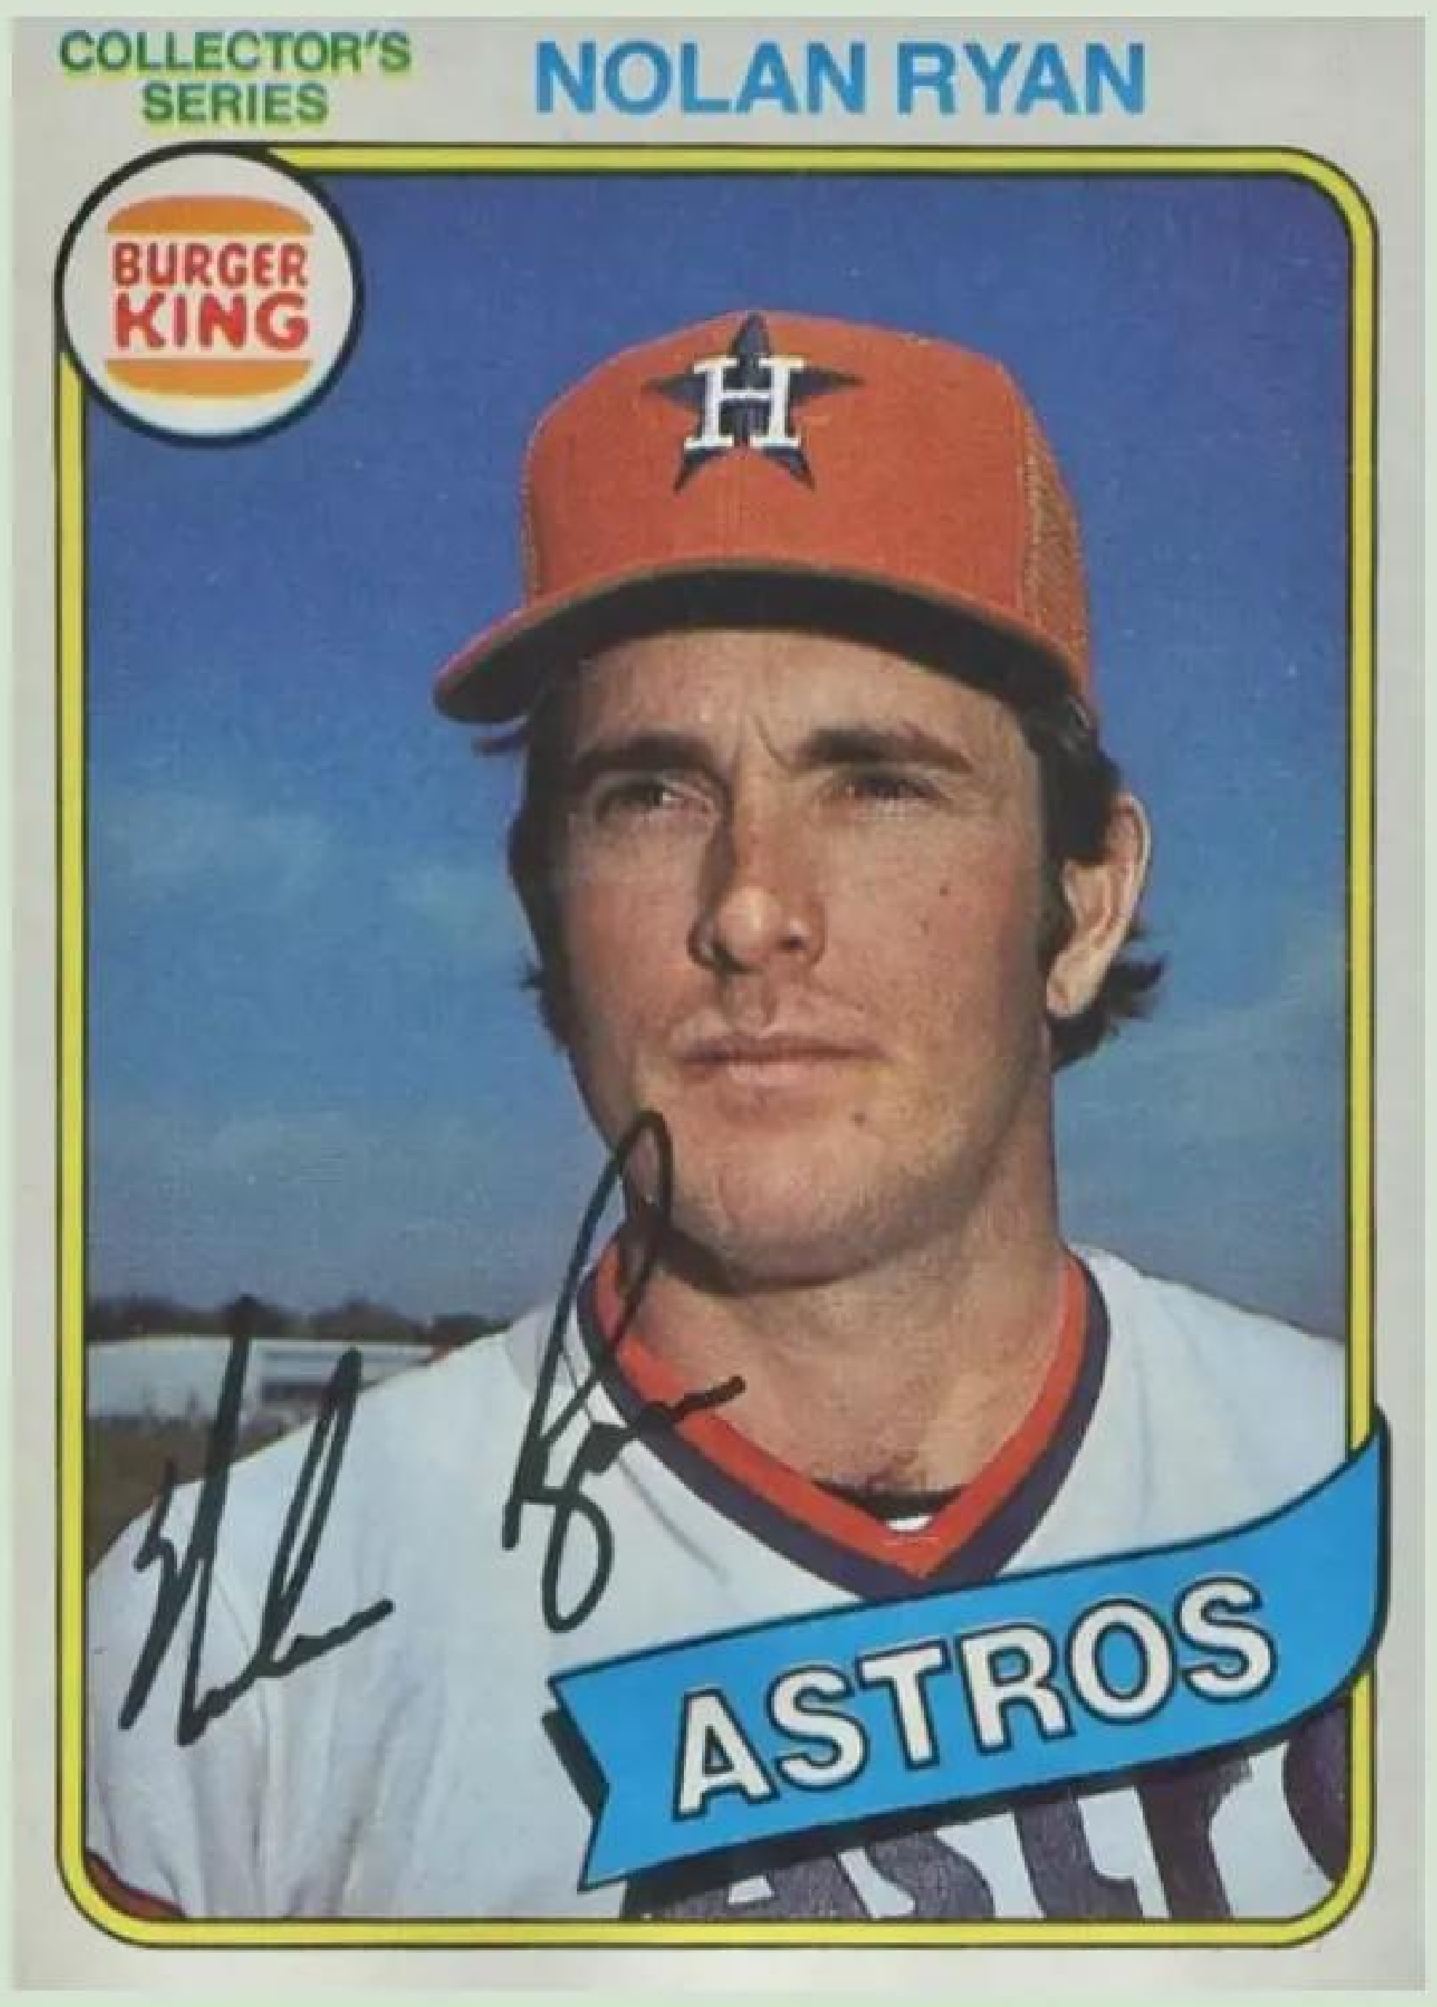
The Chicago White Sox's 1st round pick (6th overall) in 1970, Dent came up when shortstops were valued more for their glove work than their bat. Traded to the Yankees at the start of the '77 season, Dent (1977 Burger King #14) joined the Bronx Bombers at the cusp of their back-to-back world championships. Following his famous home run over the Green Monster, Dent hit .417 with seven RBIs to capture the 1978 World Series MVP.





After 12 seasons, Dent hung up his spikes with just 40 home runs. The three-time All-Star led AL shortstops in fielding three times, finishing his career with a .976 fielding percentage.

Million-Dollar Babies

For nearly a century, baseball's reserve clause gave owners complete control over the players' yearly contracts and allowed them to determine where players were traded. With amateur signing bonuses reaching record heights, the MLB Draft was just another way owners could keep costs down.

The first substantial challenge to the reserve clause came in 1971 by St. Louis outfield Curt Flood, who was traded by the Cardinals to the Phillies. Fighting for his right to choose which team he played for, Flood's antitrust case against Commissioner Bowie Kuhn lost in court, but his courage to stand up for his rights set things in motion. Four years later, the reserve clause was broken when arbitrator Peter Seitz granted pitcher Andy Messersmith, a 1st rounder in the 1966 draft, and veteran hurler Dave McNally, free agency after both played the 1975 season without a contract.

A year later, baseball owners and the MLB players' association agreed that players could file for free agency after serving six years with a club, swinging the free agency doors wide open.

A contract dispute resulted in Oakland's Jim "Catfish" Hunter signing the first big-money free agent contract ($3.2 million for 5 years) with the Yankees in 1975. Two years later, Reggie Jackson joined his ex-Oakland teammate when he inked a mega $3.5 million, 5-year deal with New York. Both helped the Yankees to back-to-back titles in 1977-78.

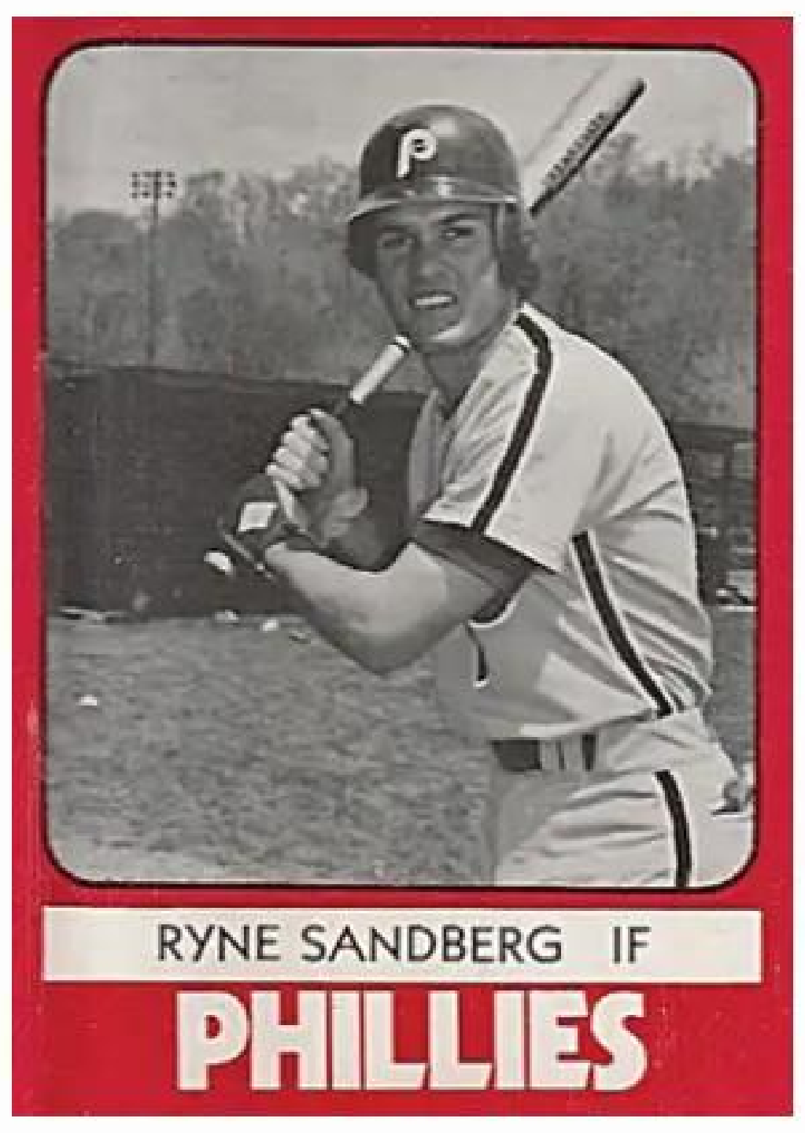
Next up was Cincinnati great, Pete Rose. In 1978, the spark of the Big Red Machine banged out his 3,000th hit and captivated the nation with a 44-game hitting streak. Pursued by several clubs offering lucrative deals, Charlie Hustle (1979 Burger King #13) became the game's highest paid player when he agreed to a four-year deal with the Phillies worth $3.2 million. Two years later, Rose's veteran leadership and infectious energy helped the Phillies capture their first-ever championship.

With Rose making $800,000 a year, it came to nobody's surprise that bigger offers were coming when strikeout maestro Nolan Ryan became a free agent after the '79 season.

Expressing his desire to play in his home state of Texas, Ryan became baseball's first million dollar a year player when he signed a $4.5 million, four-year deal with the Houston Astros (1980 Burger King #9). After helping the Angels to the franchise's first playoff bid in '79, the Ryan Express followed up the next season leading the Astros to their first postseason appearance alongside fellow hurlers and early draft picks J.R. Richards (1969 1st rounder, 2nd overall) and Ken Forsch (1968 18th round, 399th pick).

DRAFT STEALS

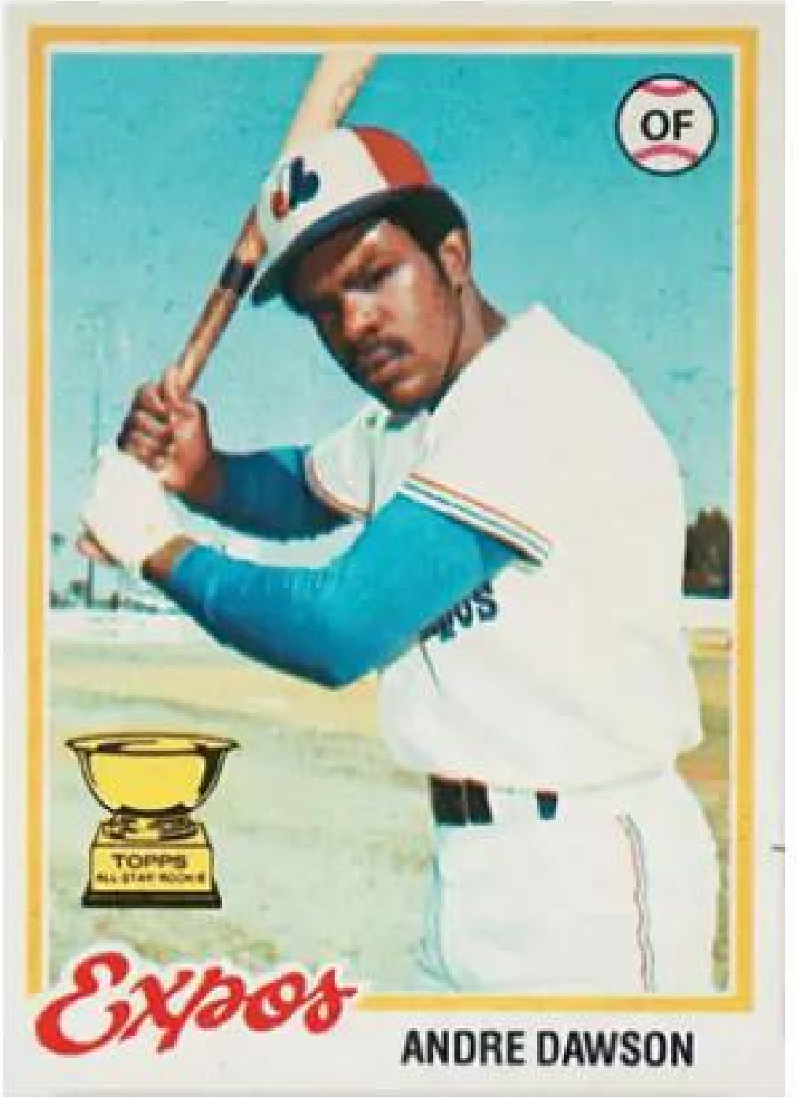
The MLB Draft isn't an exact science. For 60 years, baseball executives have whiffed on some of the greatest players of all time. Here are some of the biggest draft steals over the past 60 years.



Ryne Sandberg, 1978 (20th round, 511th pick): The Phillies took a chance on Sandberg despite his commitment to play football for Washington State. Unfortunately, they would never see their investment come to fruition. Snatching up Ryno with the 511th pick was a steal for Philadelphia, but that was nothing compared to the highway robbery that former Phillies' manager and farm director Dallas Green, who became the Cubs' GM, pulled off four years later when he snuck in Sandberg as part of the Ivan DeJesus-Larry Bowa trade. Sandberg's career in Chicago is legendary. A 1984 NL MVP, nine consecutive Gold Gloves, 10 All-Star appearances, and a record 277 career home runs for the Hall of Fame second basemen make Sandberg one of the biggest draft steals in history.

JOHN SMOLTZ
Lakeland P

John Smoltz, 1985 (22nd round, 574th pick): A Tigers fan growing up, Smoltz signed with his Dream Team rather than pitch for Michigan State. Two years in, however, the playoff-bound Tigers dealt him to Atlanta for veteran hurler Doyle Alexander. A short-sighted trade for Detroit, Smoltzie became part of the Braves' Big Three with Tom Glavine and Greg Maddux who pitched the Braves to eight division titles, four pennants and a world championship in the 1990s. After 19 seasons with Atlanta, Smoltz's Hall of Fame resume includes 210 wins, 154 saves, eight All-Star Games, the 1996 NL Cy Young Award, 1992 NLCS MVP, and an NL-record 15 postseason victories.



Andre Dawson, 1975 (11th round, 250th pick): The Expos got more than they bargained for when Dawson edged out Mitchell Page for the 1977 NL Rookie of the Year award. And he was just getting started. His play in the center field helped the club to back-to-back 90-win seasons in 1979-80, as well as Montreal's only playoff appearance in '81. During his years with the Expos, he was the only player with 200 dingers and 200 steals. With the Cubs, the Hawk won the 1987 NL MVP award after crushing a league-leading 49 home runs and 137 RBIs. Hanging it up after 21 seasons, Dawson finished with 438 home runs, 1,591 RBIs, eight All-Star Games and eight Gold Gloves before getting the call from Cooperstown in 2010.

JIM THOME
Infield

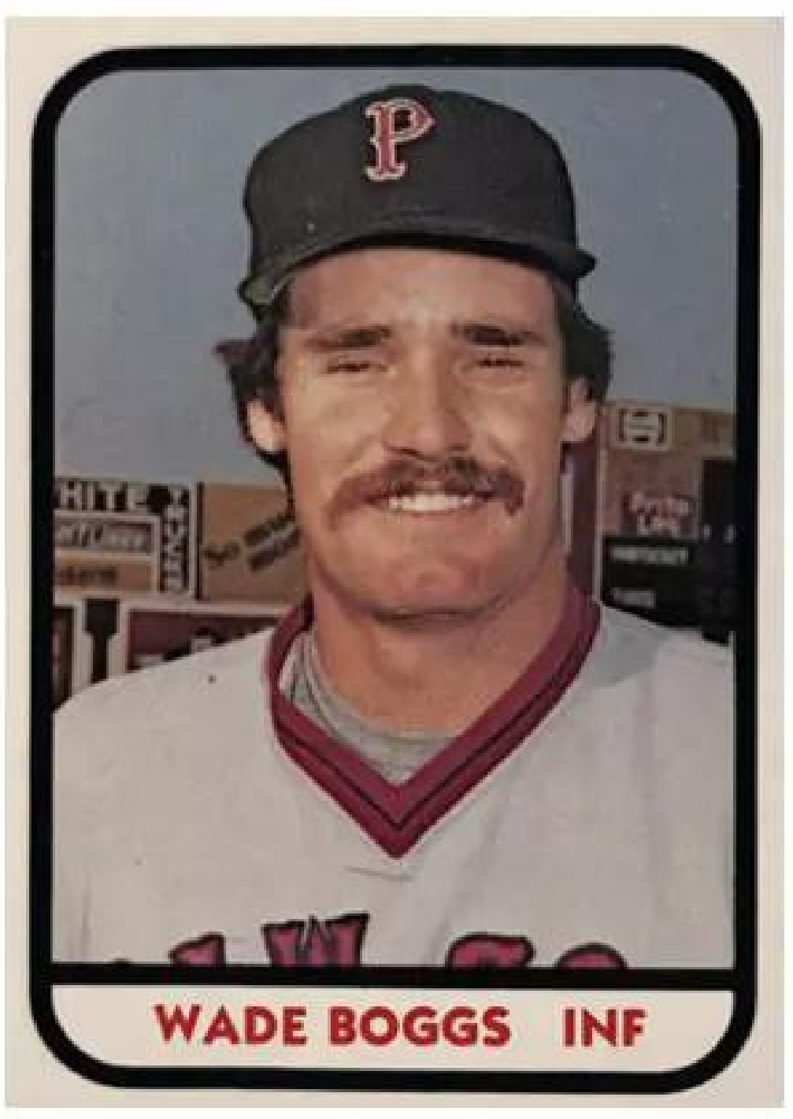
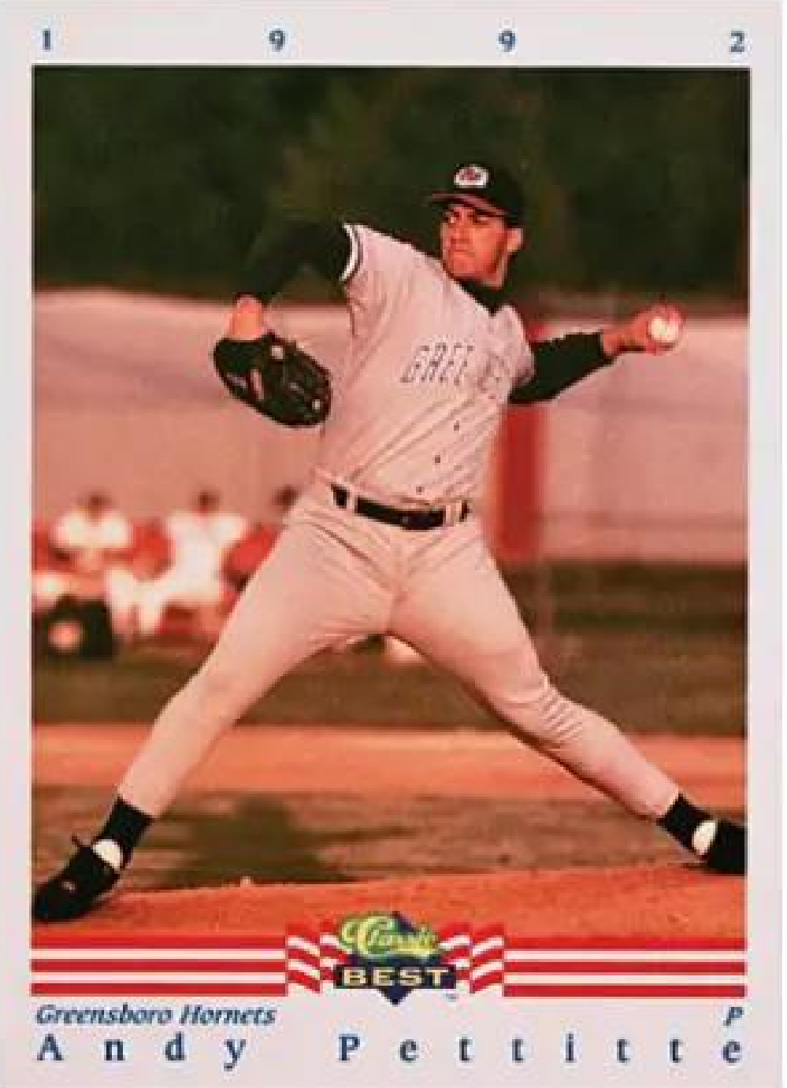
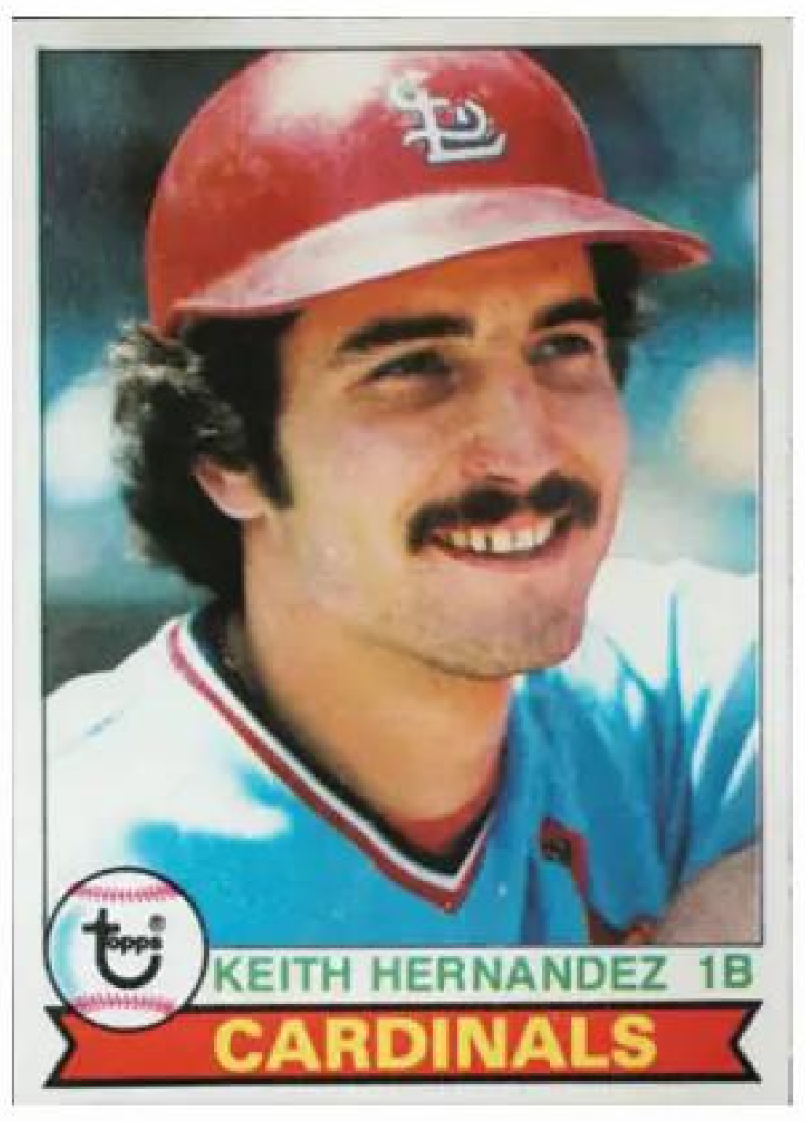
Jim Thome, 1989 (13th round, 333rd pick): Little was expected of Thome when Cleveland selected the standout baseball-basketball freshman from Illinois Central College. But minor league manager Charlie Manuel changed all that. Helping Thome discover his untapped power, Thome emerged as one of the game's great power hitters, finishing eighth all time with 612 home runs. Along the way, he helped Cleveland to five straight playoff appearances (1995-99), the franchise's first World Series appearance in 41 years, and a second two years later after slugging the first of six 40-plus home run seasons. Thome finished his 22-year career with nine seasons of 100 or more RBIs, including six in a row (1996-2004) before becoming a first-ballot Hall of Famer in 2018.



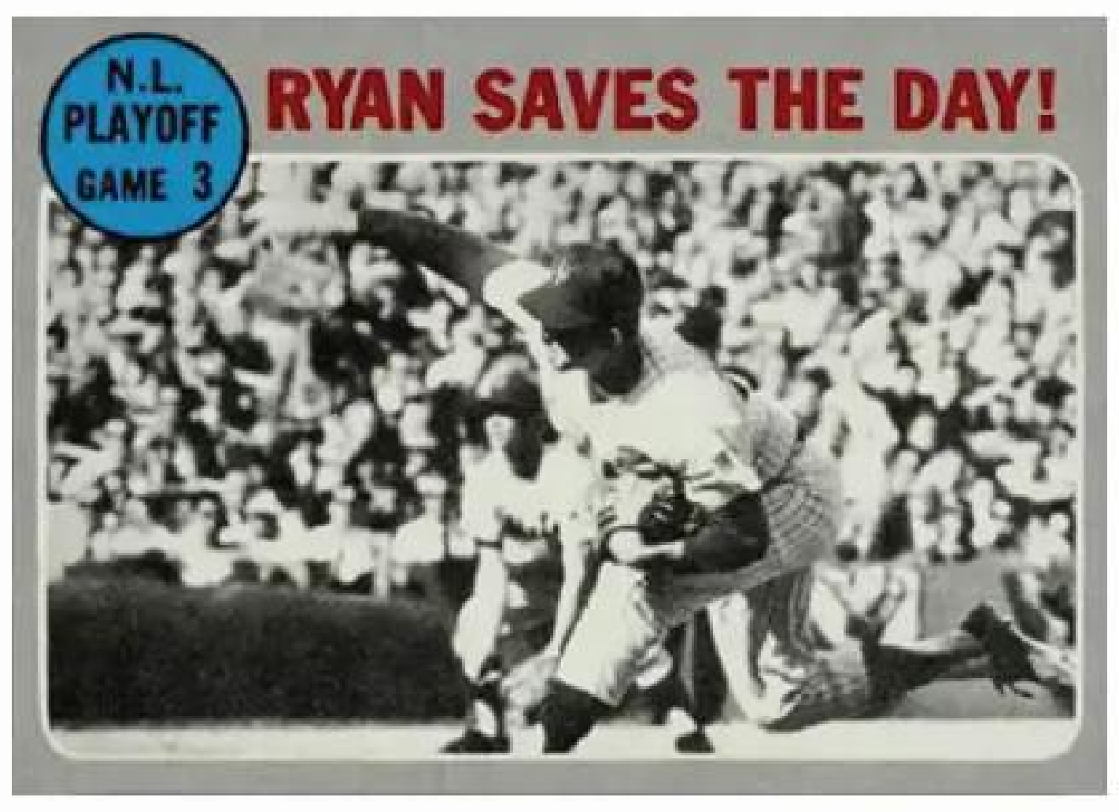
Wade Boggs, 1976 (7th round, 166th pick): The Chicken Man was not on many MLB radars in high school, but he did catch the attention of legendary Boston scout George Digby. Passing up a football scholarship with the University of South Carolina, Boggs signed with the BoSox. After lighting up minor league pitching, he hit the ground running – capturing five AL batting titles in his first seven seasons. His bat helped Boston to three playoff appearances over five seasons (1986-90), including the heartbreaking loss in the '86 World Series. When he called it quits in 1999 with the Devil Rays, Boggs had notched 12 straight All-Star appearances, eight Silver Slugger awards, a pair of Gold Gloves, a World Series ring with New York, and 3,010 hits in 18 seasons.



Andy Pettitte, 1990 (22nd round, 577th pick): It's hard to imagine that no other club saw what the Yankees did in the 6-foot-5 lefty from San Jacinto Community College. Succeeding at every minor league stop, Pettitte was part of the Core Four that led New York's late-90s dynasty. His role in the Yankees' five titles included MLB postseason records in wins (19), games started (44) and innings pitched (276). The winningest pitcher in the first decade of the 21st century, Pettitte finished his career with 256 victories. He remains the Yankees' leader in strikeouts (2,020), games started (438) and is third in career wins (213).



Keith Hernandez, 1971 (41st round, 785th pick): Known for his amazing glove work, Hernandez found his swing in Triple-A, hitting .351 before St. Louis sent former NL MVP Joe Torre to New York to make room for him at first base. He snagged his first of six straight Gold Gloves in 1978 before hitting a league-leading .344, 48 doubles, 116 runs, and knocking in 105 to share the 1979 NL MVP with Willie Stargell. Three years later, his seven safeties and eight RBIs helped the Cards to a seven-game World Series victory over the Brewers. Traded to the Mets in '83, Hernandez teamed up with veteran All-Star Gary Carter to co-captain the Mets to their first title since '69. His quick instincts defending the sacrifice bunt forced opponents to change their offensive strategies. After five more Gold Gloves from 1984-88 (that's 11 if you're counting), Hernandez is widely considered the greatest defensive first baseman of all time.



Nolan Ryan, 1965 (12th round, 226th pick): Even Ryan admits young live arms need lots of work and discipline. After a phenomenal senior year, where he went 19-3, whiffed 211 batters and led Alvin High School to the Texas State Finals, teams still weren't sold on the lanky right-hander. If not for scout Red Murff's glowing endorsement, the Mets might have passed on him, too. Ryan's time in New York may have lasted just five seasons, but their decision to take a chance on him paid off in the '69 postseason. His NLCS numbers outshine even those of Seaver. In his only relief appearance, Ryan tossed seven innings, gave up just three hits, struck out seven and chipped in with a pair of hits and even scored a run in his first postseason victory. Topps nailed it a year later with its classic "Ryan Saves The Day" card (#197). His 2 1/2 innings of shutout ball in Game 3 of the Fall Classic preserved a 4-0 lead as the Mets took a critical 2-1 series lead. It would be the only World Series appearance of Ryan's legendary career.

PEORIA CHIEFS
ALBERT PUJOLS
Top Prospect

Albert Pujols, 1999 (13th round, 402nd pick): Looking back, it's unthinkable that the greatest hitter of his generation was passed up over 400 times! When St. Louis finally moved on him, Pujols didn't disappoint. He lit up minor league pitching in his first pro season with Peoria, hitting .324 with 32 doubles, 17 homers and 84 RBIs to earn a spring training invite the following season. With Mark McGwire still at first base, manager Tony La Russa stuck Pujols at third and in the outfield to keep his bat in the lineup. Hitting .329 with 37 home runs and 130 RBIs, Pujols was the unanimous choice for the NL Rookie of the Year. Over the next decade, The Machine won three NL MVPs, five Silver Slugger awards, a pair of Gold Gloves at first, a batting title, made nine All-Star squads, tagged 445 long balls, and led the Cardinals to two world championships. With career numbers that put him alongside the greatest hitters of all time, Pujols is a sure bet for a first-ballot Hall of Famer in 2028.

MIKE PIAZZA

Mike Piazza, 1988 (62nd round, 1,390 pick): The career of baseball's greatest hitting catcher might not have been – if not for a simple favor. When Vince Piazza asked his childhood friend Tommy Lasorda to draft his son, the Dodgers took him as their final pick of the '88 draft – the 62nd round. A first baseman in high school, Piazza switched positions on the advice of Lasorda, who felt it would help get him promoted. After hitting .350 between San Antonio and Albuquerque in '92, Piazza took the NL by storm the following season, hitting .318 with 35 dingers and 112 RBIs to win the NL Rookie of the Year. He also took home his first of 10 Silver Slugger awards and suited up for his first of 12 career All-Star Games. After leading the Mets to the Subway Series in 2000, he became a symbol of courage the night the Mets returned to Shea Stadium following 9/11. His game-winning home run lifted the hearts and spirits of the packed house. In 2007, Piazza hung up his spikes with 437 home runs, 1,335 RBIs and a .308 career batting average. When Cooperstown came calling in 2016, Piazza became the lowest draft pick ever enshrined into the Hall of Fame.

OH CANADA: COLLECTING 1971 O-PEE-CHEE BASEBALL

AN EPIC 752-CARD SET WITH EXPOS AND ELUSIVE HIGH NUMBERS

BY KEVIN GLEW

Longtime hobby dealer Tom Salem calls it "the 1952 Topps" of O-Pee-Chee baseball sets.

And if anyone is qualified to make such a lofty statement about the 1971 O-Pee-Chee set, it's Salem.

After all, it's unlikely that anyone in the hobby has bought and sold more O-Pee-Chee baseball cards over the past 20 years than him. In fact, Salem's Caldwell, Texas-based business is called OPC Baseball.

"It's hands down, 100 per cent, the most popular O-Pee-Chee baseball set," said Salem of the 1971 issue. "There are more people trying to put that set together than any of the other O-Pee-Chee sets out there."

Salem says the set has everything a collector wants. It's chock full of Hall of Famers. The cards have a distinctive black-bordered design. And its low print run – including some very rare high-number cards – makes its extremely challenging to assemble.

Alan Rubenstein can attest to that.

It has taken him almost three decades to put together his No. 1 1971 O-Pee-Chee set on the PSA Set Registry. He bought his first raw set from the Kitchener Coin Shop in Kitchener, Ont., in 1996 and has been upgrading his set ever since. His steadfast devotion has helped him complete a remarkable graded set with an average card grade of PSA NM-MT 8 or better.

"I was born in '71, so I have a special affinity for the set," said Rubenstein, whose set was honored with a PSA Set Registry Award for "Best Modern Baseball Set" in 2019. "It's an extremely difficult set and I just like the challenge. I worked very hard to try to find high grade raw cards."

Veteran Canadian collector Doug Trenter would no doubt know how hard Rubenstein has had to work. He started putting his 1971 O-Pee-Chee sets together nine years ago when he bought a 300-count lot of raw cards off a local dealer in Listowel, Ont.

"After that, I remember I went out and got a couple of the key cards, and at that point, I had no idea about the high numbers or anything like that," he explained. "And that's when I fell in love with it. It's been a labor of love."

Some hobbyists refer to the 1971 O-Pee-Chee set as "the monster" because with its 752 cards, it was the first O-Pee-Chee baseball set to match its Topps counterpart in size. Yet, it's estimated that O-Pee-Chee printed only about five percent as many cards as Topps.

"You could easily finish a 1971 Topps set in a few months, and it may not even take you that long, because all of those cards are out there. It's just a matter of whether you want to pay for them," explained Duane Tom, who assembled his graded 1971 O-Pee-Chee set over a 10-year period. "The problem with the O-Pee-Chee set is that even if you have the money, good luck finding someone who's got one for sale and has the cards that you need."

On top of the challenge of finding these cards, they are also very difficult to uncover in high grade. Poor centering, shabby cutting and fragile black borders often plague the 1971 O-Pee-Chee cards.

"You have the classic O-Pee-Chee cut on these," explained Trenter. "It's like they never sharpened a blade in their life. So, the cards are [generally] either way off-center or they have a hack job on the sides."

O-Pee-Chee had been producing baseball cards under a license with Topps for many years. The 1965 cards were the first to include "Printed in Canada" on the backs, but until 1971, the O-Pee-Chee baseball sets had far fewer cards in them than the Topps sets.

In 1971, O-Pee-Chee employed the same black-bordered design as Topps on the card front, but you can spot the differences on the card back. The 1971 Topps backs have a green base, while the O-Pee-Chee cards are yellow. Also, cards #1 to #523 in the O-Pee-Chee set have text in French and English and a black-and-white head shot in the middle, while the text is only in English and the photo is on the left on the Topps cards. The O-Pee-Chee cards also have a "Printed in Canada" copyright on them.

The 1971 O-Pee-Chee cards were distributed in 10-cent packs that included eight cards and an insert. It's believed they were released in seven series.

To illustrate how much rarer the O-Pee-Chee cards are than the Topps cards, the PSA Population Report indicates that more than 356,000, 1971 Topps cards have been submitted for grading, while just under 23,000 O-Pee-Chee cards have been sent in.

The composition of the 1971 Topps and O-Pee-Chee sets is similar. However, O-Pee-Chee substituted cards of three Montreal Expos players earlier into their set. Expos catcher John Bateman replaced Red Sox manager Eddie Kasko on card #31. Also, Expos second baseman Ron Hunt was subbed in for the Topps Baseball Coins checklist on card #161 while Claude Raymond was featured on O-Pee-Chee card #202 in place of the Reds Celebrate! single. But most importantly for Canadian baseball fans, O-Pee-Chee highlighted Rusty Staub, the Expos' first star, on card #289 in place of the Chicago White Sox team card.

It's interesting to note that Raymond (#536), Staub (#560) and Bateman (#628) also have high number cards in the set.

Throughout the O-Pee-Chee set, you can also see trade notations on several cards that were not on the Topps cards.

Today, the 1971 O-Pee-Chee cards generally command a premium over the Topps cards, but this is a relatively recent trend.

"When I used to go down to local card stores [in Canada] in the late '80s and early '90s, the guys would tell you, 'Don't buy the O-Pee-Chee baseball!'" said Trenter.

Rubenstein and Tom heard similar refrains in the U.S.

"O-Pee-Chee was like that ugly red-headed stepchild," said Tom.

But the hobby tide changed when people began to realize how much rarer the Canadian cards are. Trenter noticed a spike in interest in the 1971 O-Pee-Chee cards during the COVID-19 pandemic.

"I'm in Canada, so you would think I would have a leg up with these, but certainly during the pandemic Americans started gobbling them up, too," said Trenter.

As a result, the star cards in the 1971 O-Pee-Chee set have become highly sought-after. Among the most coveted, non-high numbered stars are Thurman Munson (#5), Pete Rose (#100), Johnny Bench (#250), Hank Aaron (#400) and Nolan Ryan (#513).

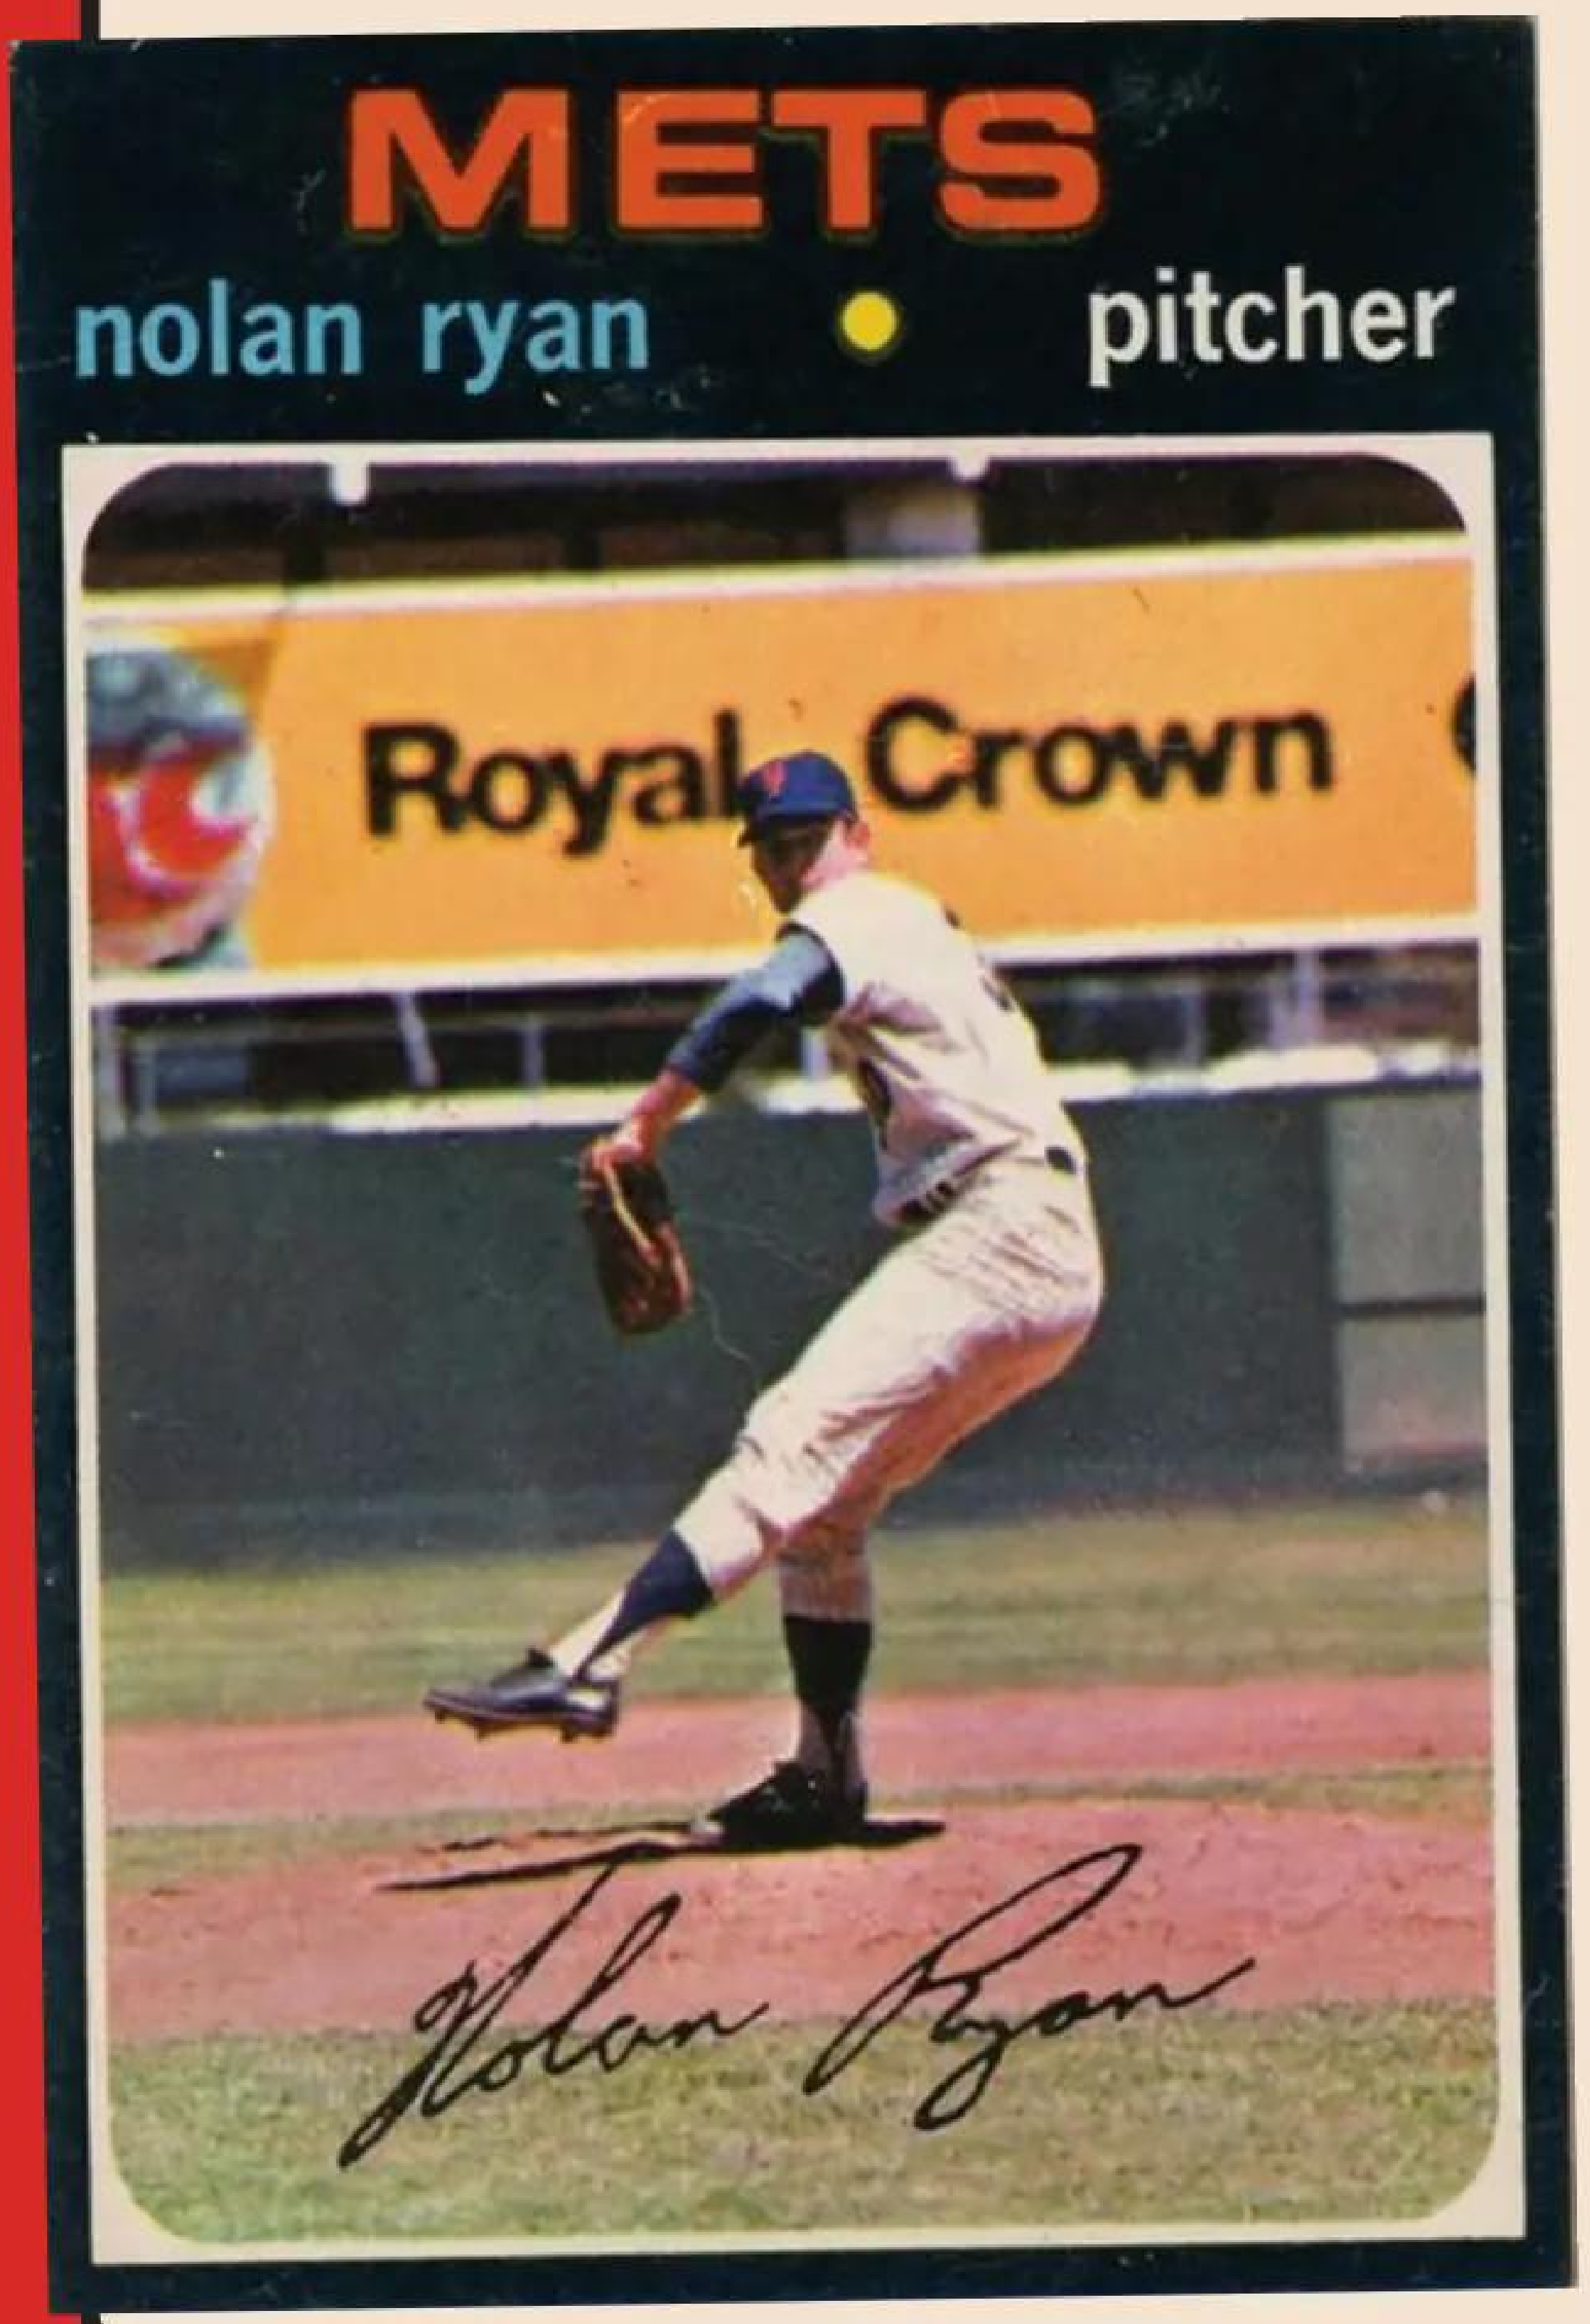
The horizontal photo on the Munson card captures the legendary catcher in a play at the plate.

"That's certainly an iconic card," said Trenter. "People clamor for that one over his rookie card."

To illustrate how difficult Munson's1971 O-Pee-Chee card is compared to his Topps single, there have been 5,340, 1971 Topps Munson cards graded by PSA and just 251 O-Pee-Chee singles. There are 129 PSA 8s of the Topps card and just four O-Pee-Chee cards in the same grade.

The Ryan card (#513) is also very popular. It offers an action pose of the Ryan Express with the Mets. Just 351 have been graded by PSA, compared to 7,245 of the 1971 Topps Ryan.

There are also two Hall of Famer rookies in the 1971 O-Pee-Chee set: Bert Blyleven (#26) and Ted Simmons (#117).



"The O-Pee-Chee Blyleven is an extremely difficult card to find centered," said Rubenstein.

The PSA Population Report certainly backs this up. There are just three cards that have received an unqualified grade of PSA 8 or higher.

Oher key rookies in the 1971 O-Pee-Chee set are Dave Concepción (#14), Bobby Valentine (#188), Bobby Grich (#193), Cesar Cedeno (#237), George Foster (#276), Steve Garvey (#341), Greg Luzinski (#439) and Cesar Geronimo (#447).

And while all of the 1971 O-Pee-Chee cards are relatively difficult to track down, collectors will tell you that the semi-high and high number cards (#524 to #752) are the scarcest.

Rubenstein says he wouldn't be surprised if the quantity printed of cards #524 to #752 was one-tenth that of the lower numbered cards.

"The high numbers are probably the hardest cards to find out of any O-Pee-Chee [baseball] set that was ever made," said Tom.

The 1971 Topps high-number series features 66 cards that have been identified as short prints. Those cards are also likely short prints in the O-Pee-Chee series, but the O-Pee-Chee cards are so scarce that it's hard to tell.

A number of Hall of Famers are featured in the semi-high and high number 1971 O-Pee-Chee series, including Ernie Banks (#525), Carl Yastrzemski (#530), Harmon Killebrew (#550), Jim Palmer (#570), Tony Perez (#580), Willie Mays (#600), Orlando Cepeda (#605), Lou Brock (#625), Roberto Clemente (#630), Frank Robinson (#640) and Luis Aparicio (#740).

Of the Hall of Famers, the Yastrzemski card is one of the most in demand.

"That card in raw grade, in VG-EX or better, can easily go for $500 or more," said Rubenstein.

Trenter says there's one PSA 10.

"If that card hit the market today, I don't even know what it would go for," he said. "People would just lose their minds."

A PSA EX-MT 6 Yastrzemski garnered $850 on eBay in October 2024.

Collectors seem to agree that a high-grade Clemente card (#630) is the most sought-after card in this set. The five PSA 7s represent the highest graded examples (without a qualifier).

"The Clemente card is always off top to bottom," said Salem. "You never find one well-centered."

Tom says if someone decided to sell one of the PSA 7s, it could be a $20,000 card.

The high-number series also has a rookie card featuring Don Baylor and Dusty Baker (#709).

"That's a very tough card and now with Dusty probably going to get into the Hall of Fame, that card is going to become even more [in demand]." said Trenter.

A raw Baylor/Baker rookie, with multiple creases, sold for $169.99 on eBay in February 2025.

There are also several tough commons in the high number series.

Rubenstein points out that the lowest graded card in his registry set is the Eddie Fisher (#631). He has a PSA 6 because the Fisher card is almost always off-center left to right.

Tom cites the Boog Powell card (#700) as hard to track down in high grade. Centering is its biggest condition issue as well. A low-grade raw example with multiple creases fetched $65 on eBay in January 2025.

The Denny McLain card (#750) is also roundly regarded as one of the set's most elusive in top grade.

"That's a notoriously terrible card to find anywhere near centered," noted Trenter. "It's always way off-center left to right."

With rare high-numbered cards like the McLain, its passionate collector following and the 1971 O-Pee-Chee set's wealth of star and rookie cards, it's no wonder Salem refers to it as the "1952 Topps" of O-Pee-Chee sets.

And more collectors are still discovering it.

"The collector base has just shot up exponentially," said Tom.

But this hasn't scared Rubenstein away. Nearly three decades after purchasing his first 1971 O-Pee-Chee cards, he remains devoted to upgrading his already award-winning set.

"I love this set. I enjoy collecting it. I still collect it," said Rubenstein. "And whenever I see cards that are high grade, especially stars, I'm willing to pay a premium. I appreciate their scarcity and there's a certain beauty to the cards."

THE GAME CHANGER

1961-62 Fleer Basketball Helped Lay Groundwork for Modern Cards

BY RYAN WRIGHT

From bubble gum to sports trading cards, Fleer helped pave the way for the modern era cards. The family-owned Fleer Corporation, founded by Frank H. Fleer in 1885, went head-to-head with other card manufacturing companies starting with baseball in 1923 and football in 1960. But key elements of their 1961 basketball set continue to be in every set release, regardless of the manufacturer, to this day.

The commons (if you can call them that), 1-66, of the 1961 set includes Wilt Chamberlain, Walt Bellamy, Bob Cousy, Wayne Embry, KC Jones, Bob Pettit, Sam Jones, Hal Greer, Bailey Howell, Oscar Robertson, Bill Russell, Len "Lenny" Wilkens, and Jerry West just to name a few.

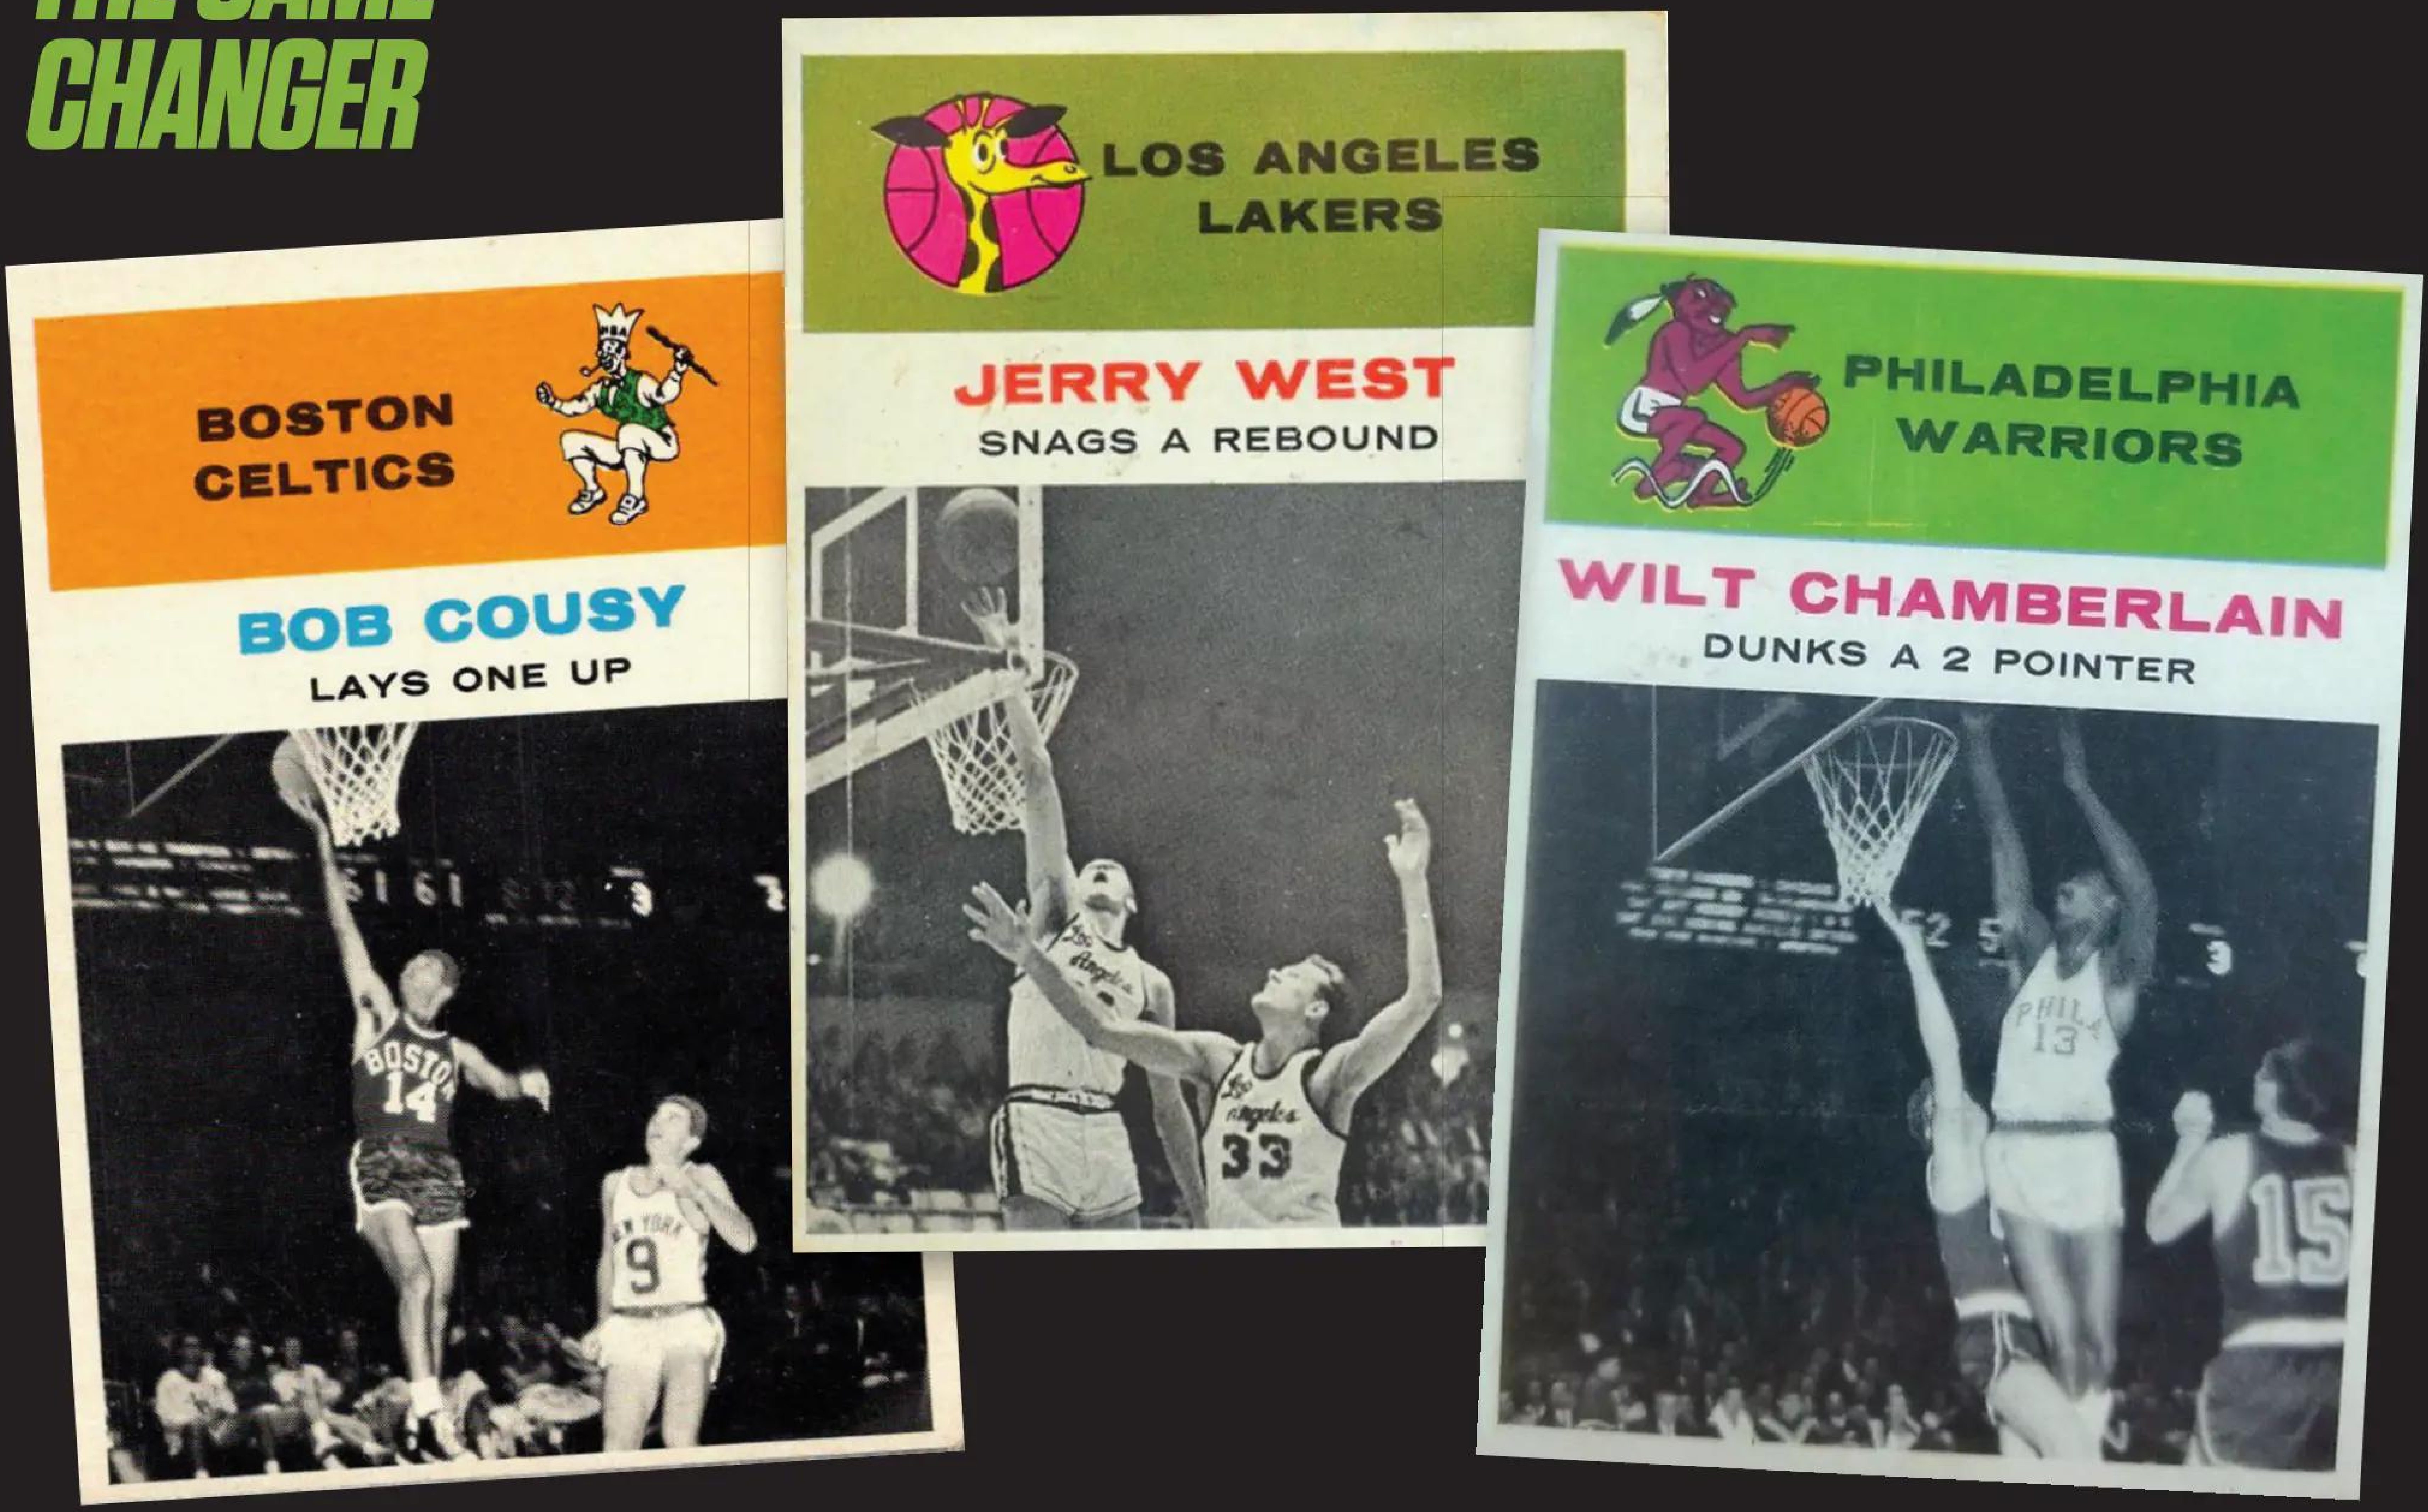
THE GAME CHANGER



What was rare then but common now are the in-game action shots. The few NBA card releases to that point typically featured the player from a photo shoot, some with the background colored highlighting the player while others were staged on the court.

The 1957 Topps release had a few action shots, most notably Bill Russell playing defense and Bob Cousy running the Boston Celtics' offense but the images couldn't quite capture the feel of the game.

FLEER CHANGED THE GAME

Starting with card No. 48 featuring Larry Costello, Fleer introduced their "In Action" insert. From the floor level, card No. 49 showed Bob Cousy racing past a defender for an easy layup.

Some of the more iconic basketball cards of all time, that hold true to today's sets, includes Chamberlain's No. 47 "DUNKS A 2 POINTER" and West's No. 66 "SNAGS A REBOUND." But the best is arguably Bill Russell's No. 62 "TAKES TO THE AIR" showing the future Hall of Famer skying above everyone else.

Larry Costello, Walter Dukes, Tom Gola, Richie Guerin, Cliff Hagan, Dolph Schayes, John Kerr, and Tom Heinsohn were some of the other players made part of the "In Action" insert.

FLEER CHANGED THE INDUSTRY… AGAIN

When one thinks of all-time inserts, perhaps the most notable basketball set of all-time comes to mind: Fleer's 1986-87 release. The 11-player sticker inserts were dispersed one to a pack. The grouping included Larry Bird, Magic Johnson, Akeem Olajuwon, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Dominque Wilkins, Julius Irving, Isiah Thomas, Patrick Ewing, Adrian Dantley, Alex English, and, of course, the most popular of them all – Michael Jordan.

A graded 10 on any of the 1986-87 Fleer sticker cards is worth over $1,000, MJ's is valued at $45,000-plus. The '61 set is full of high-profile players that can bring a large price tag. Chamberlain's No. 8 rookie card raw can fetch as much as $6,000; a graded 8 is valued at $40,000.

Another crossover from the 1961-62 set to the modern era is the error card. Len Wilkens No. 44 card had a spelling error on the front, "Wilkins".

Sometimes you just have to tuck a wad of Red Man between the cheek gum to help get you through difficult athletic endeavors. At least that's what Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw thought during this October 1978 game. It must have worked - the Steelers posted a 31-7 win over the Falcons that day.

The Evolution of Baseball Card Sets

From team sets and umpire cards, to multi-player and all-star cards – the subset changed the collecting game

BY GEORGE VRECHEK

Sy Berger's daughter Maxine Berger Bienstock kindly sent me copies she had of the 1994 Simon & Shuster books "Baseball Cards of the Fifties" and "Baseball Cards of the Sixties" by Frank Slocum with an introduction by Sy Berger and foreword by Willie Mays. Maxine provided background information I used to write an article on Sy Berger shortly before his death in 2014. I re-read the books recently and enjoyed looking at the photos of each of the regular Topps and Bowman cards produced during the era.

While writing this article, I checked in with Maxine, who has been very fond of her dad's involvement with Topps' history. As I talked with her, I could picture Sy Berger and Topps figuring out how to select cards that would be popular and profitable while hurdling the obstacles in getting player agreements. Maxine reports that her mother Gloria Berger, 101, is still doing quite well and continues to follow the Yankees.

400 Players to Choose From

Major League active rosters had been limited to 25 players since 1910. The league held at 16 teams until expanding to 20 teams from 1961 to 1968. Thus, there were 400 players to choose from to be on baseball cards until 1961. Bowman had the market to itself in 1950 and issued 252 cards or 63% of the available players. They could forget the fringe players, throw in a few managers and feature the best of the players they had under contracts.

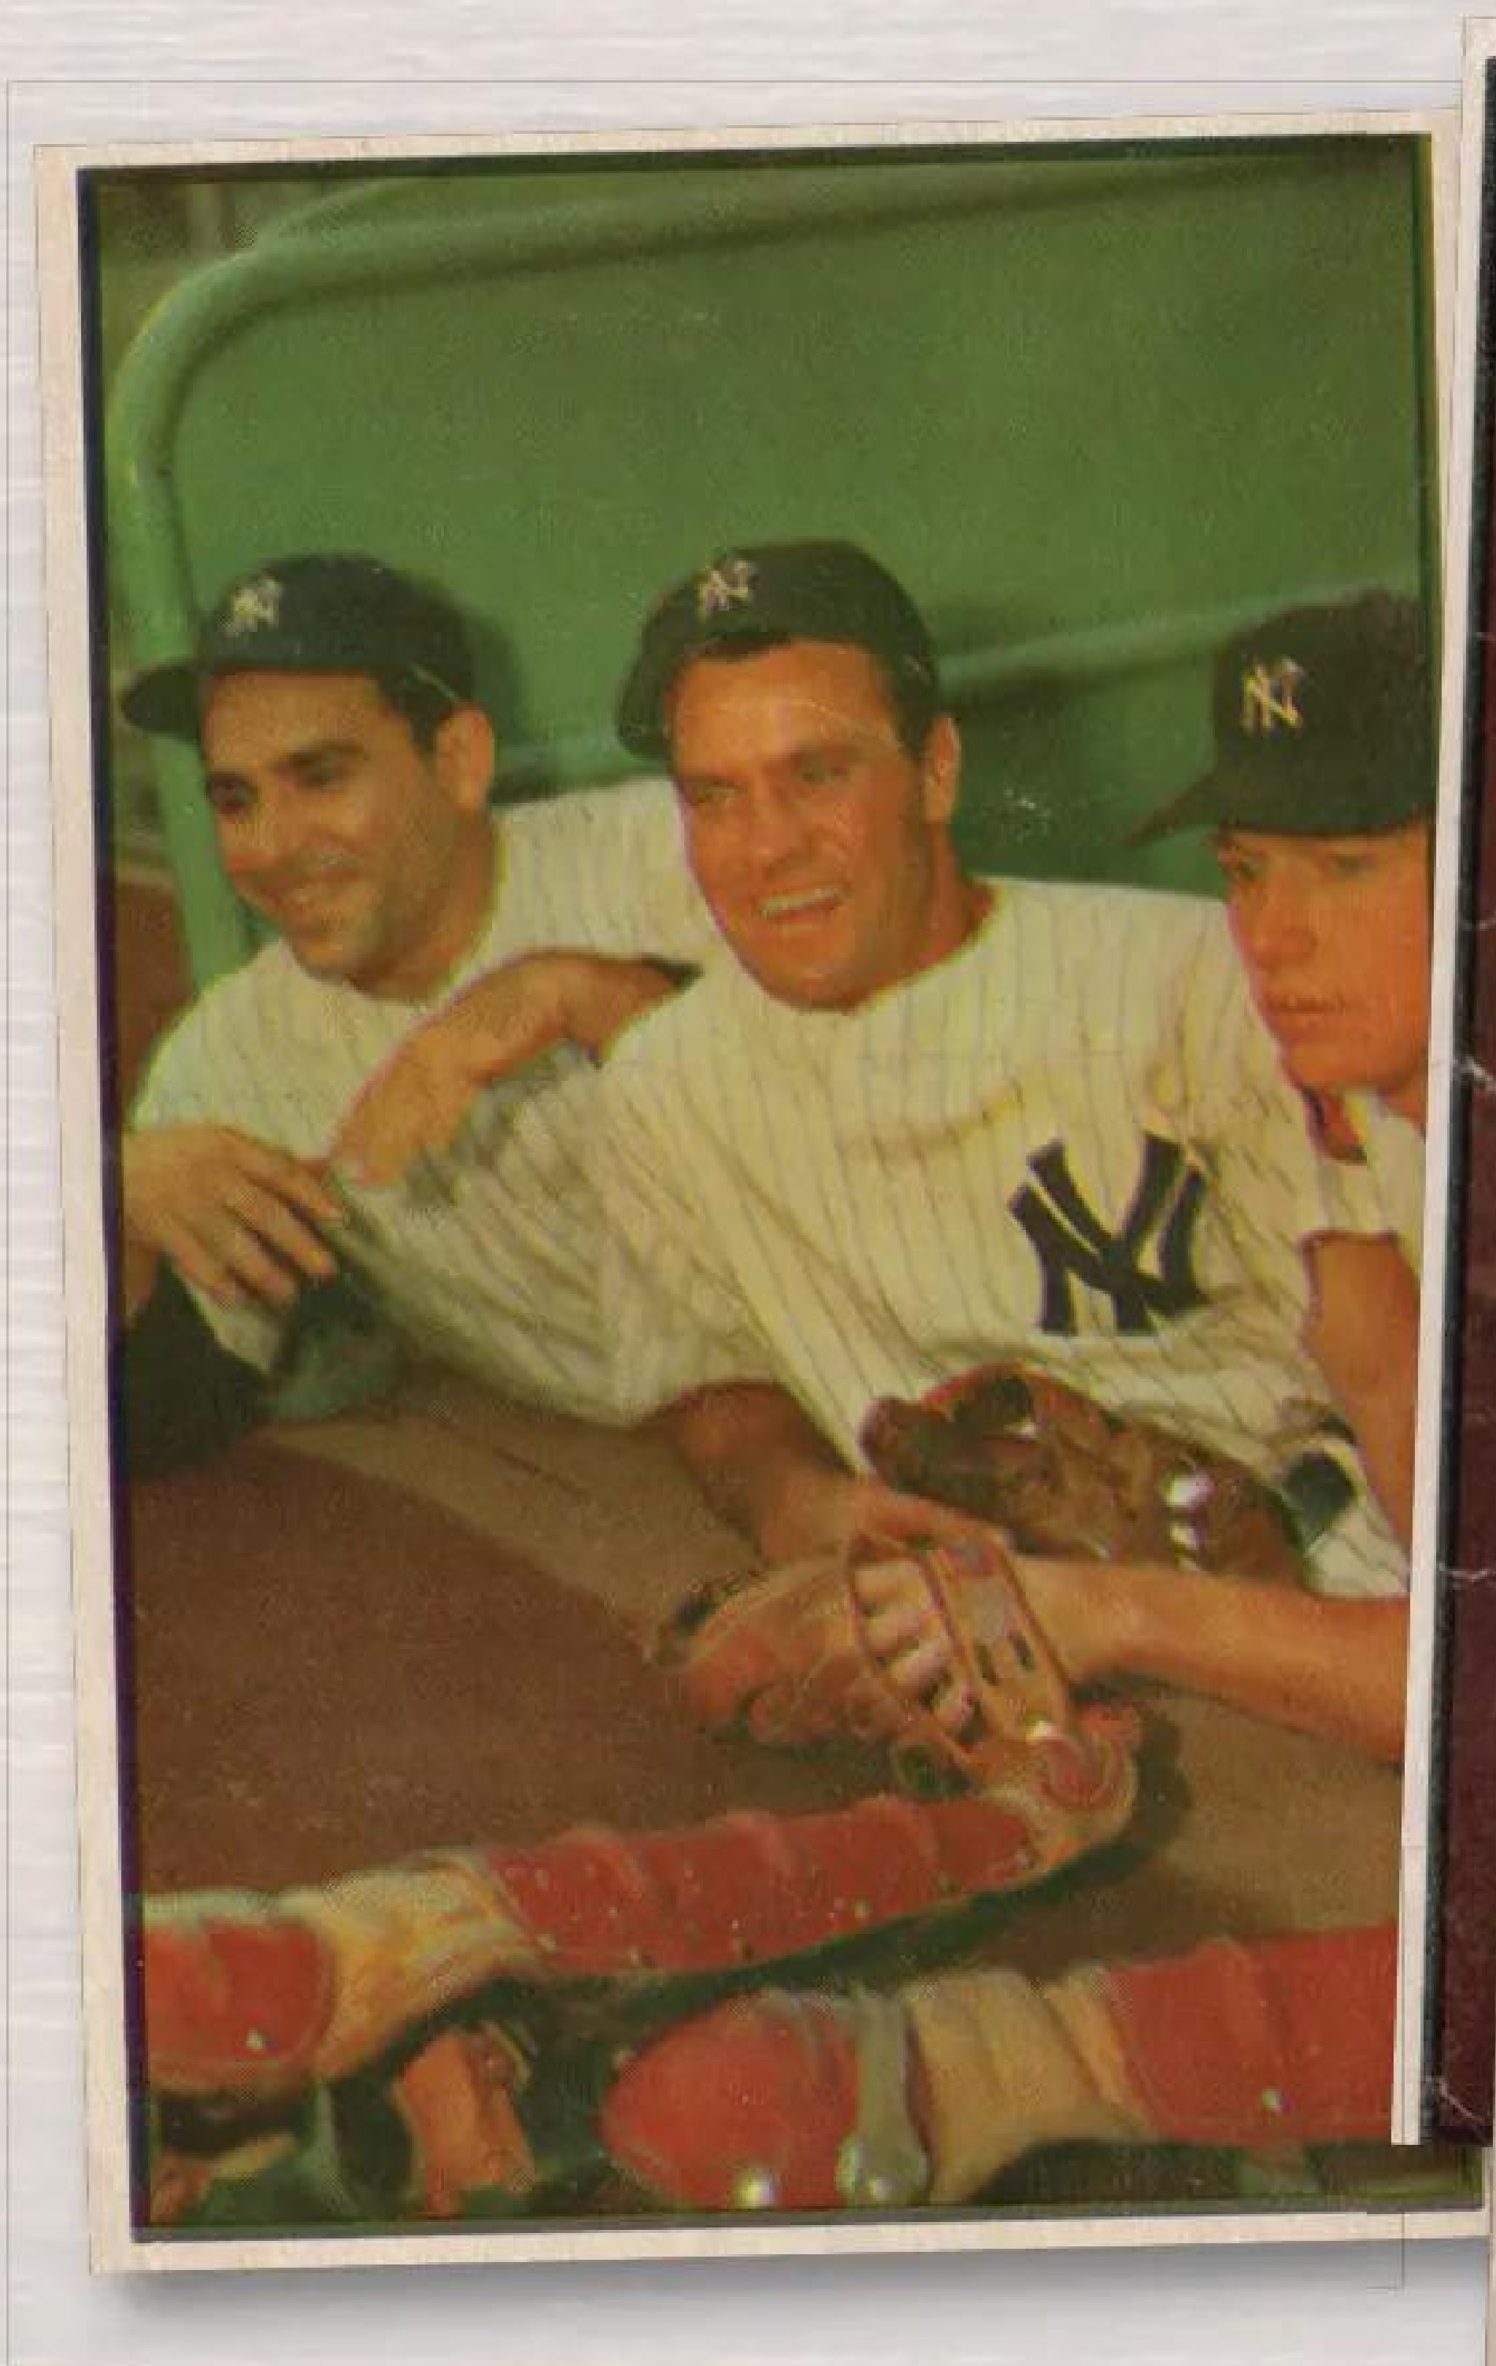
In 1951, Bowman increased its set to 324 cards, but Topps entered the market and introduced their own 104 red and blue back "taffy" cards, as Sy Berger called them.

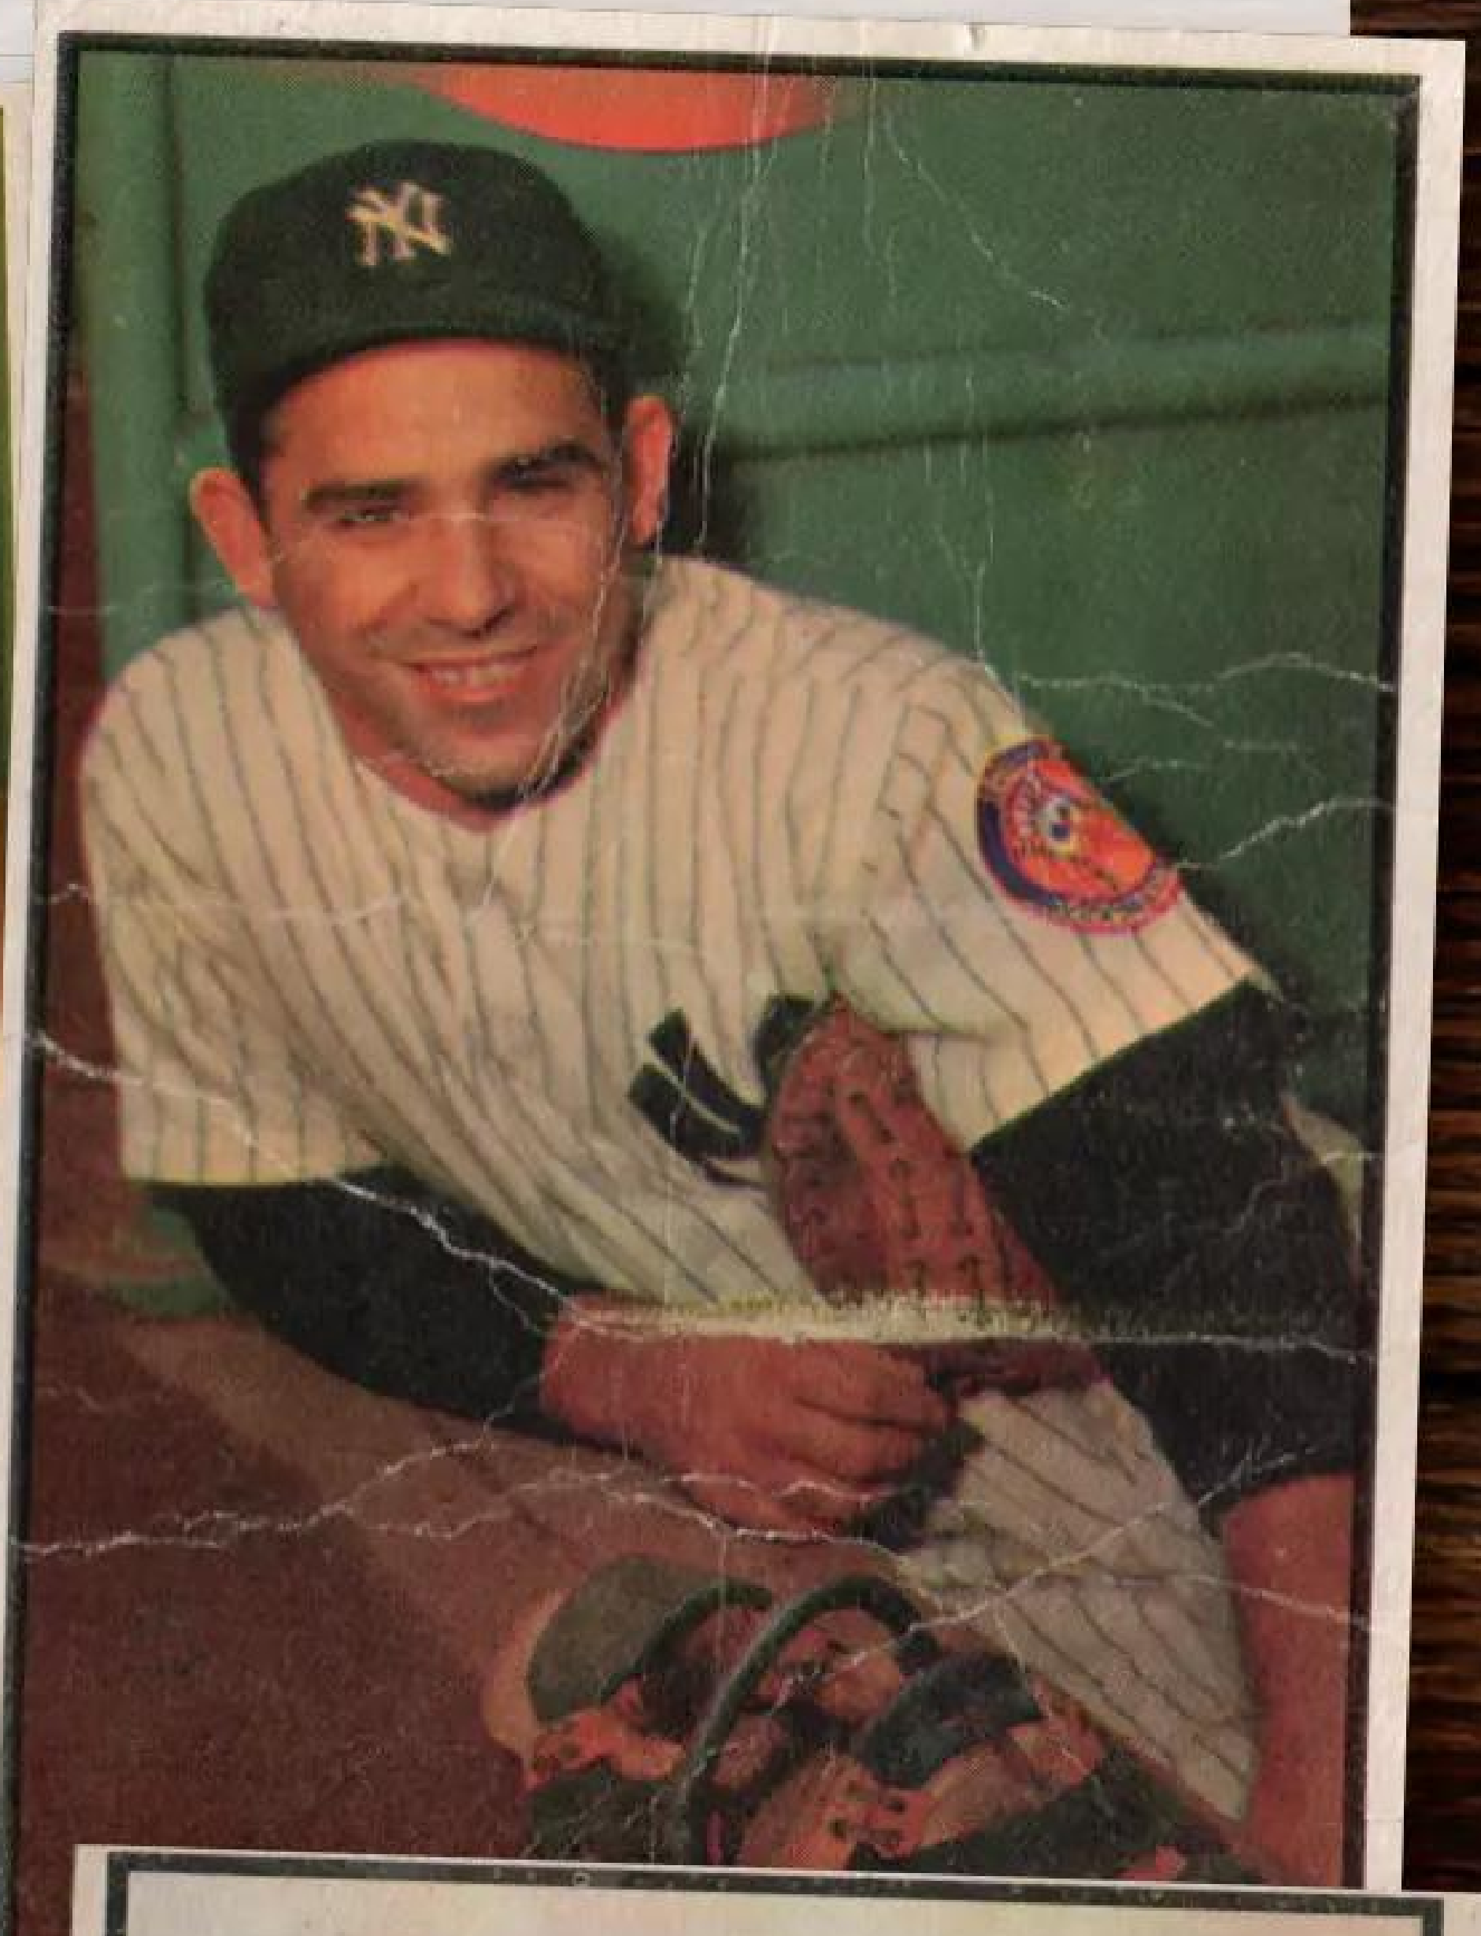
The Card Wars

In 1952, Topps issued a 407-card set - huge in size and quantity compared to Bowman's 252-card set. Players signed contracts with Bowman, Topps or both, creating good billable time for lawyers representing each side. Because of the litigation between the two companies, Topps became more conservative between 1953 and 1955 on who they depicted on their cards. The invention by necessity for both companies was to create cards in their collective productions which exceeded the number of players on major league rosters.

Managers and coaches had been on cards before but not in the increased quantities during the cardboard war years. Youngsters weren't usually delighted finding such retired players in their 1953 gum packs. In 1954 and 1955, Topps and Bowman resorted to including players who enjoyed a cup of coffee in the majors at best.

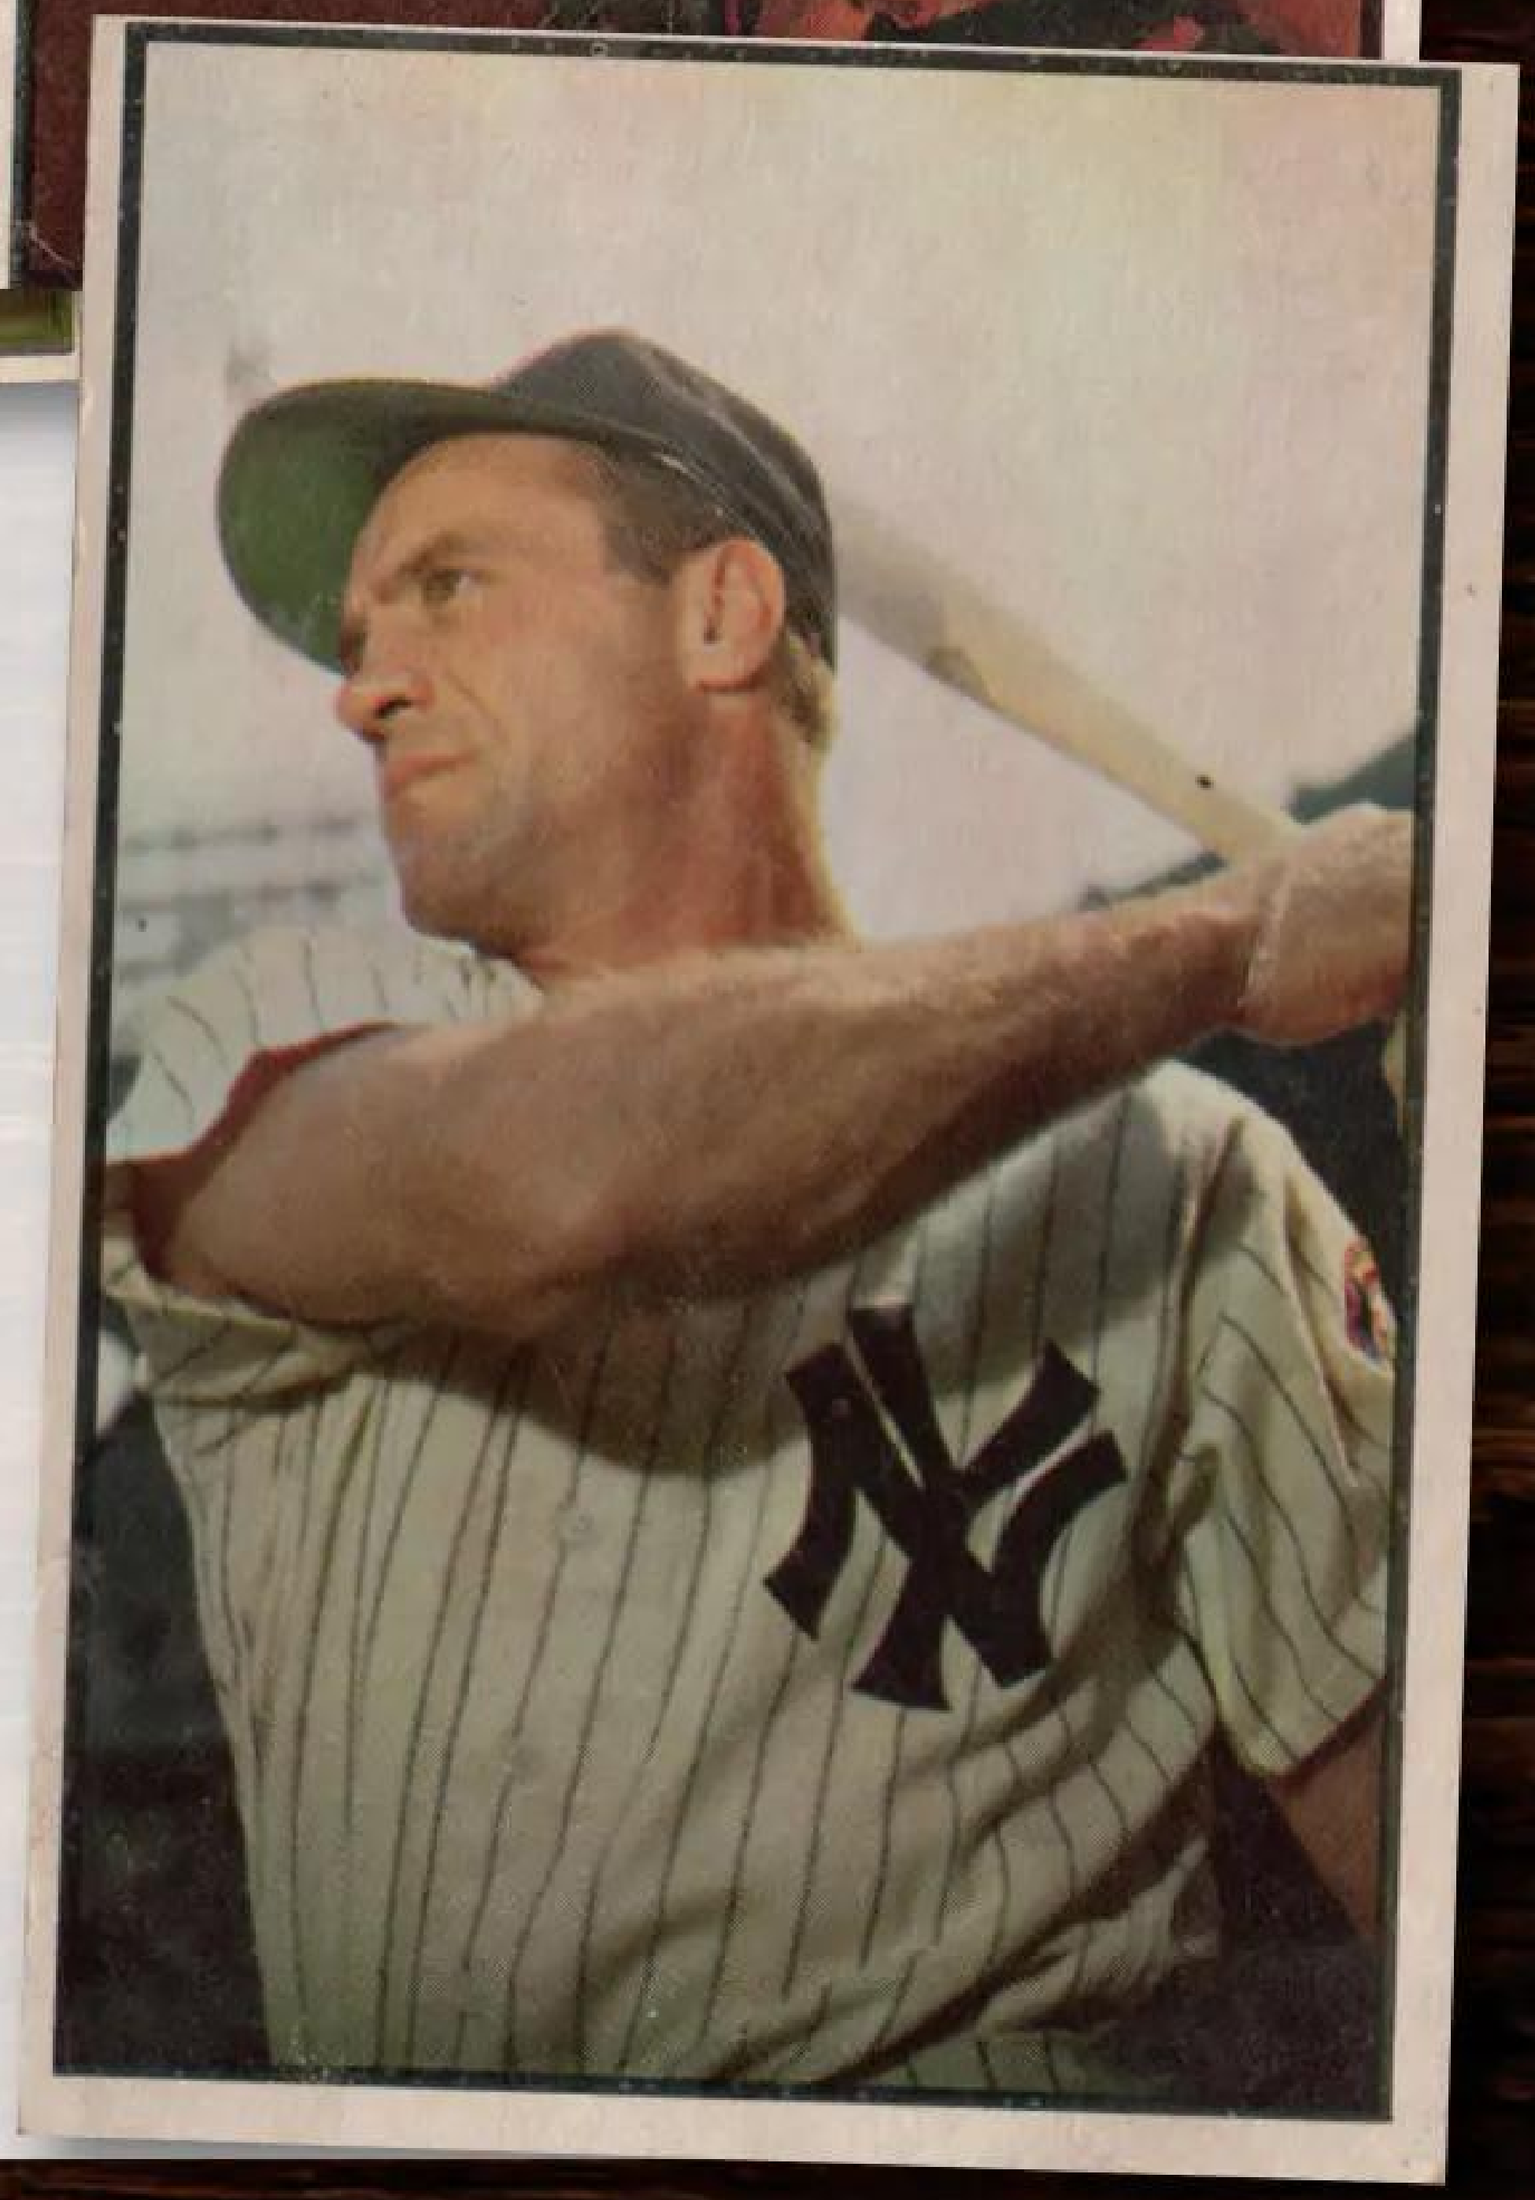
The companies came up with set-filling ideas that started as a trickle and gradually became a deluge. Even when Topps had the market to itself after 1955, they kept increasing set sizes with special cards. Let's look at when these cards were introduced.





Multi-player cards – 1953 and 1954

Bowman's 1953 Color set included a three-player card of Berra, Bauer and a sliver of Mantle and a card of Martin with Rizzuto. All five players had individual cards as well.



I remember being excited to see identical twins Eddie and Johnny O'Brien on one 1954 Topps card, although I was puzzled as to how I might use them both in our dice baseball games; both where in the military all year anyway. Maybe Topps was making room for the two Ted Williams cards in the set? You could tell that Topps was stretching by including 25 coaches and managers in their 250-card 1954 set. Bowman fired back with two brothers, Bobby and Billy Shantz, on three cards in 1955.

In-Action Cards – 1953

In-action photos of players as the main image on regular cards prior to 1972 are not easy to find. I nominate Bowman's 1953 Pee Wee Reese as the "rookie" for this category, although it wasn't until 1972 that action cards were in addition to a regular card.

It was easier to get shots of the many faces needed if a photographer posed the players. Sometimes they would pose as if they were in action, but a collector could quickly tell that

Umpires - 1955

If you are going to play those dice games with baseball cards, you might need umpires and Bowman filled out their 320-card 1955 set with 31 of the least popular people on the field.

Executives - 1956

After purchasing Bowman in 1956, Topps had their pick of the 400 active players to include in their sets. Topps soon created sets using more special cards to boost sales.

League presidents Warren Giles and William Harridge appeared on cards in 1956. Their inclusion likely earned yawns from collectors but brownie points for Topps.

they weren't. Old Judge photographers in the 1880s had players pose with balls hanging from strings to accommodate the cameras. Equipment improved for taking action shots, but, even in the early 1970s, the photographic results were sometimes distant and fuzzy. Reese's 1953 card image was likely posed as well, but he couldn't have spent much time hanging in the air over second base.

Team cards - 1956

In 1956, Topps could now safely depict cards of all players on team cards, which they had last tried in 1951. Exhibit Supply Company backed off on their use of team cards of pennant winners after Topps took control.

Checklists - 1956

Finally, in 1956 we had checklists in wax packs. They weren't exciting, but they took up space and let the kids know who they should be looking for. Checklists continued in various forms thereafter. Unmarked checklists for 1956 and 1957 can get pricey these days.

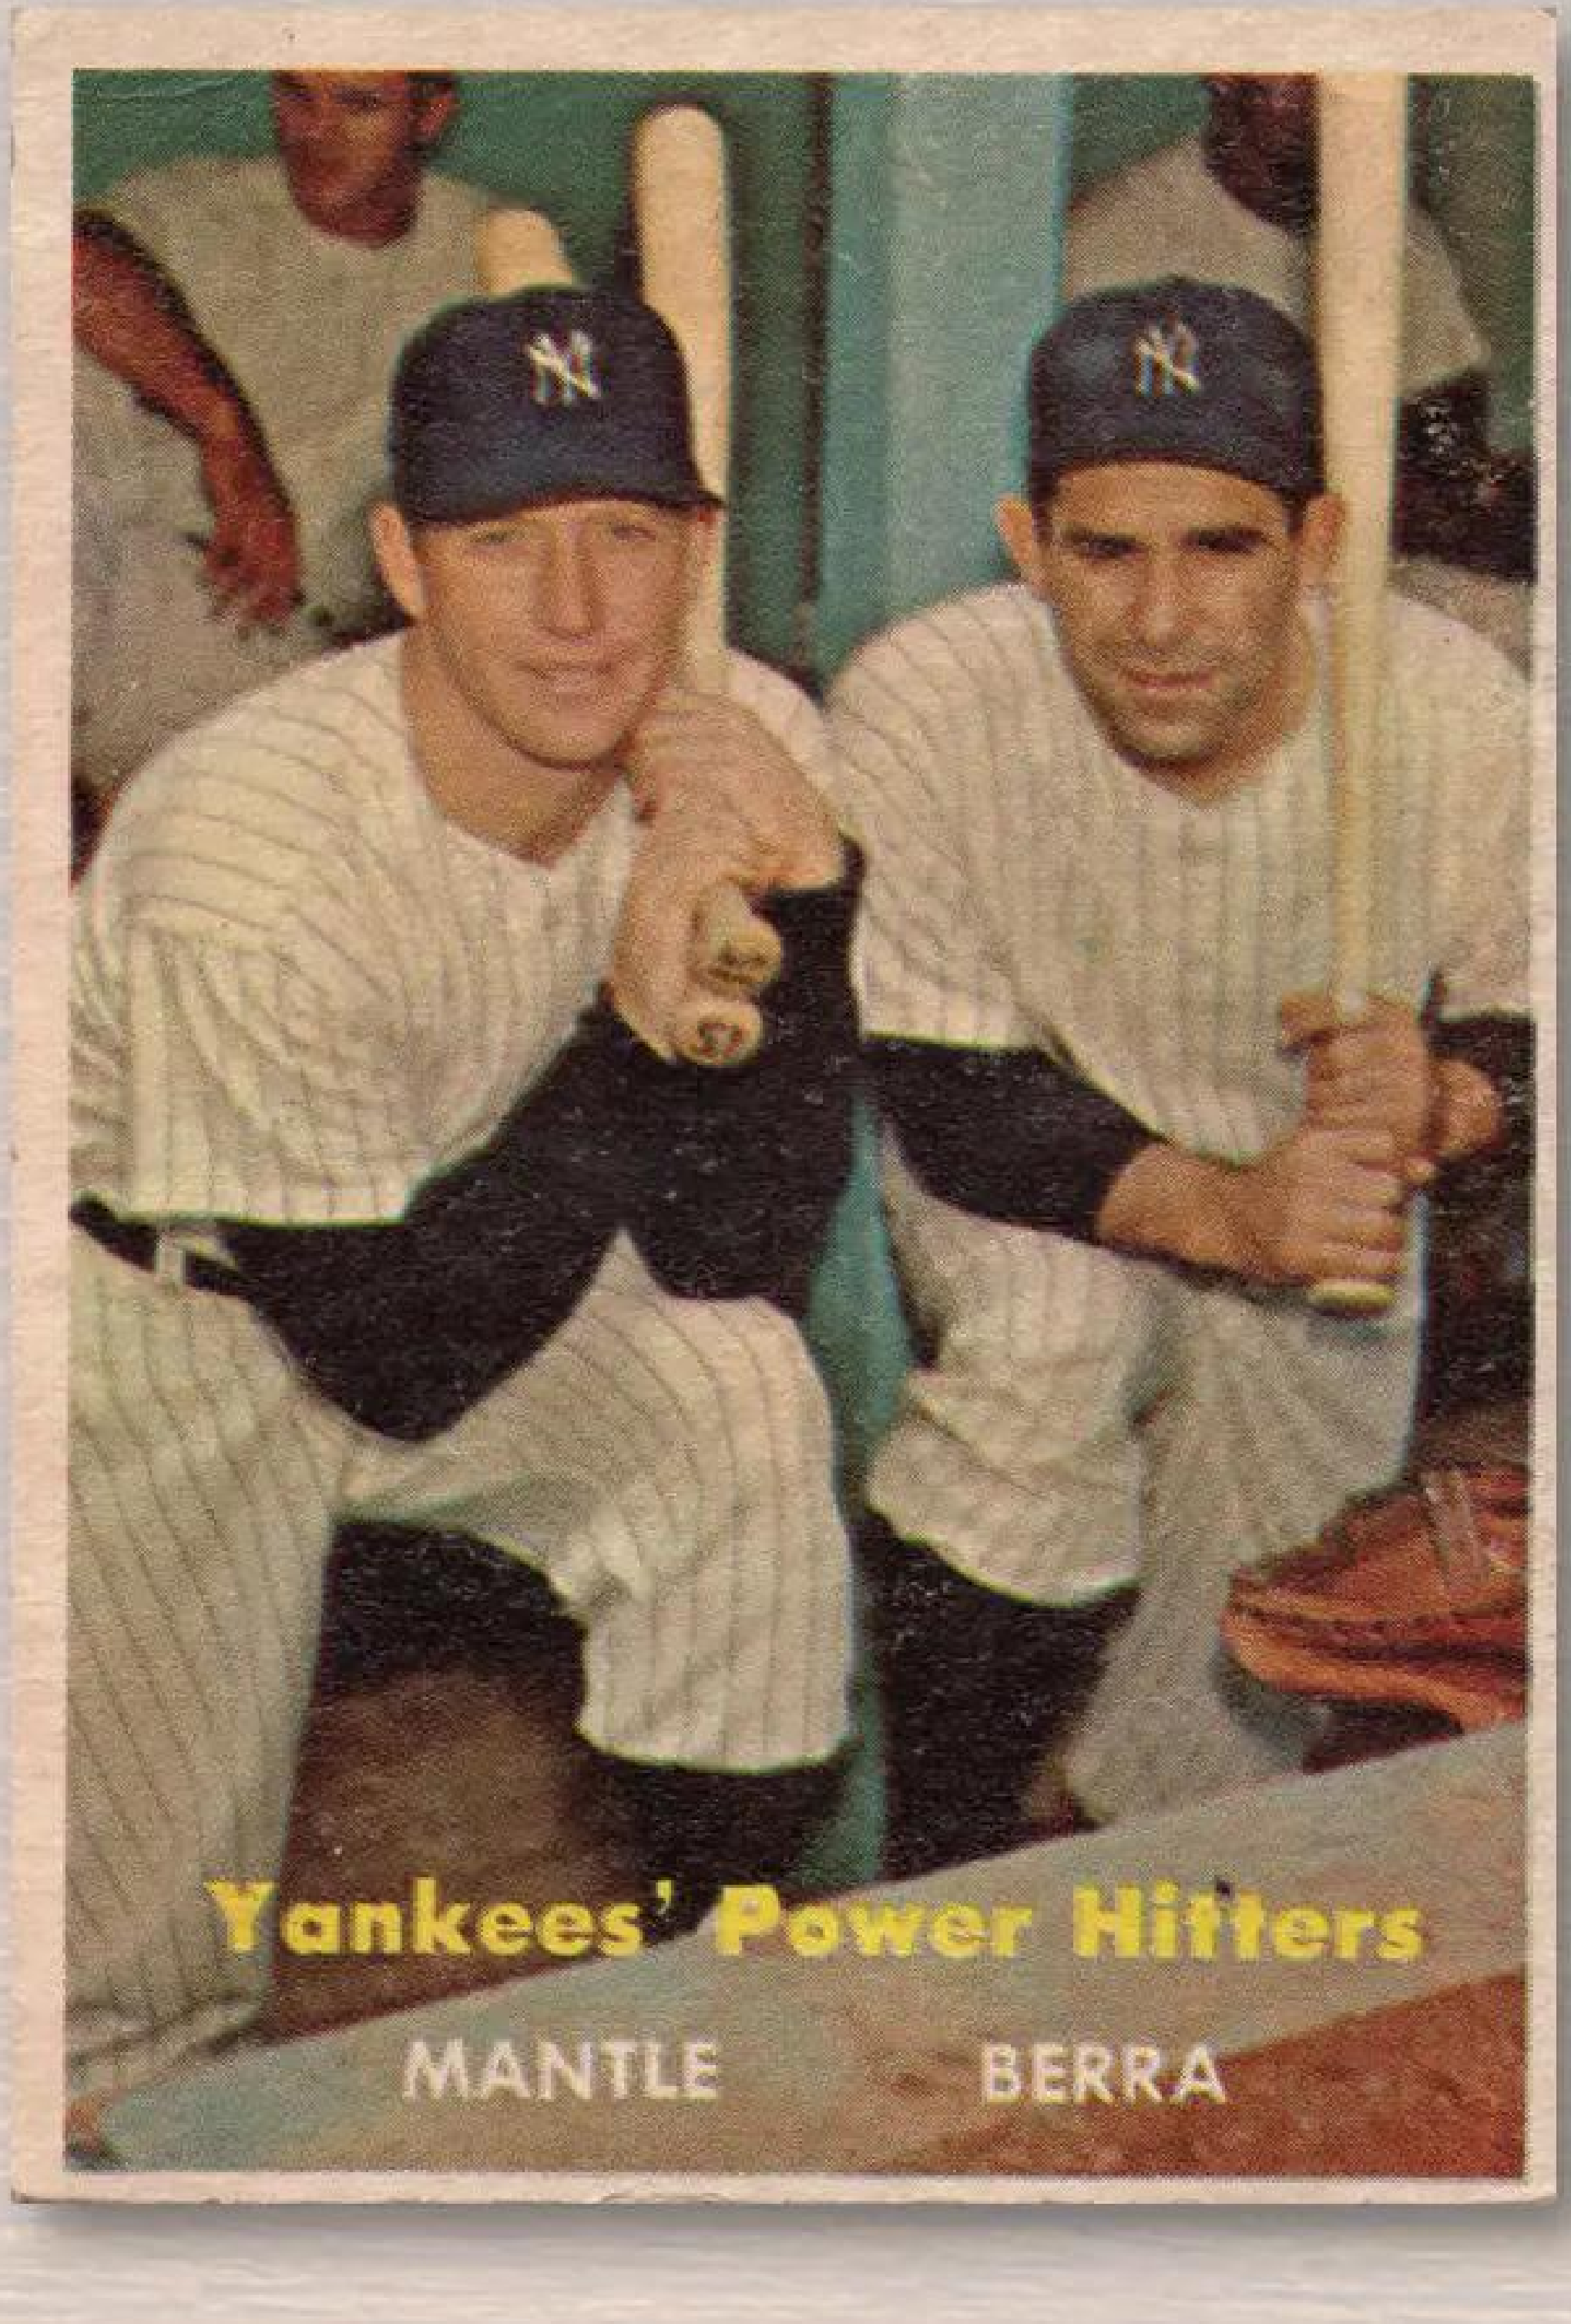
Multi-player cards in abundance after 1956



Yankees' Power Hitters

Cards with more than one player increased dramatically after 1956 as Topps sets went from 407 in 1957 to 572 by 1960. The last series of 1957 cards included Mantle and Berra on one card and Furillo, Hodges, Campanella and Snider on another. Collectors must have liked the idea of seeing stars since Topps included nine such cards in 1958 and 16 in 1959. While player contract language morphed over the years, Topps usually had the right to use a player's image on more than one card without additional compensation.

All-Star Cards - 1958

Issuing 494 cards with only 400 players in the league in 1958 was aided by a popular addition at the end of 1958 – the 21-card All-Star subset, which included Stan Musial. Musial had been absent from Topps and Bowman since 1953. SPORT magazine guessed at the start of the year who the players would be; Topps printed multiples of Mantle and Musial cards. Topps All-Star subsets continued in 1959 and quickly became annual staples.

Rookies – 1959

Rookie cards were not a big deal when issued in the 1950s. Perhaps Topps got the ball rolling with 31 players selected by The Sporting News as "Rookie Stars of 1959." It sounded better than "new guys who have a chance of sticking in the majors in 1959." None of them turned out to be superstars, but Carl Yastrzemski appeared in Topps' 1960 version among 31 players picked by SPORT.

League Leaders – 1961

This category proves handy for filling out sets because there is no end to the things you can lead the league in, and the players involved are usually stars anyway. The 1961 set included 10 cards of leaders from the prior year.

Old-Timers – 1961

It is never too late to get some sales out of the legends of the game like Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig…and Harvey Haddix. Topps honored them with 10 cards in 1961 and featured Ruth on 10 cards in 1962. Ten seemed to be a handy number for the layout of special subsets.

Gum, Inc. (Warren Bowman) beat Topps to the punch by including 18 retired players in its 1940 Play Ball set. However, Ruth, Gehrig and Ty Cobb were not included. They were represented by Christy Walsh, who had the radical concept that players should get paid for the use of their name, image and likeness. Gum, Inc. added a plethora of managers and coaches and one umpire.

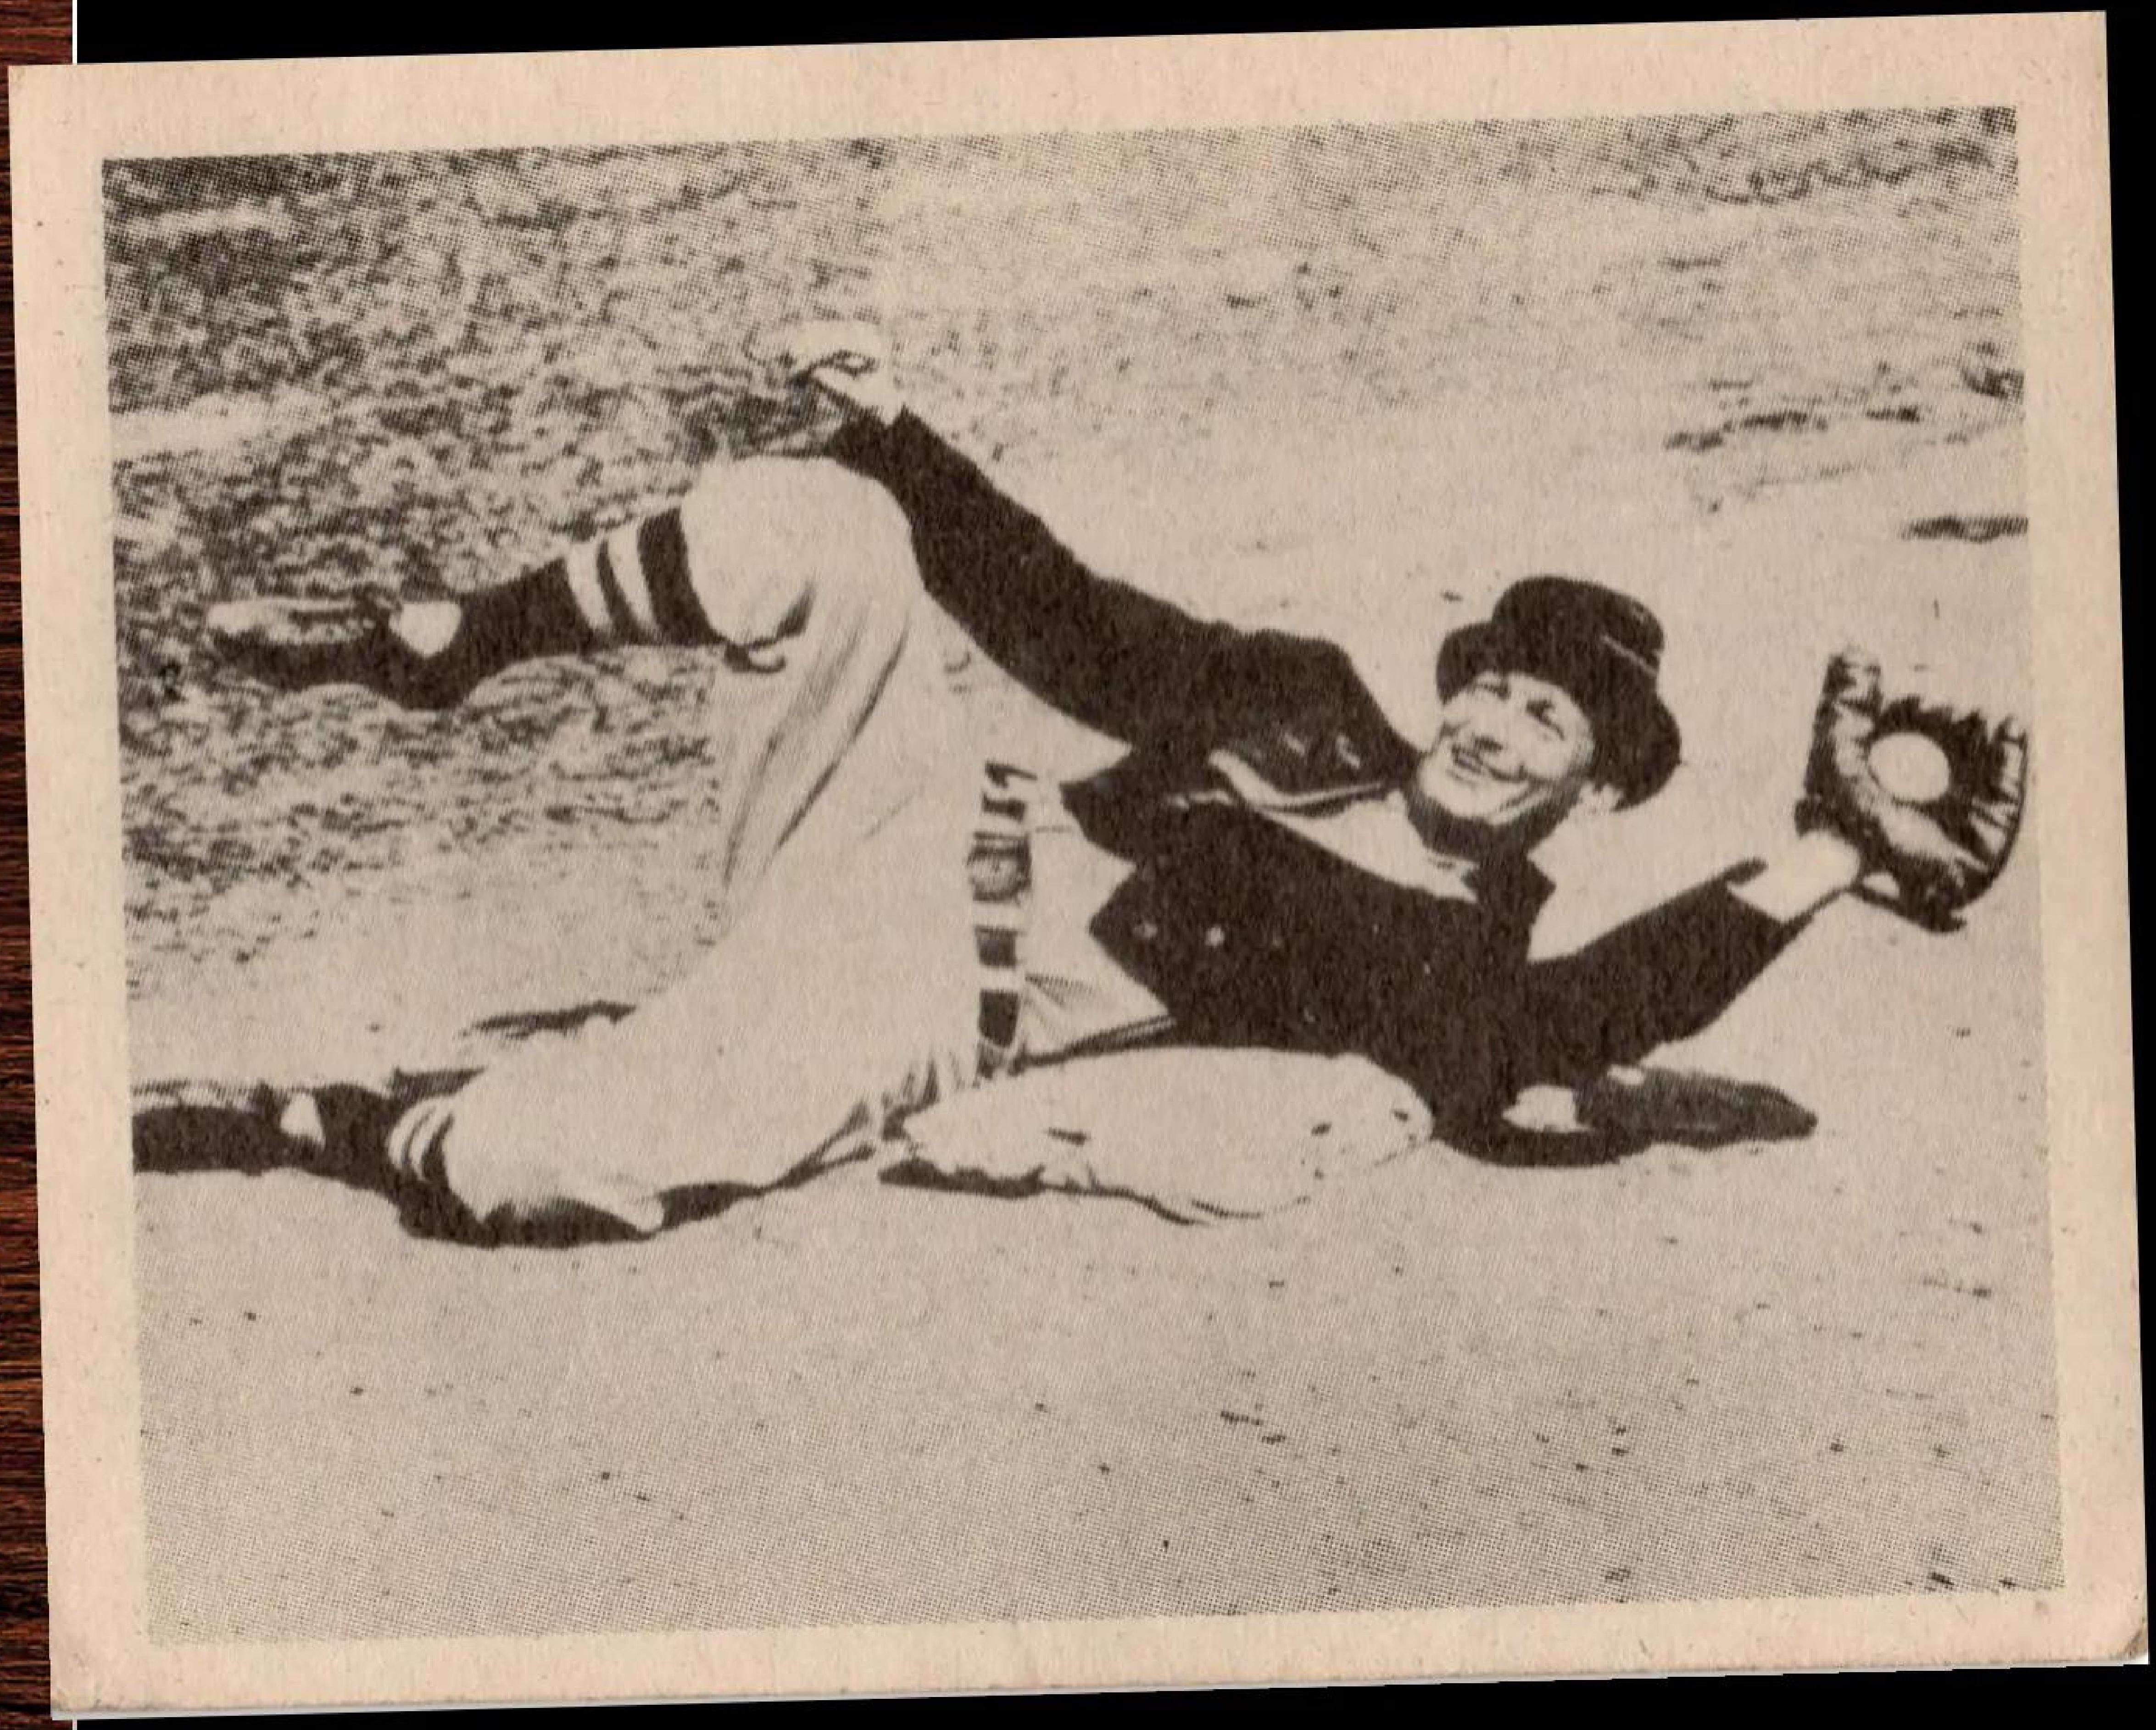
Traded players, in-action players and awards on the wall - 1972

In 1972, Topps was able to get 787 cards in a set using most of the prior special categories plus new subgroups for in-action and traded players. Taking the proverbial cake though was the inclusion of photos of actual annual awards like Minor League Player of the Year and the Babe Ruth Award. No longer did we have to just imagine what those awards looked like on a wall.



Others

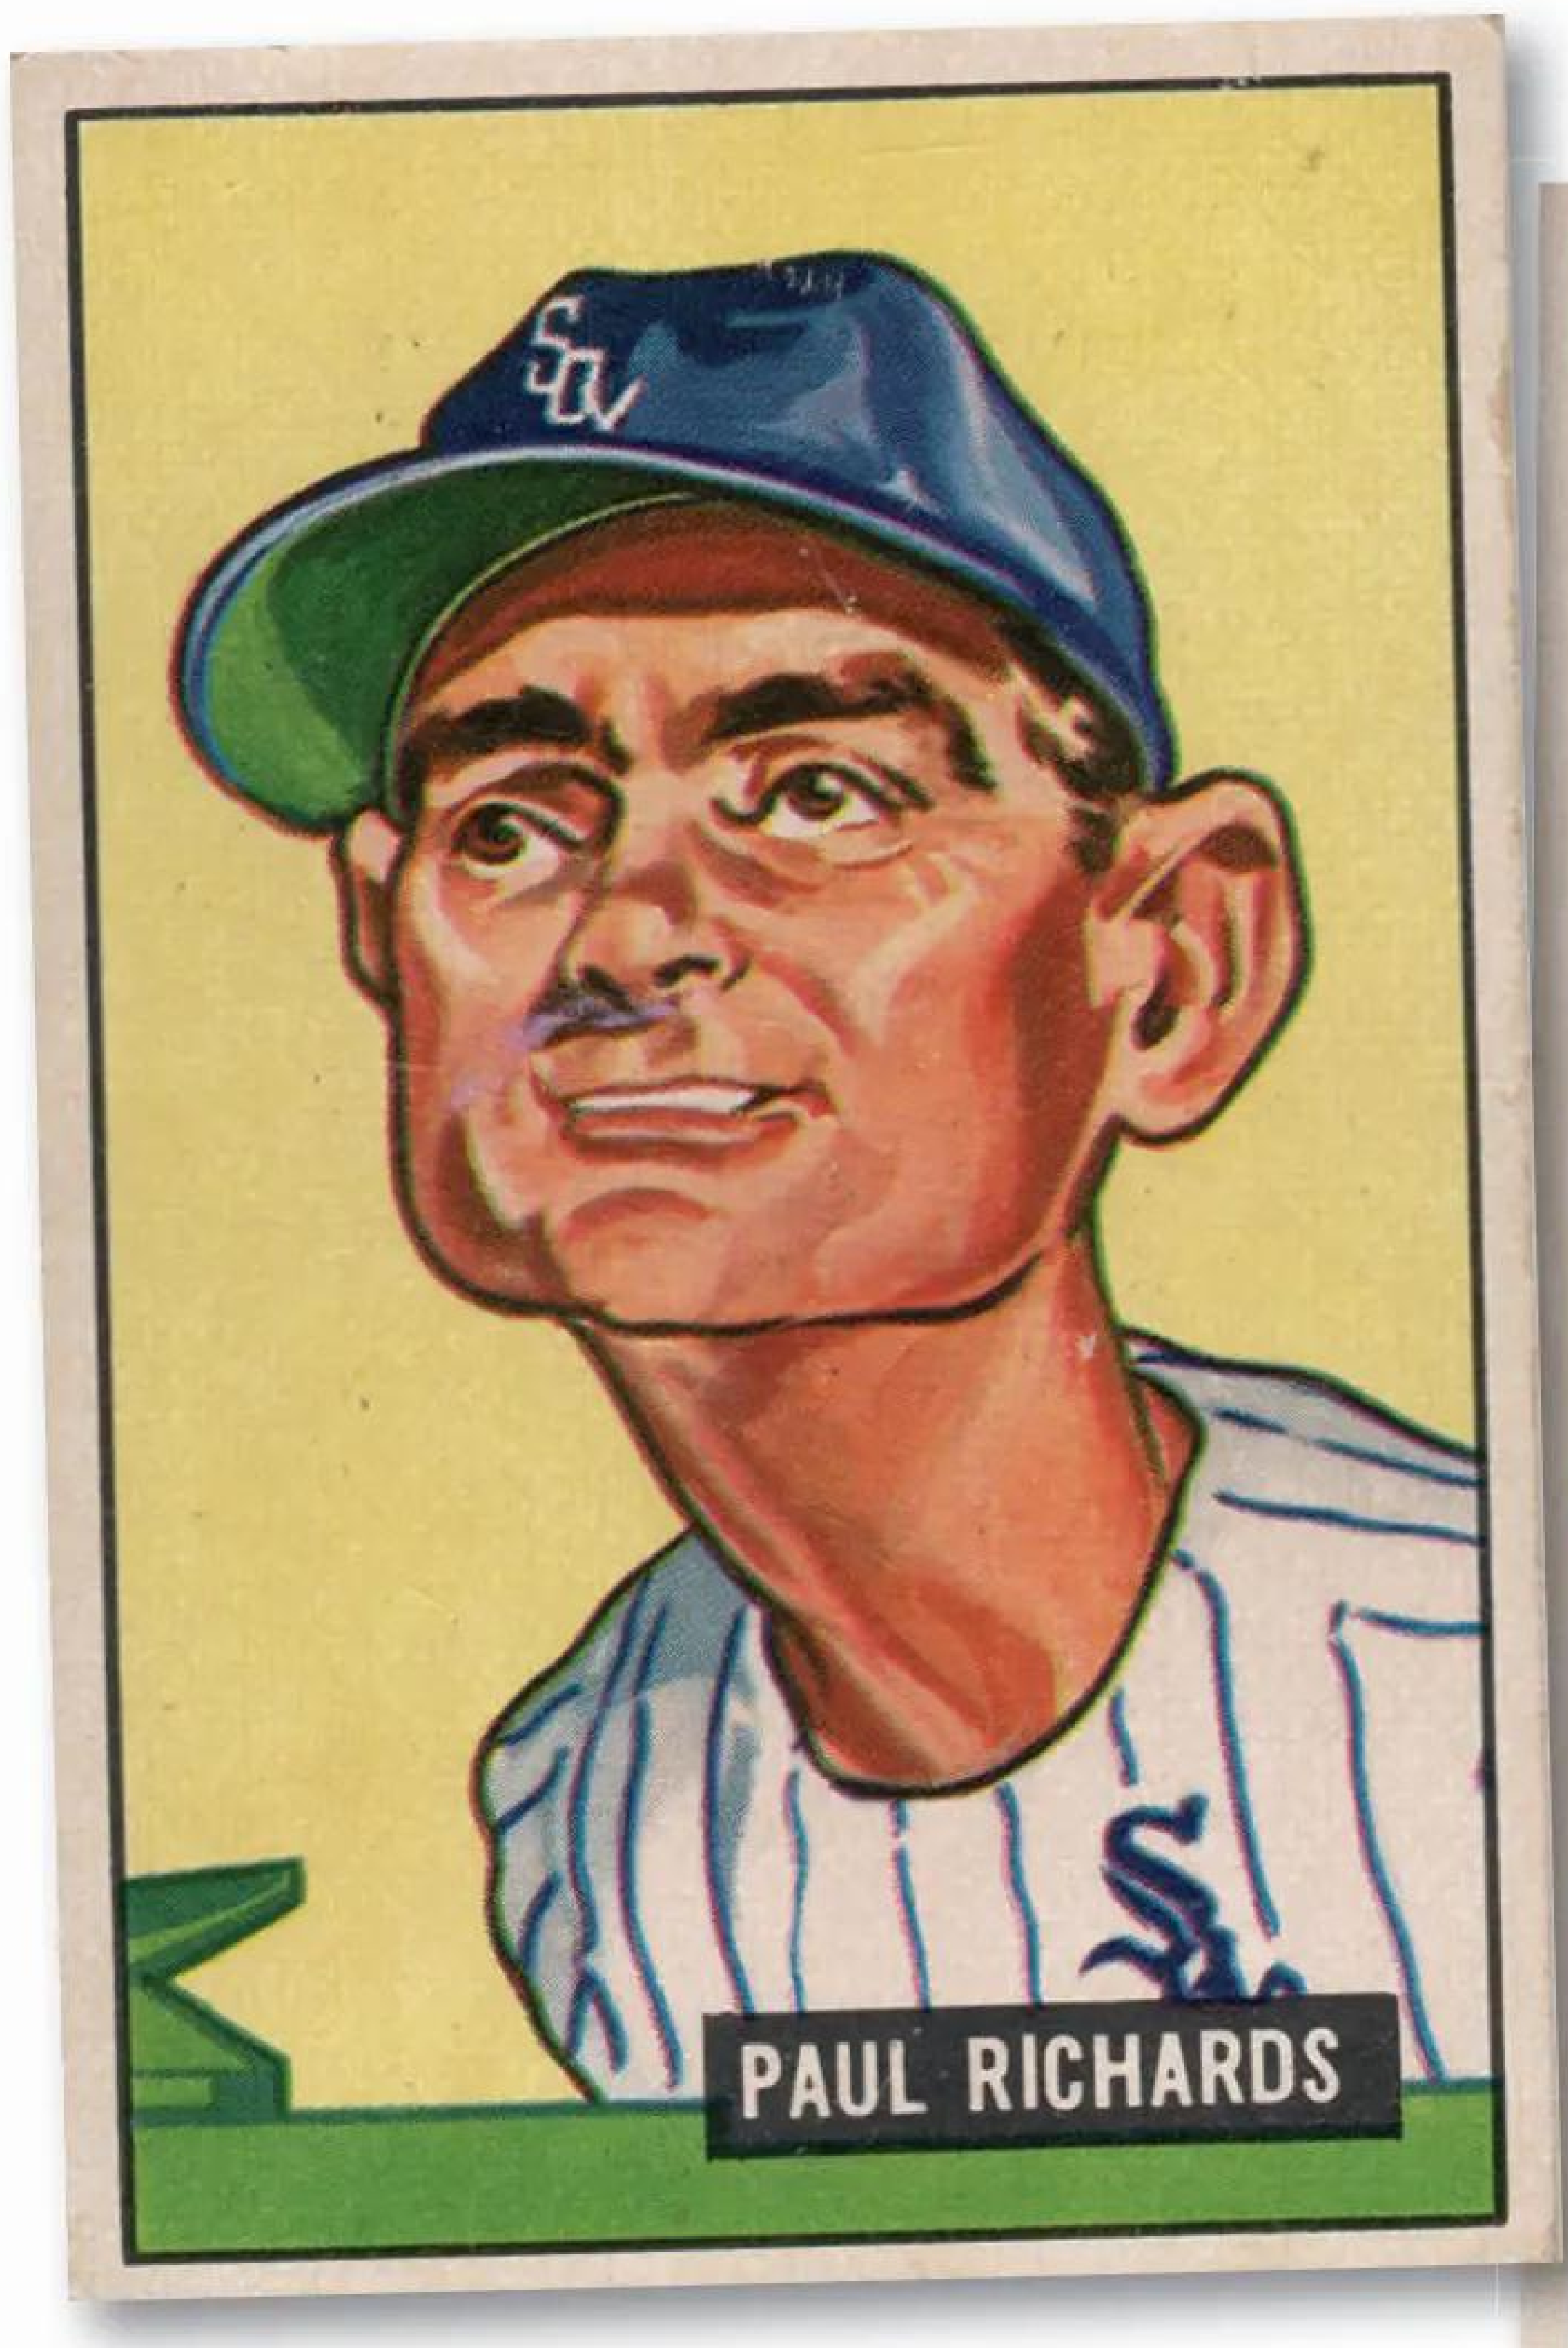
There were other oddballs which made appearances in this era.

1939 Play Ball #116 featured Al Schacht, the "Clown Prince of Baseball." Schacht had been a very good minor league pitcher but became more famous for entertaining fans.

Bowman included a caricature of Paul Richards in 1951 rather than colorized photo or realistic drawing. He became the Sox manager in October 1950. Collectors have wondered, why the funny drawing? I will guess that Richards didn't have an agreement yet with Bowman at production time, and it had more to do with a caricature drawing not requiring his consent anyway.

Summary

Bowman and Topps sparred over player agreements and the rights to use images between 1951 and 1955, making it a challenge to get permission from enough subjects for their sets. While Topps had about all players under contract after 1955, they saw the attraction to collectors of "long" sets, even when the number of cards exceeded the number of players in the league. In 1959 and 1960, Topps included 43% more cards than players. After 1961, the set sizes calmed a bit at about 10% to 20% higher.



Special cards were heavy on stars. Collectors today find that a special card with Mantle is a lot less expensive than his regular card. However, these repeat appearances of stars probably meant that you weren't going to find a Bert Hamric, Stan Jok, Mickey Micelotta, Jake Crawford, Roy Hawes or Memo Luna on cards anymore. I miss those guys.

Before he made his MLB managerial debut with Cleveland, Hall of Fame outfielder Frank Robinson managed Santurce Cangrejeros in Puerto Rico's winter league three different times, including 1974-75 when he wore this jersey, pants and stirrups.

The uniform is scheduled to appear in the Heritage 2025 May 16-18 Spring Sports Catalog auction. The consignor is an American ballplayer who played for Robinson in Puerto Rico, and the lot includes a photo of the men together with Robinson wearing the uniform.

The team logo is on the front and in place of Frank Robby's surname is "Don Q 20" – the name of the rum-making team sponsor.

SQUID GAMES

Maple Leafs legend Rick Vaive looks back on his memorable career in this exclusive Beckett interview.

By Bill Hoppe

On a weeknight in early December, three-time 50-goal scorer Rick Vaive signed autographs for an hour at a casino in Buffalo as part of an appearance for the Sabres alumni before hopping in his car, crossing the border into Canada and driving about 80 miles up the Queen Elizabeth Way.

Vaive, who was known as Squid during his playing days, was needed in Oakville, Ontario, to participate in a draft party for the Easter Seals Celebrity Hockey Classic. Each of the 17 teams in the tournament selected a former NHL player.

"I ended up going 17th," the 65-year-old laughed.

The next day, Vaive, perhaps the oldest player on the ice, scored eight goals in three games.

A week after the Easter Seals event, he could be found playing games at several rinks around Toronto, where he made his name as the Maple Leafs' biggest star in the early 1980s. For two days, he participated in the Hockey Helps the Homeless tournament in Newmarket. He closed the week by representing the Leafs alumni at a game in Halton.

Despite retiring from pro hockey almost 32 years ago, Vaive never really hung up his skates.

"I love to play, I love to score, I love to compete," said Vaive, whose dynamic ability around the net helped him become the first Maple Leaf to score 50 goals in 1981-82. "I'll do it as long as I can until they rip the skates off me and say, 'You're done.'"

Vaive is a fixture on the alumni hockey circuit, playing around 60 games a year for different teams, including the NHL and Sabres alumni teams. The tenacity he showcased as a winger throughout a terrific 13-year NHL career in which he scored 441 goals still helps him fill the net.

"When I go out there, whether it's a tournament, whether it's an alumni game, I mean, I go as hard as I can," said Vaive, who scored 298 goals in the 1980s, the decade's seventh-highest total. "Sometimes that's not the best. There's guys out there that are a lot faster than I am and so on, but it doesn't matter. I usually try to play with two decent players. If I get open, I can put it in the net."

Autograph sessions or meet-and-greets often accompany the games or events he participates in. That obligation may deter some retired greats, but not Vaive. From the days when he started playing junior hockey and was first approached for his signature or a photo, he's always obliged.

"That's the way I was brought up by my parents," he said. "I just thought that that was the right thing to do."

Even after he became the Leafs' captain and the biggest star in Toronto, a city often called the center of the hockey universe, those values never left him.

"I don't mind doing it," said Vaive, a native of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. "Some guys get bothered by it. I always look at it from the opposite side in that this person wants an autograph or a picture, so why not? I'm not Wayne Gretzky or God knows who else of the big sports guys from any league.

"Yeah, I mean, I had a good career, but at the same time, if people want to collect your cards or get a picture, you know what? I'm OK with that. I've never had a problem with that whatsoever."

The former Maple Leafs captain spoke to Beckett Hockey about the impact of his recent autobiography, a memorable run-in with Mr. Hockey, and his appreciation of his fans.

Beckett: In 2020, you published a book with author Scotty Morrison, "Catch 22: My Battles, in Hockey and Life," that landed on Canada's best-seller list. What spurred you to write a memoir in the first place?

Vaive: Scotty Morrison approached me about writing the book. I keep hearing things from fans or whatever, not just (about) hockey but all the other major sports, like, "Oh, their life must have been so wonderful.' I don't think these people understand how many people struggled when they were growing up. I wanted to write something that would prove it's not easy. It's a challenge from Day One.

Beckett: In it, you detailed your battle with alcohol and gave an unvarnished account of your life. What kind of response have you received from being so open about your struggles?

Vaive: There was a guy (at the 2023 Borje Salming Foundation game in Sweden) who had it signed, (but) he was afraid to come talk to me.

He (later) sent me a nice letter about how my book helped him get off of drugs and alcohol. To this day, I'll hear from him once in a while. So for me, that's pretty special when it helps somebody. (It's) just nice to know that what I went through and what I wrote, that it helped somebody way over on the other side of the world.

Beckett: Let's go back to your playing days. After a 76-goal, 155-point season with the Sherbrooke Castors in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League in 1977-78, you turned pro as a 19-year-old with the Birmingham Bulls of the now-defunct World Hockey Association. What do you remember about jumping to the rebel league at such a young age and playing in Alabama?

Vaive: A lot of our good players (in Sherbrooke) had finished junior, and I'm in a situation where I just had a fantastic second season after winning rookie of the year in my first season in the league. And I'm thinking, 'Well, who am I going to play with?' So the opportunity came up in Birmingham (where I could) play against pros and men. It wasn't a lot of money. I think it was $20,000 to sign and a $30,000 salary for the whole year, and my junior team offered me probably almost three times that under the table. But the point wasn't the money. It was moving on, playing against pros, and getting better. At the time, I don't think my GM (in Sherbrooke) understood that. I know he began to understand as time went on.

(The WHA) was different. I mean, you're in Alabama, you're not thinking about this (being) a hockey place. But we did OK. We averaged probably about nine or 10,000 a game, which I didn't think was all that bad for Birmingham, Alabama.

I think it was the best thing for me to move forward in my career. That was the whole intent of it.

Beckett: You're remembered as a goal scorer, but you also led the WHA with 248 penalty minutes in 1978-79. How did that become part of your game as a rookie pro?

Vaive: I kind of had it in me anyway, but I remember John Brophy, who was our coach, called me in one day and said, 'We don't have all the tough guys here.' They were all there the year before and beat the hell out of every team in the league. So we only had Dave Hanson (of "Slap Shot" fame) left. He said, 'Listen, you got to stick up for yourself because if you don't, they're going to try to run you out of the league.'

I already had that disposition in me anyway. Like, that's kind of the way I played. But when he mentioned that, I thought, 'You know what? He's got a good point.' So I had to stick up for myself. Did I get the (crap) beat out of me a lot? Yeah, probably. But, you know what? At the end of the day, I think that was something that helped me further on in my career.

Beckett: Brophy, a former minor league pugilist, was known as a colorful coach who was liberal in his use of, shall we say, salty language. He later coached you in your final season in Toronto. What do you remember about him?

Vaive: He was a different cat. He's from Antigonish, Nova Scotia, so he's a Maritimer like me. The one thing about Broph was you'd get him away from the rink, and he's a completely different person. I think you can say that about a lot of coaches, but he was a completely different person, a great guy, and would do anything for you. Was he a little crazy as a coach? Yes. But back then, all coaches were crazy. I mean, they were all the same. They were all yelling, and screaming. There were no coaches that were calm back then. So they were all pretty much the same.

I think the first coach I had who was calm was when I came to Buffalo (Ted Sator). Him and Mike Nykoluk were the only two coaches I ever had who were really calm, which was not normal back then.

Beckett: Is it true that Gordie Howe once knocked you out with an elbow?

Vaive: Yup. In the WHA.

Beckett: What do you remember about playing against Mr. Hockey in the final years of his illustrious career?

Vaive: Not a ton. He was mean. He was vicious. That particular time I remember we were playing at home. There was a faceoff to the right of our goal, and I played center all the way up to junior. I was pretty decent on the faceoffs and Broph used to put me out for faceoffs in our zone on the right side. So I won the faceoff, our D threw it off the glass, and I beat their guy down to the puck. I turned to shoot it in the empty net, and the next thing I know I'm on the ice.

I tried to get up and I fell and I started crawling to the bench. I didn't know what happened, and the next day I watched the video. ... He elbowed me up and caught me in the back of the head. That was it. Well, I can always say that Gordie Howe knocked me out with an elbow!

Beckett: After that year in Birmingham, you were eligible for the 1979 NHL draft. The Vancouver Canucks took you fifth overall but traded you to Toronto with Bill Derlago just a few months later. Were you disappointed your career in Vancouver lasted just 47 games?

Vaive: I was pretty pissed off, I'm not going to lie. My first thought when I got drafted by Vancouver was, 'Oh, that's going to suck, because my parents are in PEI and the games aren't going to start until 10 o'clock (their time) or whatever.' But once I got there I kind of liked it. It was a pretty good place to play. I had a lot of good teammates, and all of a sudden, they started trading some of them. Next thing you know, I got traded. I was pretty pissed off and disappointed when it happened.

But once I got to Toronto, it was like a new lease on life, so to speak. Things started going well. I was probably more disappointed when I got traded from Toronto to Chicago (in 1987) than I was when I got traded from Vancouver to Toronto.

Beckett: The irascible Harold Ballard owned the Leafs throughout your tenure in Toronto, an era known for its dysfunction. When you think of Ballard, what comes to mind?

Vaive: Harold wasn't a terrible person. He didn't treat us badly. It was just he would not pay for a good general manager, he would not pay for a good coach, and he would not pay us what we should've been paid compared to guys on other teams who were doing the same things we were.

I remember one story: We used to charter those little prop planes, which we did (when I was) in Buffalo as well. We were almost halfway through the season, and that was when King Clancy (a Hockey Hall of Famer and close friend of Ballard's) was still alive, and King kind of kept him in control. When King passed away, that's when Harold went down that path.

But anyway, we're on this flight and we get our little (plate) of lasagna. The flight attendant would come by with a wicker basket of chocolate bars. King would always sit one or two seats ahead of Harold. He said to the flight attendant, 'The other old guy behind me can't have any because he's a diabetic.' Well, she gets to Harold, he puts his hand in and grabs about four of them. She slaps his hand and says, 'You can't have any. You're a diabetic.' Well, the next day he canceled the charters for the rest of the season!

But you know what? He wasn't a bad guy. We stayed in the best hotels. We chartered. But, I mean, he didn't want to spend the money to win. Bottom line. The building was full every game. He was raking the money in.

Beckett: Let's talk about your signature. You always write every letter. It looks like you take real pride in your autograph.

Vaive: I did a lot of events with guys from the Montreal Canadiens like (Jean) Beliveau, (or) guys like Johnny Bower, and Bobby Hull. Their autographs were impeccable, and I remember them saying to me, 'You sign your autograph, you make sure somebody can read it.' I've never forgotten that.

I look at some (player signatures) and I go, 'Who is that?' On a stick, there are 20-some autographs, and you can't make out any of them. If you didn't know their numbers, you wouldn't know who the heck it was. So that's something that I've taken pride in my whole life. I make sure when I do sign an autograph, I sign it properly so people can read it.

I think that's kind of a lost (art) now. I don't think it's that (today's players) don't care, it's that they probably have to sign so many that they just scribble, put their name, and their number, and figure that's good. Well, I don't look at it like that because I was taught differently by guys before me. And I've said this to players, the same thing as Bobby Hull, Johnny Bower, and Beliveau told me, but I guess they don't listen.

Beckett: You've appeared on more than 400 cards over the years. Do you have a favorite?

Vaive: No, they're all special to me. The fact that you played 13 years in the best league in the world and people have cards of yours (is special). I get cards (in the mail all the time to sign). It's funny because I lived in Oakville for quite some time, and for about five years I never got anything in the mail. Then, all of sudden, it's like, boom, envelopes are coming with 10 cards to sign or whatever. And I'd go to the mailbox and there'd be like eight envelopes in there from fans. So I would always sign them.

When I moved to Niagara Falls (Ontario) 12 years ago, again, for the first four or five years, nothing. And now I get ... probably get three or four a day. And I don't have a problem with signing them, putting them in the return envelope, and sending them back. I look at it like they went through the effort to do that, so it must be special to them, and so I need to sign it and send it back to them because that's something that they're going to cherish.

Beckett: Companies have issued dozens of new cards of you since your retirement in 1992. What do you think about still being included in sets?

Vaive: Well, I guess the best answer to that is if they weren't making cards of me, then (I'd) have to be worried. If they're still making cards of me, then somebody still remembers me.

Beckett: You've signed cards over the years for Upper Deck and other companies. What do you think of that process?

Vaive: It's cool. They may send you 200 or 300 cards, you sign them, you put them back in the case they give you, and you send them back. And they turn around and sell them, which, hey, now 200 or 300 more people get Rick Vaive autographed cards. I mean, that's pretty cool!

Beckett: Have you kept any memorabilia from your career?

Vaive: Unfortunately, I never got a game-worn jersey anywhere I played. I got traded from Vancouver before my first year was over, and then in Toronto, Harold Ballard would always give both sets to our medical guy, and then he would sell them and keep the money. Never got one in Chicago because I got traded. And Buffalo I never got one, either. It kind of sucks because it would be nice to have my own game-worn jerseys from the teams I played on. But, unfortunately, I don't.

I had a lot of other things. I had medals from the World Juniors and the World Championships. A while ago I asked my two boys, 'Do you want any of these things?' They said, 'Ah, nah, dad, don't worry about me.' I put them up for auction, and then I took the money from the auction and put it in their accounts.

I figured what the heck? Yeah, they were special to me, but at the same time, I (realized that) at some point I'm not going to be around, what's going to happen to these items then?

THE BABE-CENTRIC 1933 GOUDEY SET

Babe Ruth was a marketing machine in the late 1920s and into the mid- '30s, and the Goudey Gum Company cashed in on The Bambino (four times!) in its landmark 1933 Goudey release

There may not be a consensus among collectors on a 'Mount Rushmore' of vintage baseball card sets, but if the popular 1933 Goudey is not on the list is it really a Mount Rushmore?

An exclusion of the popular 1933 Goudey set on any list would seem unjustified. Goudey's inaugural baseball card offering is one of the most collected in the history of the hobby.

There are so many ins and outs of the set that it's difficult to settle on a proper point of entry. Its historical context and the hobby's then-impending shift, though, is a good place to start.

Was it a calculated plan to entice more gum sales, or was leaving card #106 Nap Lajoie out of 1933 Goudey just a mistake? The card was ultimately produced and printed on the same sheets as 1934 Goudey Baseball, but only was available to those writing the company to ask about the one card missing from their 1933 sets.

Goudey offered these cards inside of its one-cent packages of Big League Chewing Gum. Even at that price point, they still would have been a bit of a luxury for some given the time period. America was in the midst of the Great Depression and in between two World Wars. Fancy 'pictures of baseball players' were simply not something that was affordable to everyone.

The hobby was entering a dramatic shift, too. Baseball cards were previously offered inside of cigarette and tobacco products. That was a problem for the large number of children that had begun to collect them. By the early 1900s, companies began to offer cards inside packages of more kid-friendly products, such as candy and caramels. And by the 1930s, the packaging of baseball cards with bubble gum became the new pairing that would last until nearly the end of the century.

While some earlier gum cards do exist, if you're looking for an unofficial start to this new era of gum-card collecting, almost all would point to the 1930s and Goudey's mammoth 1933 baseball card set.

SIZE MATTERS

Additionally, the cards represented a shift in the hobby in terms of appearance. These cards were much wider and thicker compared to most of their less-durable predecessors. Measuring 2 3/8" by 2 7/8", they presented a much different look to the narrower cards issued in the 1910s and 1920s.

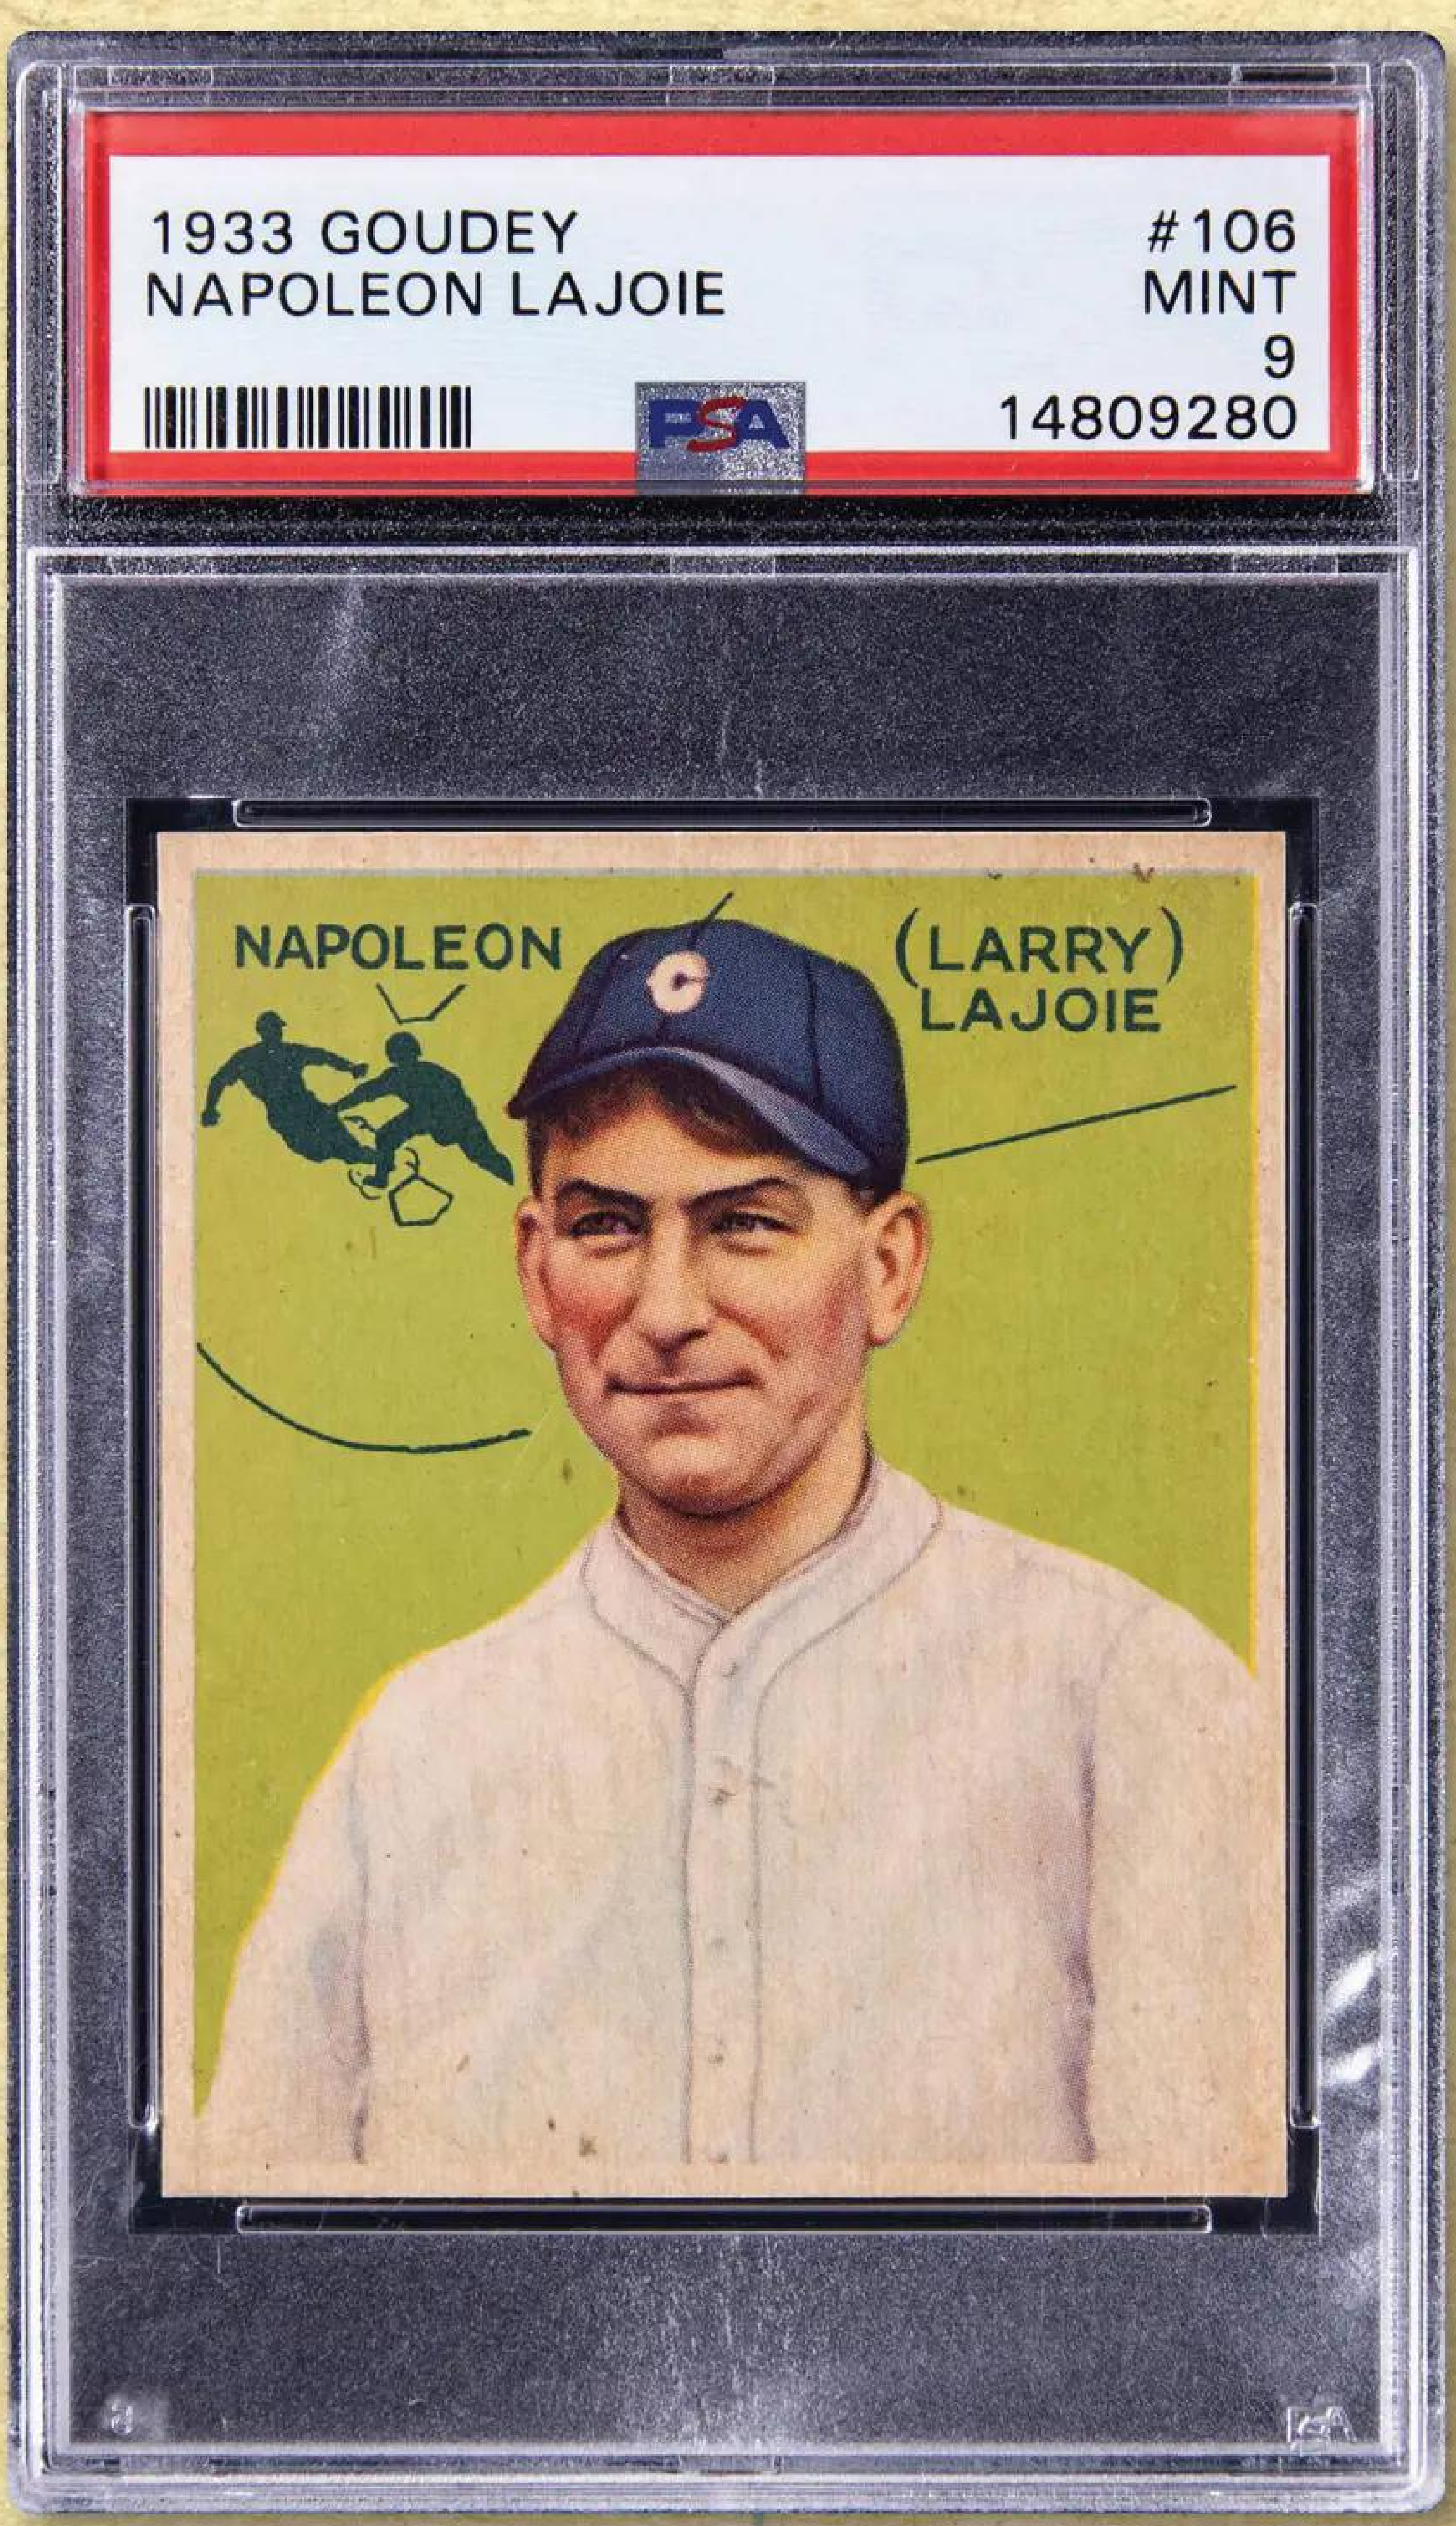
Different, too, was the set's large size in terms of quantity. At 240 cards, it was one of the most significant undertakings of the early gum card era.

Sure, some other sets had been even bigger. There's the massive N172 Old Judge set of the 19th century. And even if you ignore the numerous back variation combinations possible in the landmark T206 set, its 524 cards still more than double Goudey's 240.

But context is everything. And at the time, the Goudey set was one of the biggest baseball card releases of its era. That is especially evident in comparing it to some other popular large releases around the same time. For example, the set is considerably bigger than both of Cracker Jack's popular sets in 1914 and 1915. American Caramel's desirable but famously-inaccurate 'Set of 80' and 'Set of 120' E121 sets both had significantly less, too. And strip card sets, rampant in the 1920s, were much smaller – so much so, that the popular W514 series is heralded for its many cards, even with 'only' 120 in the set. Thus, by the time Goudey rolled out its inaugural 1933 release, its 240 cards were surely something of a marvel.

That large number of cards helped the company to assemble a checklist that was second to none. The set contained most of the major stars of the day, including Lou Gehrig, Dizzy Dean, Jimmie Foxx, Mickey Cochrane, Rogers Hornsby, Mel Ott, Carl Hubbell, and many more. But one name stands out among the rest – Babe Ruth.

GETTY IMAGES



This scarce 1933 Goudey Nap Lajoie PSA 9 Mint sold for $250,100 in a December 2023 Goldin auction.

Ruth is not graced on one or two cards like most in the set. He appears a total of four times and is the undisputed headliner, both in terms of name appeal and value. One of his cards was even famously double-printed (his full body batting pose card), which made securing a Ruth even easier at the time. Unfortunately for set collectors, the value of his cards makes building a set extremely difficult. Even most low-grade examples start in the $3,000-$5,000 range.

Complete sets do certainly exist. But it should be no mystery that the majority were built when prices were more collector-friendly.

Complete sets, by the way, is another controversial topic, thanks to a particular card belonging to Hall of Famer Nap Lajoie.

A FAMOUS OMISSION

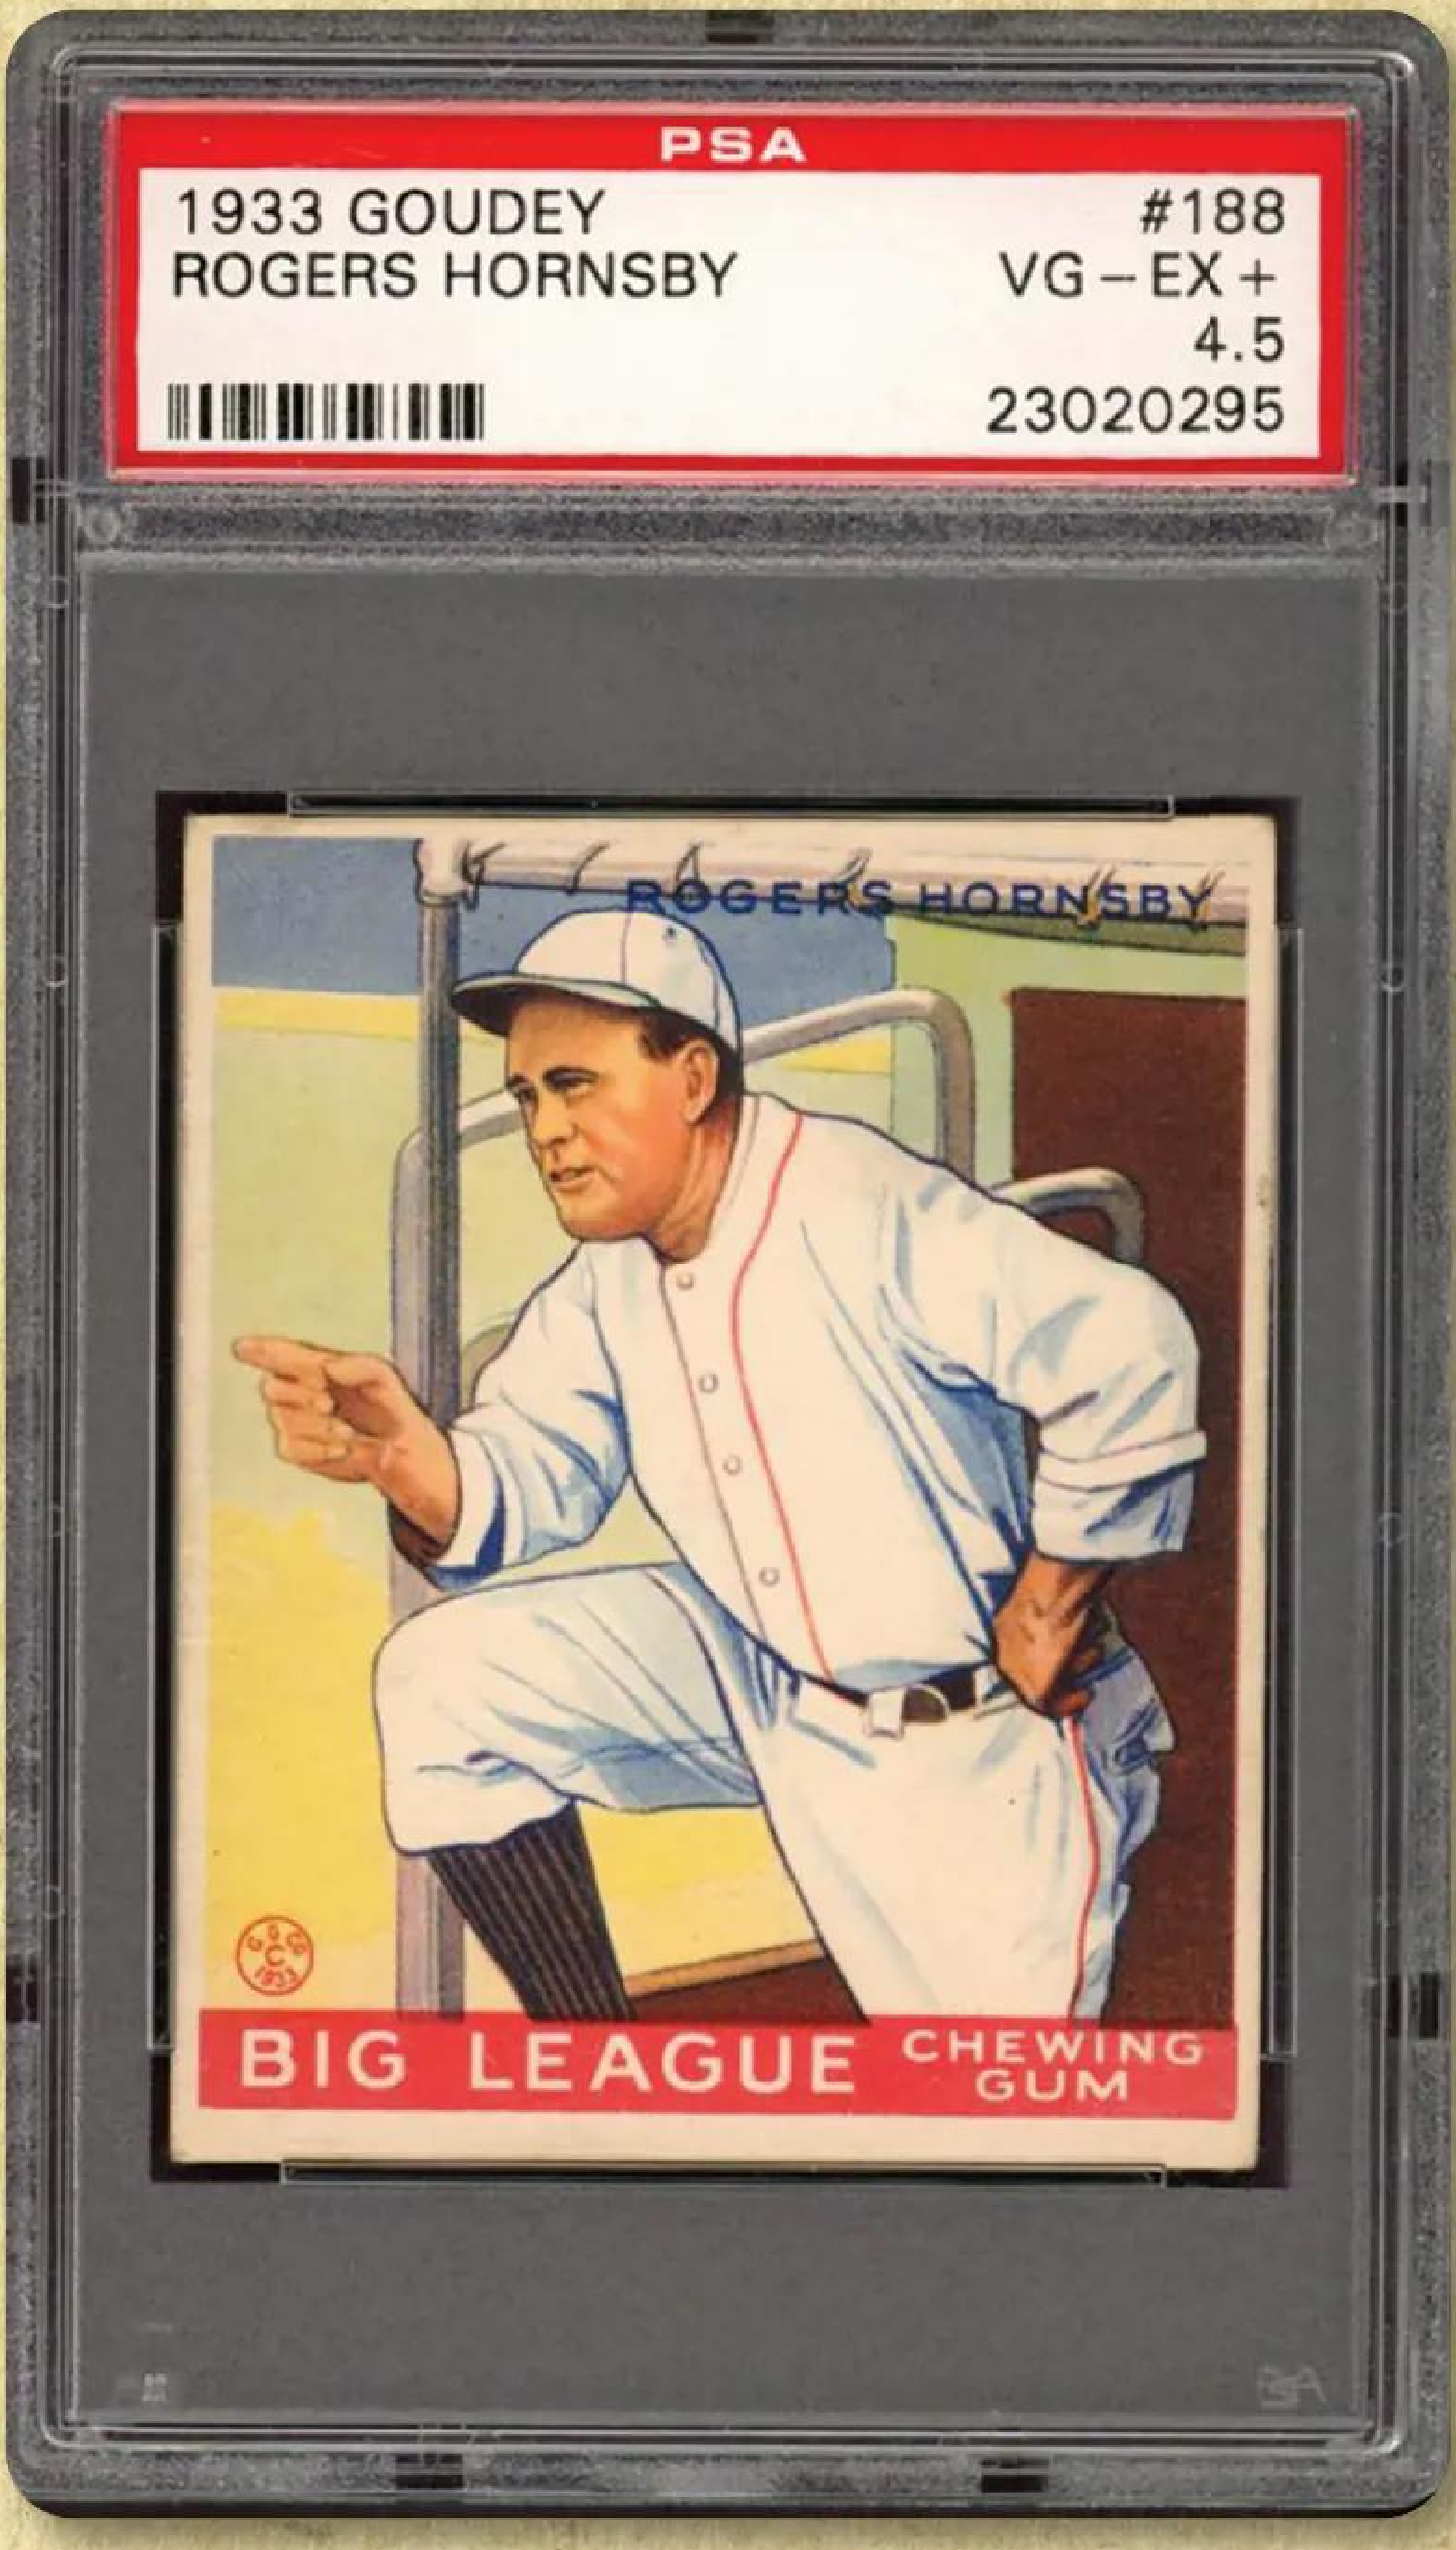
Collectors that know their baseball history understand that Lajoie's name would not have been all that relevant by 1933. It isn't because Lajoie was an insignificant player. The legend concluded his career with five batting titles and had his Cleveland team nicknamed after him as the Naps. But the Hall of Famer retired after the 1916 season and had not been an active player in nearly two decades.

Those building the set back in 1933 quickly began to notice one thing – that No. 106 was unable to be found. Some lengthy explanation might be more interesting but the simple fact is that Goudey never actually printed it.

Many have suggested that the company intentionally did not issue the card to boost sales as they knew that collectors would be purchasing more product in hopes of finding it. While that has been a popular notion, the reality is that it has never been proven. Nevertheless, collectors were, indeed, wondering how they could acquire the missing card and wrote to the company.

Whether an unintended consequence or not, Goudey ultimately relented and produced a card No. 106 as part of its printing of the 1934 set. We know this because uncut 1934 Goudey sheets with the famous card have since been discovered. And the man on card No. 106 was none other than the retired Lajoie.

Lajoie is not the only retired player in the set, so he doesn't stand alone in that regard. He is joined by fellow Hall of Famers Tris Speaker and Eddie Collins. But Lajoie's card is not only the most sought-after card in the set, it is one of the most iconic baseball cards of all time, thanks to Goudey's famous omission. The card is believed to have only been mailed to collectors that asked for it and is a rare find.



Is Lajoie's card a necessity for a complete set since it was not issued until 1934 and offered via mail instead of in packs? That's a discussion for another time. But with high-grade examples selling for more than $100,000, you'll excuse most collectors for not owning one.

BEYOND NAP LAJOIE

Thankfully, most cards in the set are much more affordable.

Some of the allure to collecting 1933 Goudey cards is that the vast majority are fairly inexpensive. Low-grade commons in the set start around $10-$20. The cards are also easy to find as Goudey did not hold back the printing presses. While it isn't known how many were printed, surviving populations are quite high.

Cards from the set are often seen at card shops and shows, even if they do not specialize in vintage material. Larger dealers can have hundreds for sale. Save for Lajoie, even the expensive cards in the set are not considered to be rare. Some have observed few quantities of some low-number cards but even those were not drastically shortprinted. To date, major third-party grading companies have combined to adjudicate more than 150,000 1933 Goudey cards in all.

Set collectors beware, though. Even if not accounting for a Lajoie when assembling a set, it is still an expensive pursuit. That is thanks largely to Ruth's four cards, but there are others in the set that are costly.

Specifically, the pair of cards of Ruth teammate and Hall of Famer Lou Gehrig present another stumbling block. Low-grade Gehrig cards generally start in the $1,500-$2,000 range and, frustratingly, the cards are not even really different. The same batting pose of Gehrig is found on both as is the regurgitated biography appearing on the back. The only real difference is in the card numbers – one is No. 92 while the other is No. 160. Judging by population reports of graded cards, card No. 160 appears to be much rarer. However, the two cards still seem to sell for roughly the same amount.

Those aspiring to complete a set are also not granted much of a reprieve because of the set's size. With 240 cards, there are many other Hall of Famers and stars included with several selling for more than $100, even in low-grade condition. Low-grade cards of Ott and Hornsby, for example, routinely sell in the $200-$400 range while Dean usually tops $500.

Even some cards of non-stars command strong interest. Catcher Moe Berg was not heralded as a star player, but his cards are bought and sold as if he were a Hall of Famer since he later became a U.S. spy. Cards of fellow catcher Benny Bengough are also a hot commodity, particularly in nicer condition. His card was No. 1 in the set and a difficult find in nicer shape.

The set's popularity is also boosted as one of the earliest targets for autograph collectors.

Earlier cards certainly have been signed. In particular, while rare, autographed 1909-11 T206 cards are well documented. However, signed 1933 Goudey cards are much easier to come by with major third-party grading companies having authenticated more than 2,000.

Signed 1933 Goudey cards are not your run-of-the-mill items that you will find everywhere. But they are not really scarce, either. That is helped by the fact that several of the players lived into the 1980s, 1990s, and even 2000s as card and autograph collecting became more popular. Star player Frankie Crosetti, for example, was one that made it into the 21st century, passing away in 2002 at the age of 91.

Autograph collectors should beware, though. Some of these cards have been known to be forged and others have been signed on reprint cards.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END

Where did Goudey go from here? While its first set is still regarded as one of the hobby's all-time greats, unfortunately, its period of dominance was short-lived. Baseball gum card sets from other companies were created while Goudey began offering smaller sets produced in fewer quantities. As a whole, Goudey's later cards appear to be their rarer ones and the company scaled back its baseball card venture quickly.

Its 1934 and 1935 offerings even utilized much of the same artwork from the 1933 set. Some may suggest that was Goudey's way of recognizing the popularity of that initial 1933 offering. But likely, it was more about the great expense required to produce new artwork for cards

– an investment that Goudey may not have been willing to make, given they were printing fewer baseball cards as the years passed.

By 1937, the company began to shift to other baseball-themed products and Goudey would see its importance diminished with the emergence of Gum, Inc.'s popular Play Ball cards beginning in 1939. In 1941, Goudey would issue its final set – a haphazard collection of 33 oft-miscut cards that is almost always referred to as the company's worst output.

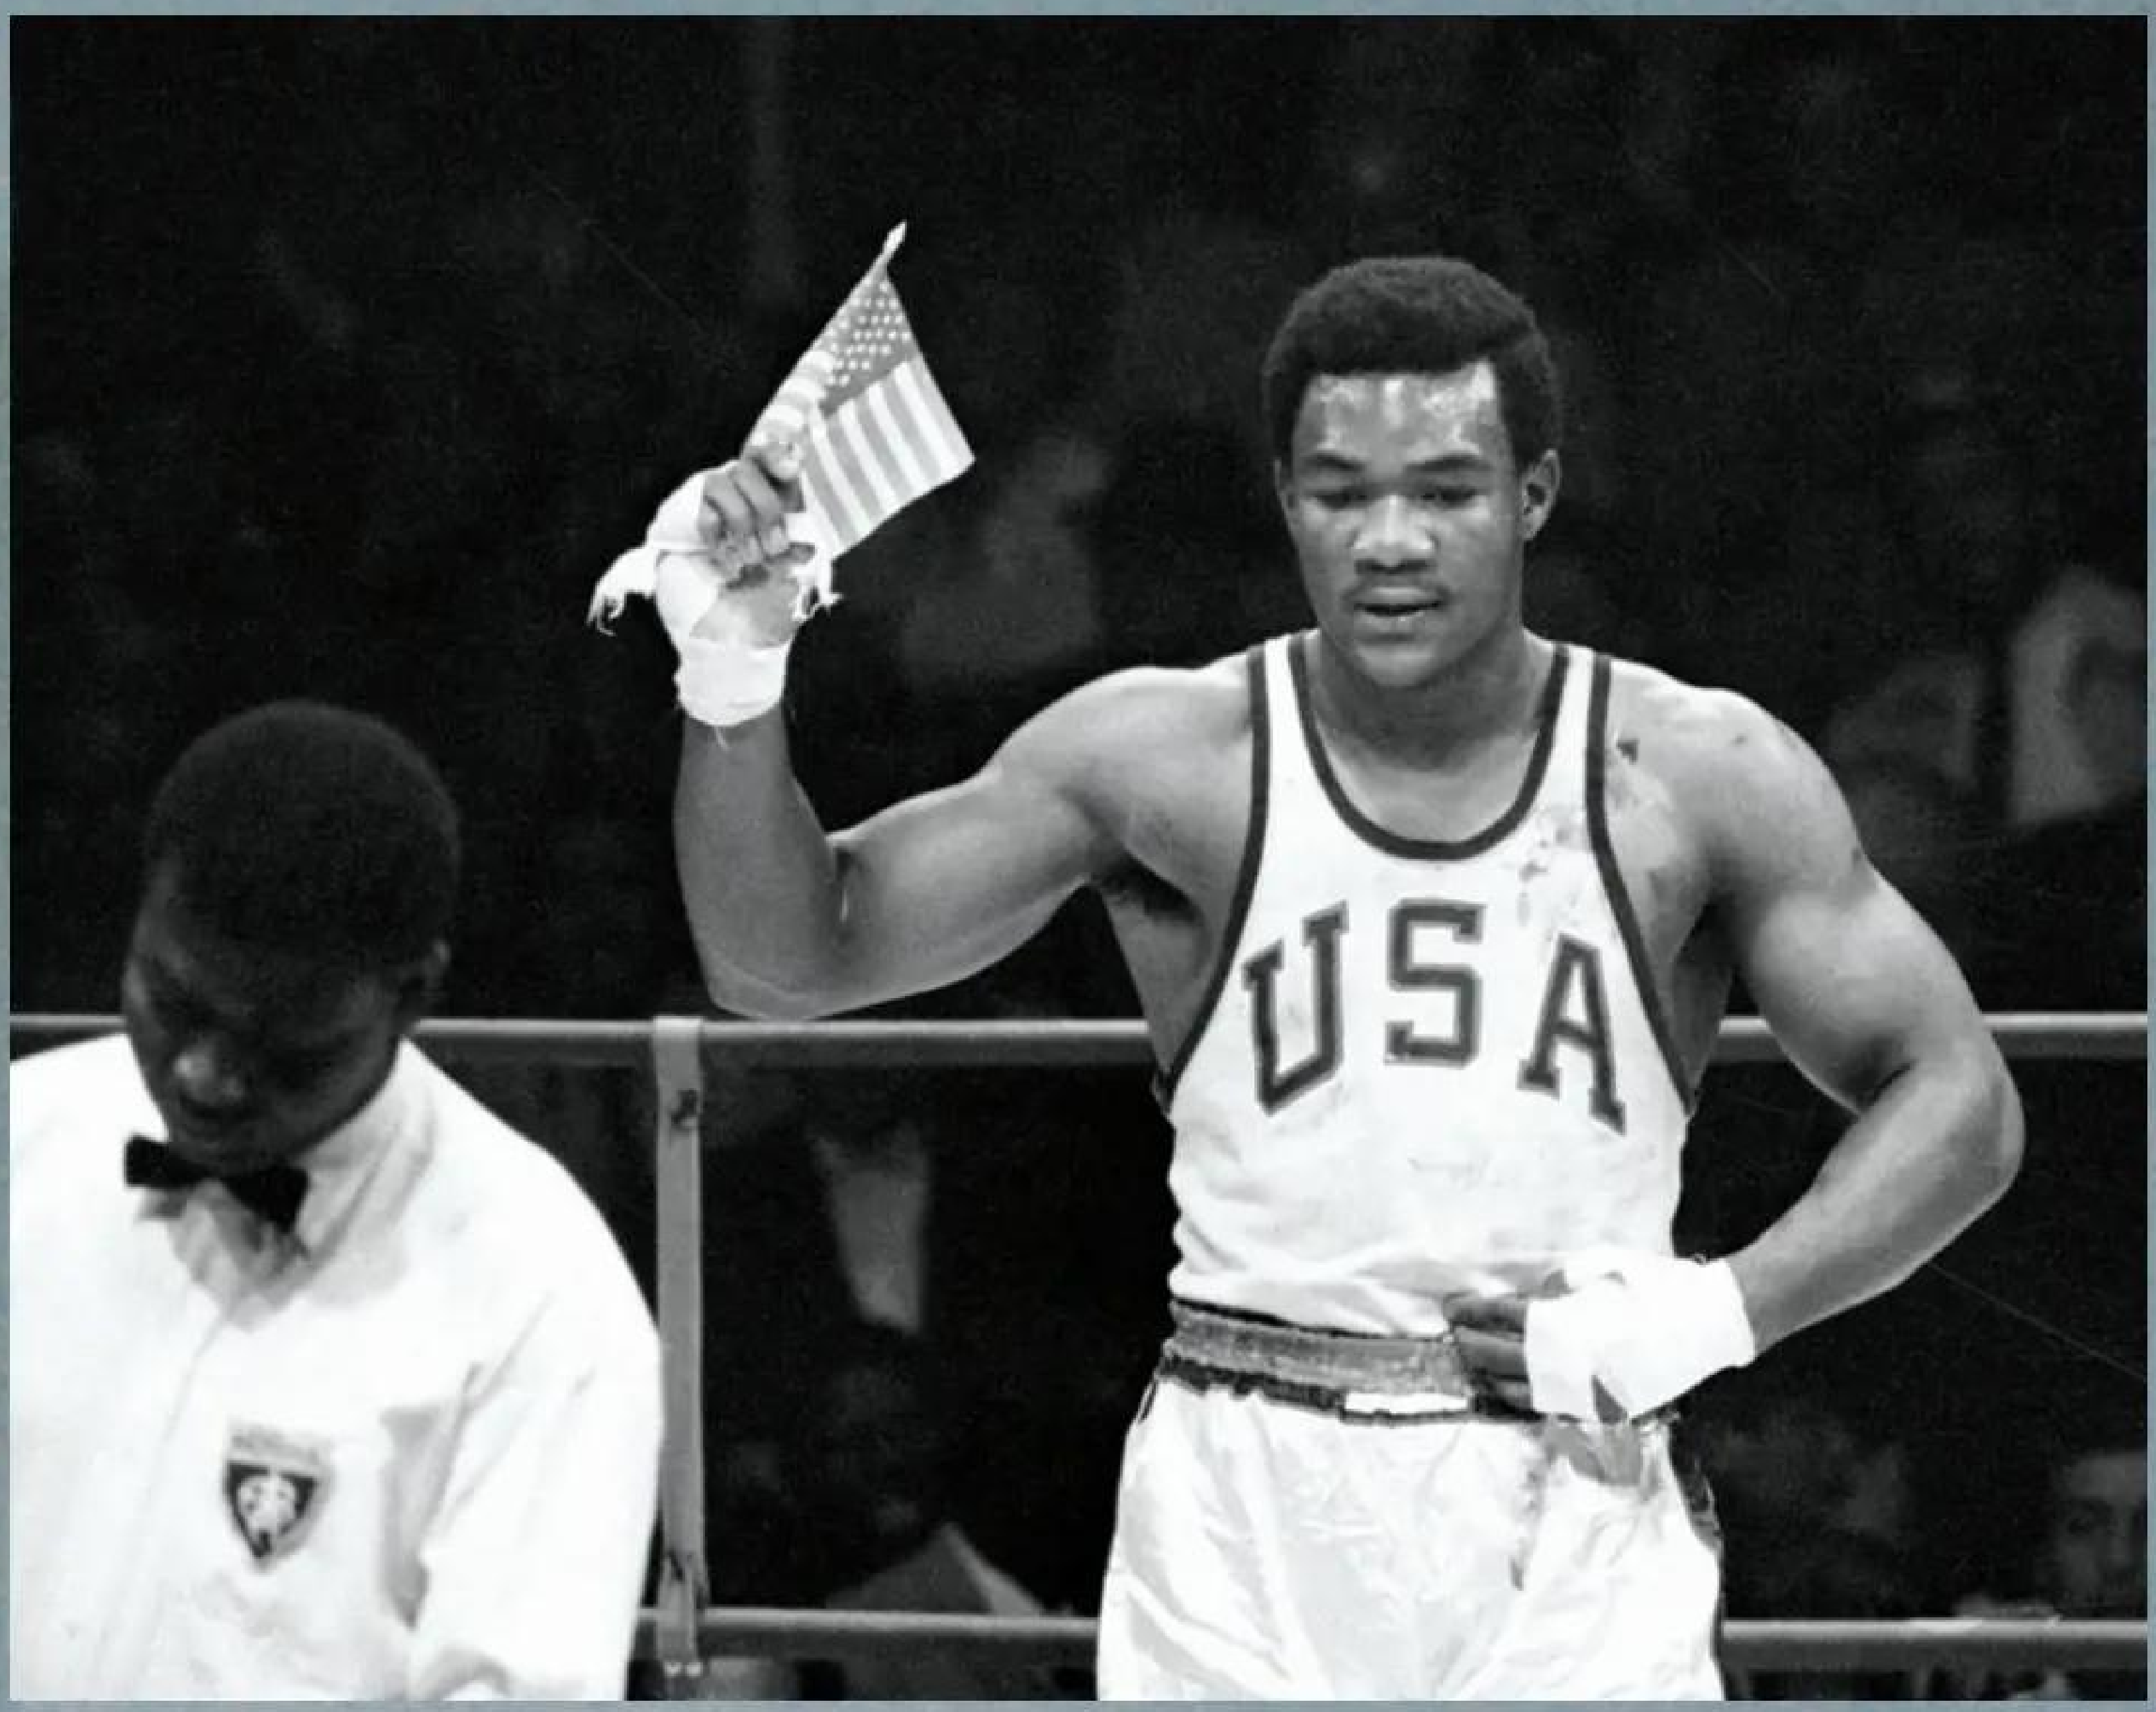
Despite the challenge of building a complete set, it is easy to see why it remains popular nearly a century after its creation. The cards feature beautiful, clean artwork and look stunning, even in only modest condition. Add an impressive checklist that includes multiple cards of the biggest names in the sport, and you have a set that lives up to its reputation.

Undertaking a complete 1933 Goudey set build will be too challenging for most, which is a real shame given its importance. However, the set remains a popular one because there is a little something here for everyone, from cards that are very affordable to the shortprinted Lajoie rarity, which eludes even the most seasoned collectors.

PAYING RESPECTS

GEORGE FOREMAN

JANUARY 10, 1949 – MARCH 21, 2025



At 19, Foreman won the Olympic gold medal in the heavyweight division in 1968.

Two-time heavyweight boxing champion George Foreman won a title at age 24 and again shocked the world when he regained the title at age 45 and 299 days, by knocking out Michael Moorer – becoming the oldest heavyweight champion in history.

Foreman won his first heavyweight title by defeating Joe Frazier in 1973.

Maybe the most famous fight Foreman came in the Rumble in the Jungle bout with Muhammad Ali in Zaire in 1974. Foreman, then 25, was upset by Ali via eighth-round knockout. Three years later, Foreman called it a career in the ring. Among other things, he became an ordained minister in Texas.

But he returned, and in that 1994 title bout vs. Moorer, Foreman landed a two-punch combination that dropped the younger fighter.

Foreman's boxing career took off at 19 when he won an Olympic gold medal in 1968 Summer Games. The next year, he turned pro.

Foreman signed on with Spectrum Brands in 1994 to promote the George Foreman Grill. The Grill has sold more than 100 million units.
